These are the cases, and all the cases, cited in the majority opinion, and we submit that it will appear by reference to the brief résumé of each case, and more clearly by an inspection of the original opinion, that none of them are cases of circumstantial evidence, except the case of Beason v. State, supra, which was twice reversed because the court did not give a charge on circumstantial evidence. The opinion of the court, too, as we conceive, overlooks this distinction. In the cases where it is said there was such juxtaposition in respect to the offense charged as to relieve the court of the necessity of a charge on circumstantial evidence, the nearness of the defendant was shown both in respect to the place of the homicide as well as the time at which the offense was committed. Here the body of the deceased and his death was not discovered for many hours—six or seven at least—after the firing of the fatal shot as testified to by the witnesses. It is not shown, except as an inference, that the deceased was in the room when the shot was fired. It is shown that he was in his room a short time before the firing of the shot, and it is shown that his dead body was lying on his couch many hours thereafter. It is not shown that the persons who fired the shot in the window knew the exact spot where he slept, or could see his body, or knew they had killed him. While the circumstances may point, as I believe they do, very strongly to the fact that he was shot through the window on the east side of the house, after all, strong as the evidence is, it cannot be denied, I think, that it was circumstantial. It is not the weakness or strength of the testimony which required the court to give a charge on circumstantial evidence. It is the character of the testimony, and not its quantum; and whether in any given case the evidence is weak or strong does not in any sense change the rule. This is abundantly demonstrated and sustained by all of the authorities. It will be unnecessary to quote many of them. We shall make liberal extracts from a few of the cases, so as to illustrate our views and support our position.

Among the earliest cases is that of Puryear v. State, 28 Tex. App. 78. In that case our Brother Brooks had the honor to be counsel. The testimony of the state rested largely upon the evidence of Essie Puryear. After stating that the appellant was the father of the child, and that no one was present or lived in the house except Puryear, she then states: "On the morning of the 13th day of March, A. D. 1888, I gave birth to a child. It was near daylight, and no one was present but defendant. I told him, before the birth of the child, that I couldn't stand it by myself; but he said I could stand it without some one, as well as with them. While I was giving birth to the child, the defendant pressed on my knees, and he delivered the child. There were three rooms to my house; one room being upstairs, and two downstairs. The child was born downstairs in the front room. After he delivered the child, he went to the fireplace to get a string to tie the cord. The baby cried, and I called the defendant to come and tie the cord. He then came and took the child upon his left arm, and took it out of the room into the side room, and I heard him pouring water on something, and then he came back into my room, and I asked him where the child was, and he said he had it 'out there all right.' I asked him where, and he replied, 'Out there in the water.' The defendant then made up a fire, went into the side room, and returned with the child between some wood. I saw it, and asked him what he was going to do with it, and he said he would burn it. He then put the wood and baby into the fire, and I said, 'Oh, John, don't do that.' The child did not make any noise, and had made none since he had carried it out of the room. I had heard him pouring the water out in the side room after he took the child out there. When defendant threw the child and wood in the fire, and I said, 'Oh, John, don't do that,' he did not make any reply, but turned towards me and smiled. I was flooding at the time, was very weak, and said nothing else about the child at the time. After a little I told defendant to get me some water—that I was flooding. He kept a large fire all day, and kept the door shut and the window curtains down. It was a warm morning, and defendant was in his shirt sleeves. His shirt was patched at the elbow. The shirt was originally blue, but had faded until you could not tell its color. He kept this shirt on until Sunday morning, when he pulled it off. He got some blood on the left sleeve of his shirt close to the wrist." Here was juxtaposition, presence, participation, everything, except that the witness was in one room and the child was in the other at the time of the murder, but a moment intervening. It lacked nothing of being positive evidence, except to see the bloody murder with her own eyes, and yet in that case it was held that a charge on circumstantial evidence should have been given. In the course of the opinion Judge Hurt uses this language: "It will be readily perceived that, if killed at all, the child must have been drowned or burned to death; the circumstances tending strongly to show that its death, if it was killed, was caused by drowning. If drowned, we have a case resting purely upon circumstantial evidence. If burned to death, we have a case of positive evidence; assuming that the child was living when placed on the fire. If it was not living when placed on the fire, then the theory that it was burned to death is not in the case, except as the fact that the body was thus disposed of may tend to show express malice, assuming that defendant had murdered the child by drowning it. Back, then, to the question as to the methods by which the child was killed. If drowned, then a case of circumstantial evidence. The facts demonstrate this proposition. Being a case of circumstantial evidence, the rules applicable to such a case should have been given in charge to the jury. This was not done, though such instructions were prepared and requested to be given by counsel for defendant. This was error, unless it is absolutely certain that the child was burned to death. Was this the case? By no means, for the proof tends more strongly to show that it was drowned. Essie Puryear does not state that the child was living when placed on the fire. If the child was living when placed on the fire, this fact is established by circumstances; and hence we have a case of circumstantial evidence upon either theory relied upon by the state. But let us concede, for the argument, that the circumstances—the facts—were in such juxtaposition that they amount to positive proof that the child was burned to death, still the theory that it was drowned might have been adopted by the jury, and the defendant convicted upon that theory, without proper instructions upon the rule applicable to a case depending upon circumstantial evidence." This case has been frequently referred to with approval, and was in express terms approved in the case of Leftwich v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 490, 31 S. W. 385.

Another case illustrating the same view is that of Trijo v. State, 45 Tex. Cr. R. 127, 74 S. W. 546. To insure accuracy we quote from the statement contained in the opinion the substance of the criminating testimony. It is as follows: "Celestina Aguillar states that she knew defendant and deceased; that defendant came to her house about 2 o'clock on the morning deceased was killed, and asked her to open the door, which she refused. He then forced his way into the house, grabbed, and tried to slap witness, and for a little while was striking at witness. She caught him, and held him, and heard two or three persons approaching the house. Deceased came to the door, knocked, and said, 'Celestina, Celestina,' and defendant did not want witness to answer, and was angry. She told him that her mouth was her own, and that she would answer. Deceased opened the door, came in, and asked for a drink of mescal. Defendant raised the mosquito bar and stood up. She informed deceased she had no mescal, and defendant told deceased to get out of the room in an angry voice; and deceased kept asking for mescal. Defendant then went to the door, stood, and said to deceased, 'You stay with the whore; she has her customers that visit her at midnight;' and then took his departure. Deceased remained in the room, asking for a drink. Witness begged him to leave, informing him that defendant was a very bad man; that she knew him well, and that he would return and do some injury. Deceased went to the door, and told some one outside to go away, and that he was going to stay; and witness entreated deceased to leave also. Finally deceased concluded to leave, and went out of the door. Witness immediately shut and tied the door with a rope, which defendant had cut. She was very sleepy, having been up two nights without sleep, and had come in on the train from Mexico, and immediately threw herself on the bed and went to sleep. She was aroused by a pistol shot near the window, where her bed was situated. She got up from the bed, and saw defendant at the window. He remarked to her, 'Hist, Celestina; be careful not to say that I did it.' Smoke was coming in through the shutters of the window. She did not see any arms about defendant. He had changed his coat since he had left her house and before the shooting. Upon his making the remark to her, he went away. Witness aroused her daughter, who began blowing the police whistle. After blowing the police whistle, witness De La Rose and Rodriguez came to the house and asked what had happened, and witness informed them that defendant had fired a shot." Here there was motive, jealousy, anger, a pistol shot, the smoke of a pistol in the presence of the defendant, and a dead man, with but slight suggestion that the murder could have been committed by anybody else, and putting Trijo in close juxtaposition to the murder, both with respect to time and place, with the strongest possible evidence of motive. Yet the witness did not in fact see the shot fired and the man killed. It lacked only this of making the testimony positive, and not circumstantial. On this question our present Presiding Judge uses this language: "It is also seriously contended that the case was one of circumstantial evidence, and exception is reserved because the court did not charge the law applicable to this character of case. Where an issue in a case is left in doubt by the evidence, that doubt should always be solved in favor of the accused. If the presumption of innocence and reasonable doubt mean anything, it is of a peculiar force at this particular point. The facts should never be resolved in favor of guilt or against reasonable doubt by the trial court in submitting a charge upon the law. While it is true that the circumstances may be so close and cogent, throwing the accused in such juxtaposition with the main fact that it may not require a charge upon circumstantial evidence, yet, when the facts are in doubt upon this theory, it is the safer and sounder rule to charge in regard to circumstantial evidence. In order to justify the trial court in not charging upon this phase of the law, it must be taken as certain, first, that the witness Aguillar testified truthfully, and, growing out of that, secondly, that appellant was at the window as testified by her, and, thirdly, that his remark to her was a confession to the killing. While these conclusions of the court may or may not be proper deductions from the testimony, still we do not believe it of sufficient cogency to exempt it from the rules of circumstantial evidence, or bring it within the rules of positive evidence to the exclusion of the law of circumstantial evidence. Upon another trial the court should give this phase of the law." If the doctrine is correct, as is stated, that the facts should never be resolved in favor of guilt or against reasonable doubt by the trial court in submitting a charge upon the law, on what theory or by what reasoning appellant was denied a charge on circumstantial evidence in this case is not apparent.

Again, take the case of Guerrero v. State, 46 Tex. Cr. R. 445, 80 S. W. 1001. The facts in that case and the opinion in respect to them are thus stated by Judge Davidson: "A serious question in the case is the omission of the court to charge the law applicable to circumstantial evidence. Witness Will McCombs, nephew of the alleged owner, testified that while riding in the Irvine pasture he heard four shots, and after a short interval of time another. After hearing the five shots, he hitched his horse, and walked half a mile to near where he heard the shots. He came in sight of defendant hanging up a pig in the fork of a mesquite bush some 2½ or 3 feet high. Witness hid in the brush. After hanging the hog up, defendant went in the direction of witness, and when within about 50 yards worked the lever of his gun several times. He did not stoop down or pick up anything from the ground. He then passed within about 30 steps of witness, and went in the direction of his home. Witness examined the pig and recognized it as his uncle's. The pig weighed about 30 pounds. He informed his uncle of these matters, and they returned to the Irvine pasture, where, the alleged owner testified, he found the hog hanging in the fork of the mesquite bush. It was dead, and was killed by a gunshot. From this point they trailed a track. The sheriff arrested appellant the following day, and en route to jail carried him to the point designated by the witness McCombs, and there fitted the shoe appellant was wearing in the track found upon the ground, which corresponded exactly. How long it was between the cessation of the four shots, as mentioned by witness Will McCombs, and the firing of the fifth shot, or how long after the firing of the fifth shot before he hitched his horse and went in the direction of where he heard the shots, is left to conjecture. The distance is stated to be about one-half mile. Coming in sight of appellant, witness stopped, and recognized him as being the man he saw hanging the hog in the mesquite bush. It is further shown that the hog was shot, and that appellant had a Winchester with him. There is unquestioned evidence, also, that there was a Mexican at appellant's residence, who wore a shoe corresponding exactly with that worn by appellant. This evidence is from the state's witnesses. It is contended by appellant that this case depends purely on circumstantial evidence, and required the court to submit that phase of the law. The state contends that the facts placed appellant in such close proximity and juxtaposition that the court was justified in not charging this phase of the law. There are some authorities in this state which sustain the state's contention. But we are of opinion that the facts of these cases place the relation of the accused more nearly to the immediate act relied upon by the state than does the testimony in this record. While the fact that appellant was seen hanging the hog in a bush, and that he had a gun, and that the hog was shot, might be cogent circumstances tending to prove his guilt, yet it is a deduction and must be an inference from these facts that would justify the jury in concluding he shot the pig. We are therefore of opinion that the facts were not of sufficient cogency in their nearness and proximity to the immediate transaction to relieve the court of the duty of charging the law of circumstantial evidence."

Especially noticeable is the following language in this opinion: "While the fact that appellant was seen hanging the hog in a bush, and that he had a gun, and that the hog was shot, might be cogent circumstances tending to prove his guilt, yet it is a deduction and must be an inference from these facts that would justify the jury in concluding he shot the pig." On the general proposition that the whole case here, and this without reference to who fired the fatal shot, makes it a case of circumstantial evidence under the authorities, could be demonstrated, as I believe, by the citation of innumerable authorities; but the language and facts of the cases cited above would seem to be sufficient to support the correctness of my opinion. But there is even stronger ground upon which the court was required to submit a charge on circumstantial evidence, and that rests on this theory: In this case there is no pretense, or claim, or hint of any statement that appellant, and not Sandoval, fired the shot which killed Judge Welch, if they did kill him. The statement is that one of them fired a shot through the east window of his residence. Which one? Can the court say? Should not the jury be left free to determine this fact under the evidence? If it be true, as our learned Presiding Judge says, that our whole criminal jurisprudence rests and must be construed with reference to the presumption of innocence and the doctrine of reasonable doubt, should it not rather be assumed that Sandoval fired the shot, in submitting the law of the case? Was appellant not entitled to a submission with reference to the presumption in his favor, and not on an assumption conclusively assuming the worse state of affairs against him? Is it not evident that, in a case where it is absolutely in doubt which of two parties fired the shot, the case is no stronger against appellant than if the positive testimony had showed that Sandoval did the shooting? Or, if this much cannot be conceded, is it not evident in any event that, in submitting the law of the case, appellant was entitled to a charge based on the theory most favorable to him and which would authorize the jury, in the event they found this theory to be true, to apply the undoubtcharged. Ordinarily, in determining whether a case is one of circumstantial evidence, it has been found that it was only one person charged, and but one of the elements suggested above entered into the question. Ordinarily the only question is: Was the shot the cause of the death, and appellant's connection with the shot shown by positive testimony, and was he the person shown to have been guilty of a criminal act? In this case, both the questions occur. In the first place, in addition to the question that, whoever fired the shot, the facts showing the killing are not positive, but if appellant did not actually fire the shot, his complicity rests alone on circumstantial evidence. Let us assume that the jury might have found that Sandoval fired the shot. Then how is appellant's guilt shown? There is no suggestion in the testimony of these Mexicans that one word was spoken by these parties; that the person who did not fire the shot raised his hand, or his voice, or did one act, or made any possible demonstration. If appellant did not fire the shot, then his guilt rests upon these circumstances: That he belonged to a political party adverse to the deceased; that he was seen in the hostile camp with Sandoval about 11 o'clock; that he was twice seen at the house of Cayetano Pena late that night; that he was traced to the window of the deceased, and was later seen by Gonzales walking along the public street—with such additional force as the jury might lend to the circumstance of his open departure for Mexico six months after the tragedy. It is not to be denied that these circumstances are indeed strong, if the testimony of Cayetano Pena and his wife is to be believed. But that the testimony is circumstantial is to my mind so demonstrably clear as to not admit of doubt.

On this question, fortunately, we are not without the benefit of the learning of many courts, and especially decisions by this court, so clear and so conclusive as that no man ought to be able to err. Among the controlling cases, and the most recent one, is that of Early v. State, 50 Tex. Cr. R. 344, 97 S. W. 83, in which the opinion was written by our Brother Brooks. In that case Jack Early and Harmie Horn were indicted for the murder of one Terrell Calloway. I want to contrast, and put, as it were, in parallel columns, the facts of the two cases. In that case Horn and Early were close friends. In this case appellant and Sandoval were strangers. In that case Early and Horn were together, not only on the night of the homicide, but were together from early in the afternoon. In that case threats were shown by Early against Calloway. In this case not a word was spoken hostile to the on the ground where the fatal difficulty occurred. In this case the same fact was proved. In that case there was an immediate flight. In this case appellant stayed for six months near the scene of the homicide, and when he did leave there was no secret of his going. Not only this, but the witnesses say in the Early Case that two men were seen near where Calloway lay. Let us quote the record: "Nelson had retired and gone to sleep, and was aroused by a noise on the outside. The first thing he heard was some one saying: 'That will do. Let him up.' He then looked out of his window, and saw the bulk of men out some distance from the office, one standing up and another in a low position. The man standing up was moving about a little, and he could tell that it was a man. The other object, in the low position, he could not tell whether it was one or two men at that time." The evidence in this case showed, as the record puts it, that Calloway had been literally cut to pieces. The evidence in respect to the weapons was as follows: "Appellant and Horn were each shown to have owned a large springback knife, with blades three or four inches long." Again, we find the following statement fixing Early undoubtedly on the scene: "Appellant was shown to have worn on the night of the difficulty a hat with a yellow leather hatband." The evidence further shows that the struggle extended over a space of ground 20 or 25 feet in length and from 4 to 8 feet wide, and, further, that the leather hatband of appellant was found upon the ground where the evidence of the struggle was shown. This further statement appears in the record: "The feeling of appellant toward deceased was one of malice, bitterness, and hatred." This statement also appears: "On the very night of the difficulty, while appellant and Harmie Horn were at the depot, waiting to take the train for Axtell, they had a conversation with John Stirman, in which conversation appellant used this language: 'We don't like Calloway. He has not treated us right.'" The evidence in that case further shows that at the time of the difficulty Horn was in an advanced state of intoxication, and raises some presumption that his condition was such as to render it unlikely that he had inflicted all the injuries found on Calloway's body. In that case it was urged that the court should have charged on the law of circumstantial evidence, and in passing on this assignment Judge Brooks says: "The evidence for the state shows appellant was at the scene of the homicide. This is made manifest by circumstantial evidence, as well as by appellant's confession. But there is no positive testimony of any guilty participancy by appellant in the homicide. Appellant expressly disclaims any participancy, and the fact that he assisted in the commission of the crime, if established, is by circumstantial evidence alone. This being true, it was the duty of the court to charge the law of circumstantial evidence. Jones v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 491, 30 S. W. 1059, 31 S. W. 664; Puryear v. State, 28 Tex. App. 73, 11 S. W. 929; Riley v. State, 20 Tex. App. 105; Trijo v. State, 45 Tex. Cr. R. 127, 74 S. W. 546; Beason v. State, 43 Tex. Cr. App. 442, 67 S. W. 98, 69 L. R. A. 193; Crowell v. State, 24 Tex. App. 404, 6 S. W. 318."

It will be noticed that the opinion contains the expression that "appellant expressly disclaims any participancy" in the difficulty; but it is manifest that this disclaimer could have no effect on the issue in question as to whether the law of circumstantial evidence should have been given in charge. Where the state's evidence is circumstantial, unless the killing is admitted by a defendant, the court must charge the law in respect to circumstantial evidence. How can it be contended that the disclaimer of appellant or the character of his testimony can change the law, unless, indeed, he admits the killing, when he may not and is not required to testify at all? The test must be with reference to the incriminating circumstance, and if the evidence of the state is circumstantial, and the appellant produces no testimony, the law of circumstantial evidence must be given in charge. His plea of not guilty is a denial of everything, and is in itself a disclaimer as complete and perfect, as testing the character of charge to which he is entitled, as if he had gone on the witness stand and in terms denied the killing. A careful review of the Early Case, supra, has convinced me that it is a more direct case of positive testimony than the case at bar; and how it can be held that the Early Case must be reversed on account of the failure of the court to charge on circumstantial evidence, and yet in the Cabrera Case held that a charge on circumstantial evidence is not required to be given and is a case to be affirmed, is something that I confess with, I hope, becoming humility, and certainly in all candor, that I do not understand. If in the realm of mind and morals a theodolite could be constructed with needle as fine as the spider's most attenuated thread, no finite mind can draw a possible distinction between the two cases to the disadvantage of the appellant here. The holding of the court in the Early Case was not new. Judge Brooks was but following the decisions of this court and our Supreme Court from the time when both he and I were infants in arms, and as authority for his action refers to and reaffirms the Puryear case, supra. It is the universal rule that where, on a trial for homicide, the evidence of the accused's presence at the scene of the crime was, aside from such presence, circumstantial, and his participation in the crime was established by circumstantial evidence alone, the refusal to charge on circumstantial evidence is erroneous.

Among the early cases on this question is that of Burrell v. State, 18 Tex. 713. That opinion, concurred in by the surviving members of our old court, John Hemphill and Royall T. Wheeler, who with Judge Lipscomb, were the Dii Majores of our judiciary, judges worthy to rank with Mansfield, Hardwicke, and Holt of England, and with Marshall, Cooley, and Sharkey of our own country, a court that has added luster to our civilization, and whose decisions have been the inspiration, as they have been the foundation, of most that is good in the annals that have followed them. If we might imagine the time when Macaulay's traveler from New Zealand should stand on London Bridge and view the ruins of St. Paul, the virtues, as the performances, of these men will stand in vigor, unabated and in glory unobscured. The opinion in this case by Judge Wheeler is the same doctrine and the same rule contended for by Judge Brooks in the Puryear Case, and later laid down by him in the Early Case. What are the facts? James Burrell and James R. Burns were jointly indicted. The evidence shows, in brief, that these parties came to the house of Elizabeth Ewell, in San Felipe, on the day of the homicide, and were served with dinner; that while at this house Bird, the deceased, came in, and some conversation ensued in which Burns asked Bird if he was about to travel, to which he replied that he was, and then asked him which way he was going, and Bird replied, "Up the county towards La Grange," and Burns said, "We are going that route," and invited Bird to go with them, and suggested that they travel together, which seemed to be agreeable. It seems about 3 o'clock the next morning Bird was brought back to her house wounded, and made to Mrs. Ewell a dying declaration, from which we quote the following: "On the Saturday following, she asked Bird who shot him. He said James Burrell shot him, and then said, 'Come close to me, and I will tell you all about it.' He said: 'We had no quarrel. He (Bird) was riding behind. They said, 'Ride up, Bird; don't be afraid.' He rode up. One said, 'Are you armed?' 'No; I never pack arms.' One said, 'Defend yourself,' and as he turned his head Burrell shot him (about seven miles above San Felipe, near the cross timber in Austin county)." Bird died about the 15th of August, 1854. On the Thursday that Bird was so happy, he asked them if they would not believe what a dying man would say. Bird said he told the men he was traveling with his name, and they told him their names. The names they gave were James Burrell and James Burns. Bird said, when he was shot, he wheeled his horse, and ran towards San Felipe, and fell off his horse. He said just arrived. I know Bird said James Burrell shot him." It appears by the testimony of other witnesses that Bird made use of the following language: "I shall die, and two men riding with me shot me." Again, the following appears from the testimony of Woodson F. Washam: "Bird was sensible; knew me; said he thought he should die; said Burrell and Burns shot him." The last two expressions, to the effect that Bird had declared that the two men had shot him, in the light of the opinion of the court, must have been construed as to be a mere opinion or conclusion of the witness, and that his statement to Elizabeth Ewell that James Burrell shot him was the correct statement of the actual transaction. Burrell and Burns traveled together, and were found together after the homicide. Now, here we have the fact of Burrell and Burns being together, when Bird appears. Deceased (Bird) travels with them at Burns' request. Burns is present when the shot is fired and the man is killed. Burns continues with Burrell after the homicide, and is found with him more than once thereafter. His presence at the time of the homicide is shown. That Bird was with them when he was killed, at Burns' invitation, is abundantly established by positive testimony. Both Burrell and Burns were tried together. They were both convicted. As to Burns an instruction on the law of circumstantial evidence was requested and refused. The judgment of conviction as to Burrell was affirmed, and that as to Burns was reversed, for the reason that the court did not give, as it should have given, a charge on the law of circumstantial evidence. The opinion of Judge Wheeler in that case is so clear and convincing on this question that we insert it entire:

"But it is not so clear that there is not error both in the refusal of instructions and in the charge of the court in reference to the case of the defendant Burns. If he be guilty, it is as a principal in the second degree, being present, aiding and abetting the commission of the homicide. To constitute the crime of which the evidence tends to convict him, there must have been a participation on his part in the act. If he was cognizant of the intention of his codefendant, and, being present, was consenting, and it was but the carrying out of a common design, he is guilty equally with him who committed the deed; and upon this subject the general principle is correctly stated in the charge of the court. But, in order to implicate him in the crime, he must have been aware of the intention of his companion to commit it. His bare presence is not sufficient. For, although a man be present whilst a felony is committed, if he take no part in it, and do

Roscoe, Cr. Ev. 213; Whart. Am. Cr. L. 6364; Whart. L. Homicide, 157. Whether he was aware of the intention of his companion and participated in it was the fact to be proved, in order to implicate him in the criminality of the act. That as to him, was the factum probandum, upon the proof of which his conviction must rest; and as to that the evidence was wholly circumstantial. There was no positive proof that he was aware of the intention of his companion, or that he committed any overt act at the time, manifesting a criminal intention on his part. His presence was not, of itself, sufficient to inculcate him. It was not, per se, evidence of guilt, or of any force as proof, only as considered with other circumstances conducing to prove his guilt. It was not the main fact to be proved; for, of itself, it did not imply any criminality. But his presence and companionship, and his conduct at and before and after the commission of the act, were circumstances from which the main fact of his participation in the criminal intention and design of his companion was to be inferred. It is plain, therefore, that as to his guilt the evidence was wholly circumstantial. Although joined with the other defendant upon the trial, he was entitled to a distinct consideration of the evidence in his case, and to have the law applicable to it given in charge to the jury. All the instructions asked respecting the legal tests of the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence to warrant a conviction were refused; and the charge of the court did not affirm in any distinct proposition, or embrace in substance, the instructions refused, or inform the jury what is the proper test of the sufficiency of such evidence. The fifth and twelfth instructions were rightly refused; the former, because not correct in the abstract, and the latter, because of the assumption which it contains that there was no evidence in the case tending to show that Burns was privy to the intention of Burrell. The first and second, though not liable to the same objections, and though expressed in the language of a learned and philosophical elementary treatise, were not well adapted to the comprehension of a jury; and we do not hold that it was error to refuse them, in the form in which they were propounded. Mr. Starkie and other elementary writers have undertaken to define, and doubtless have defined, with all the precision and accuracy the subject is susceptible of, the tests of the legal sufficiency of circumstantial evidence. But it is finally admitted that the circumstances which will amount to sufficient proof of a disputed fact can never be previously defined. In their nature they can never be matter of general definition. The only legal test of which they are susceptible is their plaintiff appeals. Reversed. Motion for rehearing overruled.

Charles Crenshaw and Wilkins & Vinson, for appellant. Cecil Smith-Farrar & Pier-son, Freeman & Batsell, and Silas Hare, for appellees.

RAINEY, C. J. Arthur Little brought this action against W. W. Forbes, sheriff of Ellis county, and two of his deputies, Moore and Maggart, and H. S. Rich, sheriff of Grayson county, and his deputy, Biggerstaff, and the chief of police of the city of Sherman, W. H. DeSpain, for false arrest and imprisonment and malicious prosecution. Plaintiff alleges, in substance: That on November 24, 1906, a complaint for burglary was sworn to by J. M. Maggart in Ellis county and filed with a justice of the peace upon which said justice issued a warrant of arrest addressed to any sheriff or constable of Ellis county, and on same day plaintiff was arrested by Biggerstaff, deputy, and DeSpain, chief of police aforesaid, without having said warrant in their possession, or the same having been transferred to either of them, and he was incarcerated in the Grayson county jail and from there conveyed to Ellis county by W. H. Forbes and his deputy, Lee Moore, and there lodged in jail, but, having been advised that he was not the man wanted, he was soon discharged and said complaint formally dismissed. That on March 12, 1907, plaintiff was indicted by the grand jury of Ellis county for said crime of burglary at the instigation or by the procurement of W. H. Forbes, in which he was aided and abetted by some or all of the other defendants. On this indictment a capias was issued which came to the hands of W. H. Forbes, and under his direction plaintiff was again arrested and imprisoned in Grayson county jail by said H. S. Rich, and was by him delivered to said Forbes or one of his deputies, who took him to Ellis county and then imprisoned him in the jail of that county, where he remained until discharged under a writ of habeas corpus in March, 1907. Said charge was finally dismissed. That the defendants conspired together to do the things above recited, and said indictment was procured for an unlawful purpose and to further their private ends, etc. Defendants pleaded general and special exceptions, general denial, and justification under a warrant. A trial was had and the court instructed a verdict for defendants, which was accordingly returned, and a judgment rendered thereon.

The first assignment complains of the court for excluding the introduction of a letter offered as evidence by plaintiff. Said letter is as follows: "The State of Texas, County of Ellis. W. H. Forbes, Sheriff. Tom McKee, Jailer. J. M. Maggart, J. V. Forbes, Tom Morgan, Ennis, Deputies. Waxahachie, Texas, Mar. 13, 1907. H. S. Rich, Sheriff, Sherman, Texas—Dear Sir: I herewith enclose capias for my friend, Arthur Little. Please do him the kindness to lock him up and wire me. He may rest assured that we are going to entertain him here on his little burglary charge, and when you get ready to go to trial let me know. Yours to command, W. H. Forbes, Sheriff." This letter was not written by Forbes, but by Sweatt, his office deputy. Forbes testified that Sweatt did most of his correspondence, and had authority to sign his name to letters and checks; did not ask Sweatt to write it; did not know his object in writing it; and did not know what was in it, but the capias had been sent to Grayson county under his direction. Sweatt was not a party to the suit, nor was it alleged in the petition that he was one of the conspirators or the agent of Forbes. There being no allegation of Sweatt being the agent of Forbes, or that he was one of the conspirators, or had anything to do with the arrest or prosecution, said letter was not admissible. Lewis v. Hatton, 86 Tex. 538, 26 S. W. 50. The principal is not responsible for the personal malice, and expressions made by the agent indicating malice in the absence of the principal are not admissible to show the motive of the principal. Railway Co. v. Willie, 53 Tex. 318, 37 Am. Rep. 756.

There was no controversy about the capias having been sent under Forbes' direction. This was the only point upon which the letter could have been admissible, and, there being no controversy about that, it was not reversible error for the court to exclude it.

The second assignment of error complains of the court's refusal to admit as evidence a memorandum made by witness Bolin, as shown by bill of exception as follows: "On the trial of this case W. C. Bolin, a witness for plaintiff, having testified that on the 8th day of November, 1906, he was town marshal of Stonewall, then Indian Territory, he was instructed by the town recorder of Stonewall, W. T. Heard, to issue a license to Hares & Brown to show in said town from November 8 to November 11, 1906, said recorder being sick and unable himself to issue said license; that witness issued said license at the time and made the following memoranda of the issuance: 'No. 55. $2.50. Occupation License. To Hares & Brown for the occupation of show from 11-8 to 11-11, 1906. Amount of tax $5.00. Issued the 8th day of November, 1906. N. T. Heard, Recorder. W. C. Bolin'—that on the night of said November 8, 1906, witness attended said show, and on the next morning, November 9, 1906, he met the plaintiff in this case, Arthur Little, with whom he was acquainted, on the street, and told him about the show, stating that it was a good show and invited plaintiff to go with him on the night of the 9th, 1906, to said show; that the plaintiff accepted the invitation and did go with him to the show, and they sat together during the show, and when it was over left the house in which the show took place together and afterwards parted for the night, and the next morning, the 10th, 1906, he again met plaintiff on the street and they had some talk together, and among other things about the show. Said witness also testified that he made said memoranda himself, and that it is in his own handwriting, and that said memoranda is accurate, and that independent of said memoranda he could not accurately fix the date of the issuance of the license and the date that he and plaintiff attended the show together. Plaintiff then offered said memoranda in evidence, to which the defendants objected on the ground that it was immaterial, irrelevant, and hearsay, and did not tend to prove any issue in the case. The court sustained this objection and refused to allow said memoranda to be read to the jury." The statement of facts shows that Bolin testified that plaintiff was in Stonewall on the 8th, 9th, and 10th of November, 1906, and refreshed his memory from said memorandum, and there were several other witnesses who testified that plaintiff was in Stonewall at that time, showing that it was impossible for him to have committed the burglary at Midlothian, Ellis county, at the time it was alleged to have been committed. Mr. Wharton, in volume 1, § 316, Ev., states the rule to be thus: "In case the witness swears to the accuracy of the memoranda or other refreshing documents, they may go to the jury as evidence, if not per se inadmissible. It is otherwise if such accuracy is not proved. But, even if inadmissible, they may be used to refresh his memory, if he knows they were accurate when made, and were made at the time of the events noted." The memorandum contained matter that had no bearing to the issues in this case and within itself was inadmissible. The witness refreshed his memory from it, and his veracity was not attacked. Railway v. Tuck (rendered by this court February 6, 1906) 116 S. W. 620. Under the circumstances there was no error in not admitting the memorandum.

Complaint is made of the court's action in giving the jury a peremptory charge to find for the defendants. The evidence shows that the first arrest and imprisonment of plaintiff by the officers of Grayson county was without authority of law. The warrant issued by the justice in Ellis county was directed to the sheriff or any constable of Ellis county, which conveyed the authority to the officers in that county to make the arrest within the limits of said county. Article 259, White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc., provides that: "When a warrant of arrest is issued by a magistrate other than a judge of the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, district or county court, it cannot be executed in another county than the one in which it issues, unless indorsed by some one of said judges, in which case it can be executed anywhere in the state; or if it be indorsed by some magistrate of the county in which the accused is found it may be executed in such county." The balance of said article prescribes the form of such indorsement, etc. As none of the requisites of said article were complied with to give vitality to said warrant in Grayson county, the officers making the arrest and those who instigated it cannot defend their action by virtue of said warrant. Sneed v. McFatrige, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 592, 97 S. W. 113. On this phase of the case we are clearly of the opinion that the court erred in instructing a verdict for all the defendants.

We are not so clear on the proposition as to the arrest and imprisonment under the indictment. Whether or not any of the defendants participated in securing the indictment, about which the testimony is not satisfactory, being actuated by malice, and having no reasonable grounds for believing that plaintiff was guilty of the offense charged, was an issue under all the facts and circumstances that could have been appropriately submitted to the jury. The question of probable cause is fully discussed in Landa v. Obert, 45 Tex. 539, McManus v. Wallis, 52 Tex. 534, Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 320, and other Texas cases, and a further discussion by us is unnecessary.

The evidence was such that the trial court should have charged the jury on the issues raised thereby, and, having failed to do so, the judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for a new trial.

On Rehearing.

The motion for rehearing calls our attention to Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 385, c. 162, amending articles 258, 259, White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc., which we overlooked, and contends that under said amendment the first arrest of appellant was not unlawful. As amended, article 258 reads: "That a warrant of arrest issued by any county or district clerk or by any magistrate (except county commissioners or commissioners' courts, mayors or recorders of an incorporated city or town) shall extend to any part of the state, and any peace officer to whom said warrant is directed or into whose hands the same has been transferred, shall be authorized to execute the same in any county in this state." The balance of said amendment has reference to the serving of warrants issued by county commissioners or commissioners' courts, mayors, or recorders of incorporated cities or towns.

We do not see that the amendment in any way should cause us to change our former holding. The warrant upon which appellees base their defense for the arrest of appellant was directed to the officers of Ellis county. There was no warrant issued to Grayson county. There was none transferred to appellees, nor did they have any in their hands at the time. Their acts in making the arrest without having a warrant for the arrest of appellant in their possession is not sanctioned by the laws of this state.

The motion for rehearing is overruled.

THIGPEN et al. v. RUSSELL et ux.†

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 14, 1909. Rehearing Denied April 29, 1909.)

1. HOMESTEAD (§ 181*)—ABANDONMENT—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

The testimony of claimants of a homestead, from which they had removed, as to their intention to return thereto, is admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. § 851; Dec. Dig. § 181.*]

2. HOMESTEAD (§ 162*)—ABANDONMENT—INTENTION.

The abandonment of a homestead by removal therefrom depends on whether the removal was with the fixed intention of not returning to the place as a home.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. §§ 815-819; Dec. Dig. § 162.*]

3. HOMESTEAD (§ 181*)—DECLARATIONS—ADMISSIBILITY.

Declarations of claimants of homestead as to their intention to return thereto are admissible on the question of abandonment, though they may be self-serving.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Dec. Dig. § 181.*]

4. HOMESTEAD (§ 181*)—ABANDONMENT—EVIDENCE—WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY.

On an issue as to the abandonment of a homestead, evidence held to show that a deed of other property upon which the claimants lived was intended to give them a life interest therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Dec. Dig. § 181.*]

5. HOMESTEAD (§ 162*)—ABANDONMENT—INTENTION.

That the claimants of a homestead received a deed of other property on which they lived does not affect the question of their abandonment of homestead, if they at all times intended not to make their home on the property when deeded to them, but to return to the former homestead.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Dec. Dig. § 162.*]

6. HOMESTEAD (§ 162*)—ABANDONMENT—INTENTION.

An offer to sell a homestead was not necessarily inconsistent with the claimants' intention to return thereto and reoccupy it as a home, if they did not sell.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Dec. Dig. § 162.*]

7. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1010*)—REVIEW—FINDINGS BY COURT.

An appellate court will not substitute different conclusions of fact for those of the trial court, where it cannot say that the findings have not sufficient evidence to support them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3979-3982; Dec. Dig. § 1010.*]

Appeal from District Court, Goliad County; James C. Wilson, Judge.

Action by P. F. Thigpen and others against

A. S. Russell and wife. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Fowler & Fowler, for appellants. G. E. Pope and J. Gus Patton, for appellees.

REESE, J. In this case appellants, heirs at law of John Thigpen, deceased, seek to have partitioned between themselves a tract of 200 acres of land, the homestead of said John Thigpen during his lifetime and at the time of his death. The defendants are Mrs. S. A. Russell, the widow of said Thigpen, and A. S. Russell, her husband. After the death of Thigpen, as the result of partition proceedings between his heirs and his widow, the 200 acres in controversy, which was the separate property of John Thigpen, was set apart to his widow as her homestead so long as she should elect to use the same as such, to revert to the heirs of John Thigpen upon the termination of the homestead right. It was specially adjudged that she should have no life estate in the property. It was alleged by plaintiffs that the defendant, now Mrs. Russell, had ceased to use or occupy the property as her homestead, and had abandoned the same, and that thereby the property became subject to partition. The fact of abandonment was denied, and is the only issue in the case. The case was tried by the court, without a jury, and judgment rendered for defendants Russell and wife, from which plaintiffs appeal.

The trial court prepared and filed conclusions of fact, which were excepted to by plaintiffs and are as follows: "(1) I find that the defendant Susan A. Russell was married to John Thigpen in 1876, and a short time afterwards she and said John Thigpen moved on the 200 acres of land in controversy and occupied it as their homestead until John Thigpen's death, which occurred about 10 or 11 years ago, having occupied it for a period of about 22 years. (2) That the estate of John Thigpen was by decrees of the district court of Goliad county partitioned between Susan A. Russell and the heirs of John Thigpen, being the plaintiffs in this case or their ancestors, on the — day of October, —, and the — day of November, A. D. 1897, except the 200 acres in controversy, which was expressly reserved from partition and declared to be the separate property of John Thigpen, deceased, and in said decrees the said 200 acres was set apart to said Susan A. Russell as the surviving widow of John Thigpen, as a homestead so long as she might elect to use or occupy the same as such. (3) That a short time after said decree of partition said Susan A. Russell went upon said land and made some improvements and lived upon it for about one year when she left to reside elsewhere, because she could not get any suitable person to live on the place with her, she having no children, and rented the place, and continuously since said date to this present time she has rented said land, and the same is now in possession of her tenant. (4) I find that from time to time since said land was set aside to her she has caused the premises to be kept in repair and has added some improvements. (5) I find that said land was the separate property of John Thigpen. (6) That in 1902 defendant Susan A. Russell married her codefendant, A. S. Russell, who at the time of her marriage to him resided in Milam county, Tex., and since her said marriage she has resided with her husband in Milam county, Tex., making occasional visits to Goliad county to look after this piece of property. (7) That at the time of his marriage defendant A. S. Russell owned and lived on some hotel property in Milam county, which he shortly afterwards lost on account of not being able to pay off an indebtedness that existed on said property, and that after the loss of the hotel property defendants rented various places to live on until in November, 1906, Mrs. Russell borrowed $500, with $350 of which she purchased a house and some lots in Milano, Milam county, Tex., and since said time she and her husband have resided on said property. (8) That at the time of the purchase of said lots in Milano it was the intention of defendants to draw the papers in such way that the property would belong to Bran V. Burk, a boy 10 years old who lives with defendants; but on account of the way papers were gotten up this purpose was not accomplished, and the title to said property is in defendant Susan A. Russell. (9) I find that the defendant A. S. Russell is a surveyor by profession and has an income of probably $200 per annum. (10) I find that defendant Susan A. Russell owns property consisting of several town lots in the town of Fannin, Goliad county, Tex., and the property in Milano, and she has no income other than that received from the land in controversy, which she has each year received and used for her support and maintenance, and I find that defendant A. S. Russell owns an interest in several tracts of land in Milam county, Tex. (11) I find that the house on the 200 acres of land in controversy is out of repair and has been since the last marriage of Susan A. Russell, and since then has not been fit for occupancy. (12) I find from the continued declarations in the matter that it has been the intention of Susan A. Russell to return to and occupy the land in controversy as her home as soon as her husband could arrange his business affairs in Milam county so as to leave them and could get money with which to repair the improvements on said land so as to render them fit for occupancy, and that it was not their intention to occupy the lots in Milano as their homestead. (13) I find that both Mrs. S. A. Russell and her husband have offered to sell their homestead right to the land in controversy."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

† Writ of error denied by Supreme Court May 26, 1909.

The foregoing findings of fact are approved by us without qualification, with the exception of that embraced in the eighth paragraph, which will be later referred to in disposing of the third assignment of error. From these conclusions of fact the court found, as a conclusion of law, that Mrs. Russell had not abandoned the homestead on the 200 acres of land.

The trial court permitted certain witnesses to testify, over the objections of appellants, to declarations made by appellees as to their intention to move back to and reoccupy Mrs. Russell's home on the land in controversy. To the admission of this testimony appellants excepted, and the ruling of the court is made the basis of the first assignment of error. In so far as the testimony of appellees themselves is embraced in this assignment, it stands on altogether different ground from that occupied by the testimony of the other witnesses, and was in no sense their declaration of their intention, but their testimony under oath, as to such intention. This testimony is not subject to any of the objections to the admissibility of their mere declarations to third persons during their absence from the home, as set out in the various propositions, under the assignment. The testimony of Bego, Burns, and Patton was, in substance, that at various times, while appellees were living at Milano, they declared that they expected and intended, as soon as they could arrange to do so, to come back to Goliad county and occupy this homestead. It has been held that the question of abandonment of a homestead once used and occupied as such by removal therefrom, is dependent upon the intention of the parties and whether such removal was with the fixed intention of not returning to the place as a home (Shepherd v. Cassidy, 20 Tex. 29, 70 Am. Dec. 372; Gouhenant v. Cockrell, 20 Tex. 98), and in this connection it has been generally held, we believe, that the declarations of the parties are admissible upon this question, notwithstanding they may seem to be self-serving (Gunn v. Wynne [Tex. Civ. App.] 43 S. W. 293; Gaar, Scott & Co. v. Burge [Tex. Civ. App.] 110 S. W. 185). The authorities cited by appellants in support of their contention are as to the weight and effect of such declarations when contradicted by the actions of the parties, and none of them go so far as to hold that such declarations are not admissible. Woolfork v. Ricketts, 48 Tex. 37; Reese v. Renfro, 68 Tex. 195, 4 S. W. 545. In Johnston v. Martin, 81 Tex. 21, 16 S. W. 550, the parties owned a homestead in town which they occupied as such, and had never occupied or lived upon the property in the country attempted to be claimed as a homestead. In Portwood v. Newberry, 79 Tex. 337, 15 S. W. 270, the question was not presented nor decided. In fact, we have not been able to find any case in which it was held that evidence of the declaration of the parties was not admissible on the question of abandonment of a homestead once used and occupied as such. Evidence had been admitted as to the acts of Mrs. Russell in moving with her husband to Milam county and in renting out the property in question for several years. In the language of the court, in Gunn v. Wynne (Tex. Civ. App.) 43 S. W. 294: "These acts did not unmistakably manifest their true intent, and declarations accompanying such acts and explanatory thereof are also admissible." The acts of removal and renting were not necessarily inconsistent with the intention of the homestead right here claimed. The intention, after all, was the material thing. The court did not err in admitting the evidence. Its weight was for the court, sitting as a jury.

The second assignment of error rests necessarily upon the same grounds as the first, and is overruled.

The third assignment of error assails the finding of fact set out in the eighth paragraph of such findings, heretofore referred to, which is as follows: "That, at the time of the purchase of the said lots in Milano, it was the intention of the defendants to draw the papers in such way that the property would belong to Bran V. Burk, a boy 10 years old who lived with defendants; but on account of the way the papers were gotten up the purpose was not accomplished, and the title to said property is in Susan A. Russell." Appellees contend that this finding is opposed to the uncontradicted evidence on this point. The testimony of the witnesses, appellees, and Mrs. Jones, on this point is not at all clear: but it is uncontradicted, and shows substantially, that Mrs. Jones, the grandmother of the boy, Bran V. Burk, a boy 10 years old, who was godson to Mrs. Russell and lived with her and her husband, lent appellees $500 with which to buy an improved place in Milano, with the understanding that appellees should have only a life interest in the property, and that at their death the property should go to the boy. It was intended that the deed should be so drawn, but by mistake it was so drawn as to vest the fee-simple title in Mrs. Russell. The date of this deed is not given in the record so far as we can find; but on November 23, 1906, Mrs. Russell, joined by her husband, executed a deed, the purport of which was to convey the property to A. S. Russell, the husband, during his natural life, and at his death to revert to Bran V. Burk. This deed was intended to carry out the intentions of the parties in the purchase of the property. Both deeds were drawn by appellee A. S. Russell, who disclosed a considerable degree of ignorance as to such matters by his testimony. This latter deed was not acknowledged for record until January 21, 1908, and there are several circumstances concerning it which affect the transaction as suspicious and not bona fide; but the trial judge, sitting as a jury, was satisfied with the explanation given of them by appellees, and his ruling thereon will not be revised. This evidence, however, conclusively shows that it was not the intention of the parties to draw the deed so that the property would belong to Bran V. Burk, if by this is meant that appellees should have no interest therein. Substituting for this finding, however, such finding as the above evidence authorized, does not, in our opinion, affect the judgment, as, notwithstanding such finding as alone was authorized by the evidence, as aforesaid, if the parties at all times retained the intention not to make their home on this property, even if it were in the name of Mrs. Russell, but to return to Goliad and resume their occupancy of the home there. It would not constitute an abandonment of the Goliad home. Baum v. Williams, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 407, 41 S. W. 840.

The fourth and fifth assignments of error attack the findings of fact embraced in paragraphs 11 and 12 as not authorized by the evidence. We cannot say that there is not sufficient evidence to support the findings, and the assignments, with the several propositions thereunder, are overruled. The offer to sell the property was not necessarily inconsistent with their intention to return to it and reoccupy it as a home if they did not sell. Gaar, Scott & Co. v. Burge, supra. They had in fact no interest which they could dispose of by sale.

The sixth, seventh, and eighth assignments of error assail the judgment of the court and the overruling of the motion for a new trial on the ground that it is contrary to the law and the facts, in that the evidence conclusively shows abandonment of the Goliad county homestead. Our conclusions of fact are as found by the trial court, who, sitting as a jury, has passed upon the evidence, and in deference to such finding we do not feel authorized to substitute for them different conclusions of fact, so long as we cannot say that such findings have not sufficient evidence to support them. The evidence tends strongly to support the conclusion that appellees did not intend to return to Goliad county to live, and would have authorized such conclusion; but that is not sufficient to authorize us to overturn the contrary conclusion of the trial court. The facts thus found by the trial court, in our opinion, justify his legal conclusion that Mrs. Russell had not lost her homestead right in the property. The facts are strikingly similar to those in the case of Foreman v. Meroney, 62 Tex. 723, in which it was held that the homestead right had not been forfeited. That decision has never been overruled, or in any way qualified, so far as we can find, and it is largely upon its authority that our conclusion rests that the judgment should be affirmed. In that case, as in this, the widow, in whom was the homestead right, married again, and her husband, a year after the marriage, bought a home and lot elsewhere, to which they moved, and in which they lived until they sold it, when live on the land in controversy unless compelled by poverty or unavoidable circumstances. The land in controversy was rented to tenants by the year. The facts were even stronger against the retention of the homestead right than in the present case, in so far as the same could rest upon the intention of the parties. The Supreme Court, however, held that the homestead right had not been abandoned. The reasoning in the opinion in that case applies with great force to the facts of this case, and we do not feel at liberty to disregard the authority of the decision, as applied to the present case.

We have examined all of the assignments of error and the various propositions thereunder, which are presented in an able and exhaustive brief for appellants. We do not think they present sufficient ground for reversal of the judgment, and it is therefore affirmed.

Affirmed.

CARNEY v. MENEFEE.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. Jan. 30, 1909. Affirmed on Certificate, April 10, 1909.)

1. 'APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 622*)—PROCEEDINGS FOR TRANSFER OF CAUSE—TIME FOR FILING TRANSCRIPT—WRIT OF ERROR.

The transcript on writ of error need not be filed in the Court of Civil Appeals until after the service of the writ.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 622.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 401*)—PROCEEDINGS FOR TRANSFER OF CAUSE—WRIT OF ERROR.

The Court of Civil Appeals does not acquire jurisdiction of a writ of error until service of the writ.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 401.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 387*)—PROCEEDINGS FOR TRANSFER OF CAUSE—BOND—TIME FOR FILING.

An appeal is perfected under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1387, where a bond is filed within 20 days after the expiration of the term, except that, where the term may by law continue more than 8 weeks, the bond shall be filed within 20 days after notice of appeal is given if appellant resides in the county, otherwise within 30 days; and hence a transcript accompanying a motion to affirm a judgment on certificate which recited that the term of court began July 6th, that judgment was rendered July 7th and bond filed September 9th, four days after court adjourned, but did not show that the term could not by law continue more than eight weeks, so that the bond should have been filed within 30 days at the latest, after notice of appeal which might have been of the date of judgment, did not show that the Court of Civil Appeals acquired jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2066; Dec. Dig. § 387.*]

brings error. Motion to affirm the judgment on certificate. On motion for a rehearing after refusal to dismiss, the transcript was amended to show petition for writ of error and citation in error with a sheriff's return thereon. Judgment affirmed.

A. R. Hopkins, for plaintiff in error. Wray & Mayer, for defendant in error.

SPEER, J. In this case a motion is filed by defendant in error to affirm the judgment on certificate. The term of the county court at which the judgment was rendered was begun on July 6, A. D. 1908, and adjourned on September 5, 1908, as shown by the caption to the transcript. The judgment sought to be affirmed was rendered on July 7th, and was in defendant in error's favor against plaintiff in error for the sum of $546.15. On September 9, 1908, a supersedeas bond was filed, in which it is declared that "the said T. G. Carney has sued out a writ of error to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Second Supreme Judicial District," etc. The caption, judgment, and supersedeas bond referred to make up the entire transcript before us. No transcript whatever has been filed in this court by the plaintiff in error, but such transcript is not required to be filed here until service of the writ of error has been had (Scarborough v. Groesbeck [Tex. Civ. App.] 25 S. W. 687); nor, indeed, has this court jurisdiction until such service (Crunk v. Crunk, 23 Tex. 605; Vineyard v. McCombs, 100 Tex. 318, 99 S. W. 544). We cannot, therefore, entertain jurisdiction as upon writ of error proceedings.

Neither does the plaintiff in error appear to be in any better position if we treat the supersedeas bond as an ordinary appeal bond. An appeal is perfected where a bond is filed upon filing that bond "within twenty days after the expiration of the term. If the term of the court may by law continue more than eight weeks the bond * * * shall be filed within twenty days after notice of appeal is given if the party taking the appeal resides in the county, and within thirty days if he resides out of the county." Rev. St. 1895, art. 1387. Now, we cannot affirm this case on certificate unless the appeal bond was filed within the time above designated. The bond does appear to be filed within 20 days after the expiration of the term, but we cannot know that the term of the county court of Tarrant county could not by law have continued more than 8 weeks, and that, therefore, the appeal bond should have been filed within 20 days, or at most within 30 days, after the notice of appeal was given, which, if it corresponded ed, and the motion is therefore dismissed. See Dixon v. Southern Building & Loan Association (Tex. Civ. App.) 28 S. W. 58. Motion dismissed.

PER CURIAM. Rehearing granted, and judgment affirmed on certificate.

NAIL v. FIRST NAT. BANK OF CHICKASHA.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 28, 1909.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 640*)—RECORD—AMENDMENT.

Where the clerk fails to fasten the transcript of the record at the top as directed by the rules, and does not incorporate therein appellant's assignment of errors, appellant will be allowed to file a new transcript, properly prepared and certified.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 640.*]

Appeal from District Court, Lipscomb County; H. G. Hendricks, Judge.

Action between A. L. Nail against the First National Bank of Chickasha. From a judgment for the bank, A. L. Nail appeals. Motion by appellee to strike from the record the statement of facts copied therein, and by appellant to permit him to file the original statement of facts. Motions granted.

E. C. Gray, Capp, Cantey, Hanger & Short, and R. M. Rowland, for appellant. Hoover & Taylor, for appellee.

FISHER, C. J. We grant appellee's motion to strike from the record the statement of facts therein copied, and we grant appellant's motion to permit him to file the original statement of facts. Appellant's motion also contains an application for certiorari to bring up a more perfect record. From the statement contained in this motion it seems that the clerk failed to fasten the transcript at the top, as the rule prescribes, and failed to incorporate in it appellant's assignments of errors. Appellant has accompanied the motion with an entirely new transcript or record, which is properly certified to, and which is properly prepared in accordance with the rules, and which contains his assignments of errors, and asks that this transcript be filed in lieu of the original one, which is defective and not complete, as pointed out. We see no impropriety in granting this request, and the new transcript is ordered filed, to take effect from the date of the filing of the one first returned to this court and here filed August 10, 1908.

The costs of both motions are taxed against the appellant.

1. TRESPASS (§ 46*)—TIMBER TRESPASS—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence held to support a finding that defendants committed a timber trespass intentionally, and not through mistake in the land lines.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass, Dec. Dig. § 46.*]

2. TRESPASS (§ 12*)—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

Every unauthorized entry on the land of another is trespass, and it is willful trespass if intended and deliberately done.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass, Cent. Dig. §§ 8-12; Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

3. TRESPASS (§ 52*)—TIMBER TRESPASS—DAMAGES.

Where timber is cut on the land of another, either through culpable negligence or willful disregard of the rights of the owner, the trespasser is liable for the full value of the property at the time and place of demand or of suit brought.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass, Cent. Dig. §§ 137, 138; Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

4. TRESPASS (§ 44*)—TIMBER TRESPASS—DAMAGES—BURDEN OF PROOF.

Where, in an action for timber trespass, plaintiff elected to treat the manufacture of the timber into lumber as the period of conversion, the burden was on her, before she could recover the manufactured value, of proving that the timber was so manufactured.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass, Dec. Dig. § 44.*]

5. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 13*)—RIGHT OF ACTION.

Where the taking of timber is intentional and wrongful, the owner, as against the original trespasser, may elect, though not compelled, to fix the time of conversion, and proceed, according to the circumstances, to recover.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

6. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 13*)—EFFECT ON TITLE.

A wrongful taking of property does not change the title thereto, and it may be recovered so long as its identity is perceptible to the senses, though its form has been changed, and its value greatly enhanced, by the labor of the party taking it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

7. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 40*) — EVIDENCE.

A tortious taking of property is sufficient proof of a conversion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Cent. Dig. § 236; Dec. Dig. § 40.*]

Error from District Court, Bowie County; P. A. Turner, Judge.

Action by Mrs. Etta Less and another against J. W. Ripy and others. There was a judgment, and defendants bring error. Reversed and remanded.

The defendant in error Mrs. Etta Less, joined by her husband, claiming that J. W. Ripy & Son, a firm, and A. M. McDaniel, without consent or authority, intentionally and wrongfully trespassed upon her land, and ages for injuries done to the fence inclosing the land from which the timber was cut. The defendants in the suit below answered by general denial. The case was tried before the court without a jury, and judgment was entered in favor of defendant in error against the firm of J. W. Ripy & Son and in favor of A. M. McDaniel against defendant in error.

Hart, Mahaffey & Thomas, for plaintiffs in error. Smelser & Vaughan, for defendants in error.

LEVY, J. (after stating the facts as above). By their first assignment the plaintiffs in error contend that the court erred in holding that in cutting and removing the timber from the land they were guilty of a trespass of such a nature as would authorize a recovery against them for any greater sum than the value of the timber in its manufactured state at the time and place it was cut and removed. As is conceded in the written argument of counsel, it appears from the record that on the trial of the case no issue was made that certain pine timber had been cut and removed by plaintiffs in error from the land belonging to Mrs. Less, the defendant in error. There was an issue as to the amount of timber cut, but the trial court's judgment as to the amount of timber cut is supported by testimony. There is involved in the judgment of the court, which was excepted to and the exception noted in the judgment, the finding of fact, as alleged by defendant in error, that the plaintiffs in error, without authority or consent, intentionally and wrongfully cut and removed the timber from the land, and converted same to their own use and benefit. It was the claim of plaintiffs in error that they cut and removed the timber from the land under the honest belief that it belonged to them. We will not undertake to set out the entire evidence bearing on the question presented, in view of the result of the appeal. We, however, refer to certain features of it only for the purpose of indicating why we think this court would not be warranted in setting aside the finding of the trial court.

Plaintiffs in error had purchased all the timber on the Wardell survey. Defendant in error owned the survey adjoining. Some 12 or 14 years previous to the time in question the then owner of the survey of defendant in error inclosed the same with a wire fence, and by consent of the then owner of the Wardell survey embraced between 60 and 100 acres of said survey under the wire fence inclosure. The Wardell land inclosed lay in the northwest corner of the fence. Plaintiffs in error sought to purchase the timber belonging to the defendant in error, and the right to construct a tram across her land, was specifically directed by Lufton, who once owned the Wardell timber, that the Wardell land in the wire fence inclosure was located in the northwest corner of the inclosure. The employé went to the southwest corner of the inclosure, and cut defendant in error's timber. We do not understand the record to reasonably account for this change of direction. It was further shown that there was no pine timber on the Wardell under inclosure. Later a simple survey disclosed the fact that there was no timber on the Wardell under the inclosure. It does not appear that the boundary lines between the two surveys were in dispute or in confusion, or were unascertainable by proper care. Under the circumstances stated, and especially when the specific direction of Lufton to the employé of plaintiffs in error is considered as to the location of the Wardell land in the northwest corner of the inclosure and his cutting the timber off the southwest corner, we do not think it could be held in the case that the testimony does not support the finding of the trial court that the plaintiffs in error did commit the trespass intentionally, and not through mistake in the land lines. Every unauthorized entry on the land of another is trespass, and it is willful trespass if intended and deliberately done. It might not be a malicious act, because not intended to injure the owner. Every person who cuts timber upon his own land, or who intends to do so, owes a duty to an adjoining landowner to ascertain the boundary line of the adjoining land, if he can, with diligence and care, so as to avoid trespassing upon such adjoining land; and, if he neglects such duty, and negligently and carelessly or recklessly cuts beyond his own premises, he cannot be said to have done so by mistake. The neglect of such duty is in itself evidence of a want of good faith. We do not understand that, where timber is cut upon the land of another through either culpable negligence or the willful disregard of the rights of another, the trespasser can avoid the larger damages allowed by law to be recovered. The rule announced in the case of E. E. Bolles Woodenware Co. v. U. S., 106 U. S. 432, 1 Sup. Ct. 398, 27 L. Ed. 230, has been followed. Ry. Co. v. Starr, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 353, 55 S. W. 393; Ry. Co. v. Jones, 34 Tex. Civ. App. 94, 77 S. W. 955; Petit v. Frothingham (Tex. Civ. App.) 106 S. W. 907; Young v. Pine Ridge Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 100 S. W. 784. There it was announced that the full value of the property at the time and place of demand, or of suit brought, could be recovered against a willful trespasser. See Tignor v. Toney, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 518, 35 S. W. 881; 4 Sutherland on Damages, § 1020; Wright v. Skinner, 34 Fla cut and removed, because there is no testimony that the timber cut and removed from the land was ever manufactured into lumber. We think this contention must be sustained. Defendant in error by her petition has treated the time of the manufacture of the timber into lumber as the period of conversion, and has so alleged, and seeks to recover the value accordingly. Assuming an intentional and wrongful taking, then we think that she has the legal right to treat the manufacture, if so, of the timber into lumber as the period of the conversion; and, having so elected, as she has, there devolved upon her the burden of proof, before she could recover the enhanced or manufactured value, that the timber so taken was manufactured by plaintiffs in error into lumber. This proof is not in the record before us. Where the taking of timber is intentional and wrongful, the principle of law is clear, we think, that the owner of the timber taken, as against the original trespasser, may elect, though not compelled, to fix the time of conversion, and proceed, according to the circumstances of the given case, to recover. The time of conversion is not always fixed by the same circumstances, and depends upon the circumstances of the given case. A wrongful taking does not change the title to the property. It still remains in the owner, and may, by suit in sequestration, be recovered so long as its identity is perceptible to the senses. It may be recovered, though its form has been changed and its value greatly enhanced by the labor of the party taking, as in the case of logs into lumber, leather into boots, and the like. It may in the new form be recovered, or compensation for its loss be claimed and recovered, because it is in that form still the property of the owner, and the wrongdoer is not entitled to compensation for the labor bestowed upon it. It is a principle of natural justice that a wrongdoer ought not to be allowed to make a profit by his own willful tort. Thus a tortious taking is sufficient proof of a conversion, but yet the owner may elect to consider the property as still his own, and treat a removal or sale of it, or a manufacture of it into other forms, or a refusal to deliver on demand by the wrongdoer, as the period of conversion. The owner of the land from which the timber is taken might treat the removal from the land as the conversion, and follow the logs to the mill and reclaim them at the mill, and, upon refusal to deliver, sequester them by suit, or sue to recover the value of the logs at the mill at the time of the suit; or, if the taker has changed the character into lumber, the owner of the timber may, if capable of identifica-is fixed at the time enhanced value is placed upon the property, and is so pleaded, then it must be proved that the timber has been put into the state of-enhanced value before a recovery for same is allowable. Unless the defendant be proved guilty of such particular kind of conversion, he could not be held liable for such.

By the third assignment it is contended that the judgment is excessive. The judgment being for the manufactured value of the timber into lumber, and there being no proof in the record that the timber was manufactured into lumber, it follows that this assignment must be sustained.

For the error indicated, the case was ordered reversed and remanded.

SCOTTISH UNION & NATIONAL INS. CO. v. WEEKS DRUG CO.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 14, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 12, 1909.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 335*)—FORFEITURE—FAILURE TO KEEP ACCOUNTS.

The inventory of goods on hand taken two or three days before the fire cannot take the place of the accounts of cash sales required by the policy to be kept by insured.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Dec. Dig. § 335.*]

2. INSURANCE (§ 335*)—FORFEITURE—FAILURE TO KEEP ACCOUNTS.

The provision in a policy of insurance that insured will keep accounts showing sales of goods in some place not exposed to fire is material to the risk, though insured made an inventory of his goods on hand two or three days before the fire. Hence Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1897-1904, art. 3096aa, providing that misrepresentations will not avoid a policy unless they are material, does not apply.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 853; Dec. Dig. § 335.*]

3. INSURANCE (§ 668*) — FORFEITURE — INCREASE OF HAZARD — QUESTION FOR JURY.

Whether a single effort by an unknown person to burn the property should cause insured to consider it likely to be repeated, making it the duty of insured to report same to the company, within a provision that the policy shall be void if the hazard be increased by any means within the knowledge of insured, is a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Dec. Dig. § 668.*]

4. INSURANCE (§ 335*)—FORFEITURE—QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT.

The failure of insured to keep an account of his cash sales of goods, as required by this policy, is a forfeiture of the insurance as a matter of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Dec. Dig. § 335.*]

5. INSURANCE (§ 388*)—CONDITIONS OF POLICY—WAIVER OF FORFEITURE.

Under the provisions of a policy that insured should submit to examination by any per-

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes not waived by requiring insured to submit to several examinations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Dec. Dig. § 388.*]

Appeal from District Court, Nacogdoches County; James I. Perkins, Judge.

Action by the Weeks Drug Company against the Scottish Union & National Insurance Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed.

June C. Harris and Crane, Gilbert & Crane, for appellant. S. W. Blount and King & Strong, for appellee.

JAMES, C. J. The action is one upon a fire insurance policy on goods in appellee's drug store. The court directed the jury to find for the appellee.

The contract contained the following provisions:

"Iron-Safe Clause. The following covenant and warranty is hereby made a part of this policy:

"(1) The assured will take a complete itemized inventory of stock on hand at least once in each calendar year, and unless such inventory has been taken within twelve calendar months prior to the date of this policy, one shall be taken in detail within thirty days of issuance of this policy, or this policy shall be null and void from such date, and upon demand of assured the unearned premium from such date shall be returned.

"(2) The assured will keep a set of books, which shall clearly and plainly present a complete record of business transacted, including all purchases, sales and shipments, both for cash and for credit, from date of inventory, as provided for in first section of this clause, and also from date of last preceding inventory, if such has been taken, and during the continuance of this policy.

"(3) The assured will keep such books and inventory, and also the last preceding inventory, if such has been taken, securely locked in a fire proof safe at night, and at all times when the building mentioned in this policy is not actually open for business, or falling in this, the assured will keep such books and inventories in some place not exposed to a fire which would destroy the aforesaid building, and unless such books and inventories are produced and delivered to this company for examination, this policy shall be null and void, and no suit or action shall be maintained hereon; it is further agreed that the receipt of such books and inventories and the examination of the same shall not be an admission of any liability under the policy, nor a waiver of any defense of the same."

see failed to show any entry in the books of the cash sales from November 23, 1907, to the date of the fire, which occurred on the night of January 8, 1908. The sales for the month of December were usually from 50 to 75 per cent. more than any other month in the year. This is the undisputed testimony.

It is contended by appellee: That an inventory of the goods on hand, which was taken and completed on January 1, 1908, two or three days before the fire, and testified to as complete and true, rendered such cash account unnecessary and immaterial in arriving at the amount of the loss; also, that the provisions of the act of 1903 (article 3096aa, Savles' Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1897-1904) made the keeping of such items of the cash account not material to the risk, in view of said subsequent inventory.

The first of these positions cannot be sustained. The inventory was not, in any sense, a substitute for what was stipulated should be evidenced by the books. The second is also untenable. The peculiar wording of the statute makes it apply only to the truth or falsity of answers or statements in the application or contract, and not what was agreed in the contract to be performed. The case of Insurance Co. v. Whitaker, 112 Tenn. 151, 79 S. W. 121, 64 L. R. A. 451, 105 Am. St. Rep. 916, did not involve a statute worded as this one. The contract was clearly violated by the failure to record the cash sales in the books for the period named, and the consequence of this breach is written in the contract itself, as shown in clause 3, which plaintiff must abide by, having agreed to it, unless appellant has waived, or is estopped from insisting upon, the requirement, which is a matter that will be discussed further on.

At this place we may mention another breach of the policy claimed by appellant; it being in reference to this provision: "The entire policy * * * shall be void * * * If the hazard be increased by any means within the control or knowledge of the insured." The testimony of Mr. Weeks, the president of the drug company, showed that he became informed a few nights before the fire in question during such night that an attempt had been made upon the premises, in an upstairs plunder room, to burn the house. This consisted of finding two candles in a box of trash and excelsior, that one of the candles was burning and the other had burned out, and that, if he had been five minutes later in discovering this situation, the house would have burned up, and he believed somebody was trying thereby to burn the building, and he did not notify the ap-whether or not a single effort to burn the house would cause one to consider it likely to be repeated until successful would involve a presumption of fact, which should always be left to the jury.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

But we are of opinion that the failure to make entry of the said cash items upon the books was, as a matter of law, a breach of the contract which avoided it according to its own plain provisions, unless appellant waived or has estopped itself from setting it up. The evidence was: That three days after the fire the adjuster of appellant and the adjusters of other companies who had issued policies on this stock came to Nacogdoches and called upon Mr. Weeks, president of appellee, to meet them and bring his books, policies, inventories, etc., for examination. He did so, and testified that he had there his ledger, and all the policies and the inventories, but did not have his cashbook there. That a few days later Mr. Thompson, adjuster and attorney for appellant, came to Nacogdoches and notified appellee, fixing time and place, to submit to an examination under oath in reference to the loss and to have and produce at such examination all policies carried by appellee, and all books of accounts, inventories, invoices, and records, stating in said notice: "You are notified that, in making this demand and in holding said examination, it is not the purpose or intention of either of said companies to thereby admit a liability for said loss, nor to waive any condition or provision of said policies or either of them, or any forfeiture thereof, if any such exists." Mr. Thompson fully examined Mr. Weeks until midnight, with his books, and if the facts now claimed as forfeitures, viz., the absence of said cash entries in the books, and the attempted burning a few days before this fire, were not made known to appellee in the first examination before mentioned, they became known in this examination by Mr. Thompson. Mr. Thompson left, stating he would return later and complete the examination, and he returned on January 24th and subjected Weeks and his books to another or further examination under oath with stenographer, and left without any intimation of what the insurance company would do or claim, and that to protect its rights under the policy "appellee was by said conduct of the company, in failing to say whether it would pay the policy or claim forfeiture of same, compelled to go to considerable expense and labor in employing and making out proof of loss of property under the terms of the policy, which proof consisted of 10 pages of typewritten matter. That a copy of this proof was handed to the agent of appellant waiver by reason of such acts." The above in quotation marks is copied from the brief of appellee.

Appellee claims that the acts of appellant, in treating the policy as valid, were repeated three times with knowledge, after the first time, of the breaches now complained of, and there being no pretense that appellee consented to waive his right to claim the legal consequence of such conduct, and these facts being undisputed, it follows that the forfeiture was waived, and cites the case of Insurance Co. v. Evans, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 300, 61 S. W. 536, as in point. In that case it does not appear that the contract of insurance contained any such provision as we find in this one, and set forth above in the iron-safe clause. Nor the following, which is also in the contract: "The insured, as often as required, shall exhibit to any person designated by this company * * * and submit to examinations under oath by any person named by this company and subscribe the same and as often as required shall produce for examination all books of account, bills, invoices and other vouchers, or certified copies thereof if originals be lost, at such reasonable place as may be designated by this company or its representatives, and shall permit extracts and copies thereof to be made." And further: "This company shall not be held to have waived any provision or condition of this policy, or any forfeiture thereof by any requirement, act or proceeding on its part relating to the appraisal or to any examination herein provided for."

Nothing could be plainer than that appellant had the right to conduct the examinations it did, without thereby subjecting itself to any claim of waiver or estoppel, as is contended for by appellee. As stated in American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nunn, 98 Tex. 195, 82 S. W. 499: "There was nothing in the facts that transpired at the examinations which was calculated to mislead appellee in any respect." Nothing by word or act was done in the examinations that signified that appellant would waive any right. The case just cited, by the Supreme Court of this state, is in point, and deals with the very provisions involved in this case.

The undisputed evidence showing such breach of the contract by appellee as entitled appellant to claim nonliability, and there having been no waiver or estoppel with reference to such breach, the instruction should have been of a verdict for appellant; and we conclude that the judgment should be reversed, and judgment here rendered for appellant.

Reversed and rendered.

ENGLEMAN et al. v. MISSOURI, K. & T. RY. CO.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. May 1, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 753*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—EFFECT OF FAILURE TO ASSIGN.

Where no assignments of error were copied into the transcript, error alleged in the brief cannot be considered on appeal unless it is shown by the record.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3066-3069; Dec. Dig. § 753.*]

2. INJUNCTION (§ 28*)—SUBJECTS OF RELIEF—PROSECUTION OF SUCCESSIVE SUITS.

The petition alleged that defendant had recovered judgment against petitioner in a former action for loss of certain articles in shipment and afterward brought suit in a justice's court for the value of some of the same articles of the value of $20, which were included in that judgment, and that the second suit was brought to harass petitioner and caused it expense, etc. Held that, as no appeal would lie from a justice's judgment for the amount stated, to prevent injustice, defendant would be enjoined from maintaining the second action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Dec. Dig. § 26.*]

Appeal from Rains County Court; R. L. Porter, Judge.

Action by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company against J. H. Engleman and others. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

W. W. Berzette, for appellants. Coke, Miller & Coke and B. M. McMahan, for appellee.

RAINEY, C. J. This is an injunction suit brought by appellee against appellants to enjoin them from prosecuting a suit in the justice court, instituted by appellant Engleman against the appellee to recover for the value of one magnetic and three oil cups lost in shipment from Dallas, Tex., to Elmore, Tex., which were alleged to be of the value of $20. The petition for injunction alleged, in effect: That theretofore appellant Engleman had brought suit and recovered a judgment for damages that accrued to him in the shipment of one well drill, in which was included said magnetic and oil cups, and said matter has been finally adjudicated in appellant Engleman's favor; that the said Engleman and his attorney, W. W. Berzette, will prosecute said suit "to judgment if they are not restrained, and thereby vex and harass, and this applicant will be compelled to pay same and to employ counsel to represent it in the trial of said cause, and thereby pay out a large amount in the way of attorney's fees and costs, and expense of procuring testimony in the trial of said cause to their damage in the sum of $550, if the said parties are not restrained from prosecuting said suit." Upon a hearing of the cause a judgment was rendered for appellee, from which this appeal is prosecuted.

We find no assignments of error copied in the transcript, which prevents our considering the errors presented in the brief, unless some are shown by the record. The record shows that appellants' general demurrer to the petition was overruled, to which exception was duly reserved. The contention is that the petition "does not set up such facts as would make it the basis of an injunction." The petition, in effect, shows: That the suit sought to be enjoined is in part for articles which were included in a former action, upon which a recovery was had by appellants; that the articles were of the value of $20, and the action was brought in the justice court; that said suit would thereby vex and harass the applicant and compel it to employ counsel and be at large expense in attorney's fees and costs in procuring testimony; and that "judgment will be rendered therein" against petitioner, unless said parties are restrained.

No appeal lies from a justice's judgment where the amount in controversy is not over $20. It would be wrong to allow the appellant to prosecute a second suit in the justice's court for a part of a demand upon which a recovery had theretofore been had and recover judgment. Where it appears that an injustice may be done, a remedy by injunction, which works no hardship to the appellant, who can set up his demands in said proceeding and have it determined, is proper. "Our system of procedure is essentially equitable in its nature, and was designed to prevent more than one suit growing out of the same subject-matter of litigation, and our decisions from the first have steadily fostered this policy." Railway v. Dowe, 70 Tex. 5, 7 S. W. 368.

We conclude that the petition alleged a good cause of action, and there was no error in overruling the general demurrer.

No other assignment of error appearing that we can consider, the judgment is affirmed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO. v. BARRETT.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 17, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 15, 1909.)

1. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 38*)—DELAY OF TELEGRAM—ACTIONABLE NEGLIGENCE.

Where a telegram sent plaintiff by his son, announcing the serious illness of plaintiff's daughter, and asking plaintiff to come at once, could have been delivered in time for plaintiff to have taken a train six hours earlier than he did, in which time plaintiff suffered mental anguish, actionable negligence on the part of the telegraph company is shown.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 33; Dec. Dig. § 38.*]

2. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 68*)—MENTAL ANGUISH.

Where plaintiff, by reason of a delay in a telegram announcing the illness of his daughter, was unable to take a train until six hours aftwas no better.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 69, 70; Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

Appeal from District Court, Hunt County; R. L. Porter, Judge.

Action by J. R. Barrett against the Western Union Telegraph Company for the negligent transmission of a telegram. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Geo. H. Fearons, N. L. Lindsley, and R. R. Neyland, for appellant. B. Q. Evans, for appellee.

RAINEY, C. J. The statement of the nature and result of the suit made by the appellant is admitted by appellee to be correct, and we adopt the same, in part: Appellee sued for damages for injuries sustained by himself on account of an alleged delay in the delivery of the following telegram: "Commerce, Texas, April 6, 07. To J. R. Barrett, care of Baptist Church, Corinth, Miss. Expecting Luna to die any time. Come at once. Answer [Signed] W. C. Barrett." The ground of damage claimed is this: That on April 6, 1907, the plaintiff resided in Hunt county, at Commerce, Tex., and the defendant was a corporation having an office and local agent at Greenville in said county. That defendant also had offices between Commerce, Tex., and Corinth, Miss., and transmitted messages for hire between said points at said time. That on said date he resided with his family at Commerce, Tex. That his family consisted of his wife, two daughters, and two sons. That he had one daughter whose name was Luna, and who had been married but a short time prior to said date. That on said date he was at Corinth, Miss., and had been there, or in that vicinity, for about two weeks. That on said date plaintiff's daughter Luna Potts was very sick at Commerce, Tex., and W. C. Barrett, plaintiff's son, acting for and on behalf of the plaintiff, delivered to the agent of the defendant at Commerce, Tex., the above-described message. That the said W. C. Barrett paid the defendant's agent the price demanded for sending the message, and at the same time informed the said agent of the importance of a delivery and of the relation of the parties, whose names were mentioned in the telegram. Plaintiff further alleged: That said telegram was received at Corinth, Miss., at 6 o'clock p. m. on the same date, but was not delivered to him until after 9 o'clock that night, a delay of more than three hours; that if said telegram had been delivered to him at any time before said delay he did not reach his home until Tuesday morning, about 3 a. m. Plaintiff further alleged: That, when he received said message, the next train leaving Corinth, by which he could have made connection and reached his home at Commerce, Tex., was scheduled to leave at 3 o'clock a. m. That, after receiving said message, he sent the following reply: "Corinth, Miss., April 6, 1907. To W. C. Barrett, Commerce, Texas. How is Luna. I cannot leave until three a. m. [Signed] J. R. Barrett." That at the time he delivered said message to the defendant at Corinth, Miss., he paid for the same the sum of 60 cents, and requested the agent to ask for a reply. That said telegram was delivered to the plaintiff's wife at Commerce, Tex., about 11 o'clock on the night of April 6th, and plaintiff's daughter Bertie wrote out and delivered to the defendant's agent at Commerce, Tex., the following message: "Luna no better. Come at once." That she directed said agent to go to W. C. Barrett, in Commerce, and he would pay the charges for transmitting the same, which said agent agreed to do and left.

Plaintiff alleges: That he waited until midnight, and until the agent at Corinth closed his office, expecting a reply. That he left on the first train that left Corinth thereafter, which was about 6 o'clock a. m., Sunday morning; said train being late about three hours. That he did not arrive at home until Monday night, April 8th, or Tuesday morning about 3 a. m. That when he reached home he found his daughter was better, and that she finally recovered. That when he found the telegram had been delayed about three hours, and that if the same had been delivered he could have left on the 7 o'clock train, and when he realized that he would be deprived of being with his daughter for at least 24 hours, he was greatly distressed in mind, was disappointed, perplexed, and grieved because of not being able to be with his daughter during said time. That when he could not get a reply from his son concerning her condition, and when he was unable to learn whether she was still living or dead, and not knowing whether his telegram had reached home or not, and not knowing whether his daughter knew he intended to start home, or was on the way, and when he realized he would have to begin his journey and reach his home many hours thereafter, without being able to hear from them, he was still further disappointed, distressed, and worried. That by reason of the negligence of the defendant in failing to promptly deliver to him the telegram at Corinth, and of its negligence in failing to deliver the telegram at Commerce, as above set forth, plaintiff was caused to suffer mental pain and anguish of mind to his damage in the sum of $1,995, for which amount he asked judgment. Defendant answered by general demurrer, various special demurrers, and general denial. A trial resulted in a verdict and judgment in favor of plaintiff for the sum of $500, from which this appeal is prosecuted.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

It will be seen that appellee sought a recovery on two grounds: The first for the negligent failure to deliver a telegram informing him of his daughter's illness, and the second for the negligent failure to deliver an answer to a telegram sent by him inquiring about his daughter's condition. Special exceptions were urged against the allegations of the petition as failing to state a cause of action, as to both grounds, which exceptions were overruled. As to the allegations charging negligence for the failure to deliver the first message, we think a good cause of action was stated, and the court did not err in overruling defendant's demurrers thereto. Tel. Co. v. Belew, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 338, 74 S. W. 799.

As to the allegations of the petition relating to the failure to receive a message in reply to the one he sent inquiring of his daughter's condition, appellant presents the following assignment of error, viz.: "The court erred in overruling and in not sustaining the defendant's sixth special exception, which complains of allegations in the plaintiff's petition growing out of the failure to receive a reply to the message which plaintiff sent from Corinth, Miss., asking: 'How is Luna. I cannot leave until three a. m.' For that no damage could have resulted to plaintiff growing out of the company's delay or failure to deliver said message, because the telegram and answer to said message read: 'Luna no better. Come at once.' And inasmuch as if the plaintiff had received said answer it would have left him with the same advice which he at first received, relating to his daughter's illness, the said allegations are, therefore, too remote to be made the basis of any action." Under this assignment the following proposition is submitted: "The damages for failure to receive a reply message, in response to a telegram of inquiry as to the condition of a party, sent by a person who had been previously advised by telegraph that the party inquired about is expected to die, are not recoverable for a breach of a contract, when it further appears that, if such reply message had been received, it would have said that the person expected to die was no better." The court erred in overruling said exception. "The damage here complained of was the mere continued anxiety caused by the failure promptly to deliver the message." Rowell v. Tel. Co., 75 Tex. 26, 12 S. W. 534. Had the plaintiff received the message sent in reply to his, we do not understand how it would have alleviated his suffering. The message did not convey any information other than what he already knew, and, had he received it, it would not have tended to relieve or lessen the existing anxiety.

For the error in failing to sustain the said sixth exception, the judgment is reversed, and cause remanded.

MISSOURI, K. & T. RY. CO. OF TEXAS v. BRATCHER et al.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas, Feb. 13, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 1, 1909.)

1. TRIAL (§ 139*)—QUESTIONS OF FACT.

It is only when a cause is susceptible of but one just opinion that the trial judge may take it from the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 332; Dec. Dig. § 139.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 35*)—BOUNDARIES—ALTERATION—EVIDENCE.

In an action for death at a railroad crossing, evidence of proceedings of the city council tending to show the passage of an ordinance for incorporating territory including the place of the accident within the city limits, and that the city actually exercised its municipal functions in such territory, so as to render a speed ordinance of the city applicable, was admissible, though the former ordinance itself was not produced.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 35*)—BOUNDARIES—EVIDENCE.

In an action for death at a railroad crossing, evidence held to show that a city, in the exercise of jurisdiction over territory including the place of the accident, was acting as a municipal corporation and under color of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

4. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 35*)—BOUNDARIES—COLLATERAL ATTACK.

Where a municipal corporation exercises its functions of government under a color of law over territory in a certain addition, its right to do so, at least so far as the enforcement of an ordinance is concerned, cannot be collaterally attacked.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

5. RAILROADS (§ 314*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—OBSTRUCTION OF VIEW.

The maintenance of a cut and dump by a railroad 600 feet from a crossing was not negligence rendering it liable for death at the crossing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 965; Dec. Dig. § 314.*]

6. RAILROADS (§ 314*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—OBSTRUCTION OF VIEW.

The maintenance by a railroad company of a tower house of an interlocking plant near a crossing was not negligence constituting an independent ground of recovery for death at the crossing, but was material only on the question of care of the company in managing its trains.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 965; Dec. Dig. § 314.*]

7. RAILROADS (§ 350*)—ACCIDENT AT CROSSING—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In an action for death at a railroad crossing, it was proper to submit to the jury the question of negligence in failing to keep a flagman at the crossing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Dec. Dig. § 350.*]

Appeal from District Court, Ellis County; F. L. Hawkins, Judge.

Action by Lula Bratcher and others against the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company of Texas. From a judgment for plaintiffs, defendant appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Coke, Miller & Coke and Grace & Eskridge, for appellant. Y. D. Kemble and Farar & Pierson, for appellees.

TALBOT, J. This is a suit by Lula Bratcher, the widow of G. S. Bratcher, deceased, in behalf of herself and minor children, to recover of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company damages resulting to them from the death of said G. S. Bratcher, who was killed by one of the railway company's trains at an intersection of its railroad and a street car line in the city of Waxahachie, in a collision between such train and a street car of which the said G. S. Bratcher was the driver. The grounds of negligence alleged and submitted to the jury were: (1) That the train causing the death of G. S. Bratcher was being run within the limits of the city of Waxahachie at a greater rate of speed than allowed by the city ordinance; (2) that appellant maintained on its right of way, near the scene of the killing, cuts and dumps and the tower house of an interlocking plant, which obstructed the view and prevented the said G. S. Bratcher from seeing said train as it approached the street crossing; (3) that appellant failed to keep a flagman or watchman at the highway crossing where the killing occurred. The defendant pleaded the general issue and contributory negligence on the part of the deceased.

The first assignment of error is that the trial court erred in not directing the jury, at appellant's request, to return a verdict in its favor, because the evidence showed beyond controversy that the death of G. S. Bratcher was caused, or contributed to, by a want of ordinary care on his part, and hence the verdict of the jury must have been the result of prejudice. This assignment will be overruled. We do not regard the testimony as conclusively establishing contributory negligence on the part of the said G. S. Bratcher. It is only when the case is susceptible of but one just opinion that the trial judge is authorized to take it from the jury. Joske v. Irvine, 91 Tex. 574, 44 S. W. 1059. After a careful consideration of all the testimony bearing upon the question, we think it was sufficient to require the submission of the issue to the jury, and, as the case will be reversed and remanded for another trial, we shall refrain from further comment upon the testimony.

Appellant's second assignment of error is as follows: "No ordinance by the city council of the city of Waxahachie receiving as a part of said city territory which included the place where said G. S. Bratcher was killed having been shown, or introduced, the court erred in permitting plaintiff's counsel to prove, over objections duly and seasonably made, facts tending, and intended, to show that such an ordinance had, in fact, been passed by the city council, and showing, and intended to show, that the city at the time said Bratcher was killed actually exercised its municipal functions in territory which included the place where he was killed; and further erred in admitting in evidence, over objections, the 'speed ordinance' of the city of Waxahachie—all as more fully shown by bill of exceptions reserved." The testimony offered and objected to was, in substance, as follows: J. W. Martin testified that he made a survey of territory, which included the place where Bratcher was killed, for a contemplated addition to the city of Waxahachie. The city secretary testified that, after search of the records of his office, all that he was able to find having reference to what is known as "Trinity addition" to Waxahachie, which included the street known as "Grand avenue" (along which G. S. Bratcher was traveling when killed), was what appeared on pages 262 and 263 of minute book F of the city council of the city of Waxahachie, which he produced and identified. These pages purported to show proceedings of a regular meeting of the city council of the city of Waxahachie, held on August 5, 1902, which stated that "the following petition and ordinance was read and unanimously adopted," that on that day came on to be heard the petition of H. P. Mizell and others asking that certain defined territory, and the inhabitants thereof, be included in, and made a part of, the city of Waxahachie, which petition, signatures, and affidavits thereto are, in substance, as follows. Then followed copy of petition by Mizell and 18 others for the addition of territory included in Martin's survey to the city, with affidavits of Mizell and two other signers that the persons signing the petition constituted a majority of the qualified voters in the described territory, and a certificate by the mayor of the city that the affidavit had been filed before him, and that he certified the same to the city council. J. T. Sullivan testified that he was an alderman of the city of Waxahachie, and lived in the territory known as "University addition" (same as Trinity addition), and that such territory included the street known as "Grand avenue." J. M. Lancaster testified: That he was an alderman of Waxahachie from 1900 to 1906; that he helped Martin make his survey, and knew that an ordinance for the admission of the territory into the city was prepared, and he thought it was adopted by the council; that was his recollection, but was not certain; that for three years subsequent to 1902 he as alderman, was chairman of the street committee, and as such did a great deal of work on the streets in Trinity addition; that from the date of the council meeting of August 5, 1902, the city government of Waxahachie had exercised its functions over the territory known as "Trinity addition" as a part of the city. O. H. Chapman testified that as city attorney of Waxahachie he prepared several ordinances receiving territory into the city, and his recollection was that he prepared one receiving Trinity addition, and that it was passed by the city council, but he knew nothing about whether such ordinance was ever signed by the mayor, or filed in the archives of the city government, except that such things when acted upon by the council were turned over to the city secretary, and he was supposed to do the rest. The objections urged to this testimony were: (1) That there had been no proof of the original territorial limits of the city, and recitals in extension proceedings were insufficient to locate previous limits, or to show that territory proposed to be added adjoined such limits; (2) that the record offered did not show an ordinance of the city council receiving the described territory as a part of the city; (3) that it was incompetent to thus prove the territorial limits of a city, that the law prescribed how additions to a city should be made and required record evidence thereof, that only by the production of such record evidence, and proof of compliance with statutory requirements in all material respects, could such extension be shown, that no question of de facto government was involved in the case, and that the passage of a city ordinance, in so far as relevant to the issues in the case, could not be thus proved by parol.

There was no error in admitting this testimony, nor did the court err in instructing the jury that the undisputed evidence showed that the accident which resulted in the death of G. S. Bratcher occurred within the corporate limits of the city of Waxahachie. In the case of City of El Paso v. Ruckman, 92 Tex. 86, 46 S. W. 25, Chief Justice Gaines, speaking for the court, says: "The rule is well established that when the creation of a public corporation, municipal or quasi municipal, is authorized by statute, and a corporation has been organized under the color of such authority, its corporate existence cannot be inquired into by the courts in a collateral proceeding. The validity of the incorporation can only be determined in a suit brought for that purpose in the name of the state, or by some individual under the authority of the state, who has a special interest which is affected by the existence of the corporation." It was shown: That from the date of the council meeting held on August 5, 1902, the minutes of which stated that the petition of Mizell and others to add the territory surveyed by J. W. Martin to the city of Waxahachie was read and adopted, it had been continuously claimed by said city and its officers that said territory so surveyed and known as "Trinity addition," was a part of the city; that the city and its officials had exercised jurisdiction over said territory, levying and collecting taxes on the property therein, including so much of appellant's railroad as was situated in said territory; that aldermen living in that territory had been elected regularly to serve in the city council; and that bonds based on property values including property within said territory had been issued by said city and all the functions of a city government exercised by it in such territory. If therefore it should be conceded that the testimony was insufficient to show the passage of an ordinance by the city council of Waxahachie, taking in the territory in question in compliance with the statute on that subject, still it abundantly, and without dispute, showed that said city, in the exercise of jurisdiction over said territory, was acting as a municipal corporation and under the color of law. In such case its corporate existence as to said territory or right to exercise its functions of government over it, at least in so far as the enforcement of its ordinances in said territory is concerned, cannot be collaterally attacked. It is subject to attack only through a direct proceeding instituted by the state. Mr. Dillon, in his work on Municipal Corporations, says: "In proceedings to enforce ordinances the illegality of the corporate organization cannot be shown to defeat a recovery. In such a collateral proceeding, evidence that the corporation is acting as such is all that is required." In the case of Graham v. City of Greenville, 67 Tex. 62, 2 S. W. 742, a case in which the validity of the steps taken to annex certain territory to that city was called in question, the above statement of the law by Mr. Dillon was quoted with approval, and the further announcement made: "That if a municipality has been illegally constituted, the state alone can take advantage of the fact in a proper proceeding instituted for the purpose of testing the validity of its charter." It follows that the court properly admitted in evidence the ordinance prohibiting the running of locomotives, engines, and cars within the city limits of Waxahachie at a greater rate of speed than six miles per hour, and also correctly ruled on all other matters complained of in this assignment of error.

The fourth and fifth assignments of error assert that the court erred in submitting to the jury, as distinct ground of negligence upon which plaintiffs might recover, the maintenance by appellant on its right of way of the cut and dump north of where the killing of G. S. Bratcher occurred, and the building and maintaining of the tower house on its right of way. We think these assignments must be sustained. The evidence, in our opinion, was not sufficient to authorize a finding by the jury that the cut and dump, referred to in the charge, so obstructed Bratcher's view of the approaching train as to have proximately caused his death. Therefore such an issue should not, we think, have been submitted to the jury. According to the practically uncontroverted evidence, said cut and dump were 600 feet north of the crossing where the accident occurred, and a train emerging from the cut going south toward the crossing could be seen by one approaching it as Bratcher was, for that distance, unless it was partially obscured as it passed the tower house of the interlocking plant. It is very clear, we think, from the evidence, that the cut and dump in no wise contributed to the accident resulting in Bratcher's death. Nor could the existence of the tower house properly be considered as constituting a distinct or independent ground of recovery. It could only be considered by the jury, with other circumstances, upon the question of the degree of care which the railway company was bound to exercise in running and managing its trains and giving warning of its approach. Situated and maintained as the evidence shows it was in this case, it cannot be an independent ground of recovery. M., K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Rogers, 91 Tex. 52, 40 S. W. 956; I. & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Knight, 91 Tex. 660, 45 S. W. 556; Cordell v. Railway Co., 70 N. Y. 119, 26 Am. Rep. 550. In the case of Railway Co. v. Knight, supra, Chief Justice Gaines says: "In the case of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway v. Rogers, 91 Tex. 52, 40 S. W. 956, we held that it is not negligence for a railroad to put on its right of way obstructions to the view of one approaching a crossing, whether the obstruction be placed there by the railroad for its own use, or by another, by the railroad's permission to be used in connection with the business of the road; but it is merely a matter to be considered on the question whether there was negligence in the operation of a train at the crossing." Again, he says: "A prudent man operating trains along the track of the defendant company may have exercised more care by reason of the obstructions than he would have exercised had they not existed. Otherwise the existence of the structure did not affect the case." The tower house in question was the usual and ordinary structure necessary to the operation of the interlocking plant, a device to prevent trains from colliding or running into each other at the intersection of two roads; the intersection in this case being that of the Houston & Texas Central Railroad and that of appellant, so that the erection and maintenance of this structure, under the rule announced in the cases cited, cannot on account of its obstructing the view of the railroad track, if it did obstruct it, "be deemed negligence either in law or in fact."

The sixth and last assignment of error complains of the court's action in submitting to the jury whether or not appellant was guilty of negligence in failing to keep a flagman at the crossing where Bratcher was killed to warn persons about to pass over the street crossing of the approach of trains. We are of the opinion there was no error in this action of the court. It is true that railway companies are not required to keep a flagman or watchman at every crossing to give warning to travelers about to use the crossing of the danger of approaching trains; but, if the location of a crossing and the circumstances surrounding it renders it unusually dangerous, the failure to have a flagman there becomes a proper subject of inquiry and question of culpable negligence in determining the liability of the company for damages for injuries inflicted upon one attempting to pass over such crossing. Railway v. Gibson (Tex. Civ. App.) 83 S. W. 862.

We are not prepared to say that the evidence was insufficient to justify the submission of the question in this case.

For the error in the charge, as indicated, the judgment of the court below is reversed, and the cause remanded.

WAGGONER v. PORTERFIELD.†

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 8, 1909. On Rehearing, April 29, 1909.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 286*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—NEGLIGENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action for injuries to a servant by having his arm clipped off as the result of a set screw projecting from a revolving shaft, whether defendant was negligent in permitting such projection held for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 1028; Dec. Dig. § 286.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 217*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—DANGEROUS MACHINERY—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

Plaintiff, after being employed three days in defendant's seedhouse, was injured by his arm being caught in a set screw projecting from the collar of a revolving shaft as he was endeavoring to adjust a belt. The screw was near the end of the shaft, 15 feet from the floor, and, at the time when plaintiff had occasion to be near it, it was difficult for him to observe it, because the shaft and screw were revolving at high speed. He did not know of the screw, which projected from one to two inches above the collar of the shaft, and which was both unusual and dangerous. Held, that plaintiff, being entitled to assume that the machinery was reasonably safe, did not assume

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

† Writ of error denied by Supreme Court June 2, 1909.

TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries to a servant by being caught by a projecting set screw on a revolving shaft, evidence as to plaintiff's contributory negligence held for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1080-1132; Dec. Dig. § 289.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 270*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—ACTION—EVIDENCE.

In an action for injuries to a servant by a set screw projecting from a revolving shaft, the exclusion of evidence, offered only to show whether the set screw could be produced in court, and not to show that the screw had been removed after the injury, was not error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 918; Dec. Dig. § 270.*]

5. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 274*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—EVIDENCE.

Where a servant was injured by a set screw projecting from a revolving shaft, evidence as to his knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the existence and presence of the screw was admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 989; Dec. Dig. § 274.*]

6. JURY (§ 142*)—OBJECTION TO JUROR—DISQUALIFICATION—TIME.

An objection that a juror had served more than six days in the district court within the six months preceding the trial comes too late after verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. § 500; Dec. Dig. § 142.*]

7. DAMAGES (§ 132*)—EXCESSIVENESS.

In an action for injuries to a servant by having his left arm clipped off as the result of his being caught by a set screw negligently permitted to project from the collar of a revolving shaft, a verdict for plaintiff for $10,000 was not excessive.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. § 383; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

Appeal from District Court, Tarrant County; Mike E. Smith, Judge.

Action by G. M. Porterfield, by his next friend, against W. T. Waggoner. Judgment for plaintiff for $10,000, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Appellee, a minor suing by next friend, suffered the loss of an arm while in the service of appellant in the Vernon Cotton Oil Mill, and in his petition claims that his injury was the result of the negligence of the appellant in failing to provide him a reasonably safe place in which to work, and in permitting a set screw resting in the collar that surrounded the line shaft, and near the coupling, to project outwardly and beyond the surface or face of said collar and line shaft. The appellant answered by general denial, contributory negligence, and assumed risk. The case was tried to a jury, and in accordance with their verdict a judgment was rendered in favor of appellee. The seedhouse of the Vernon Cotton Oil Mill was a building about 50x300 feet in size. The in the seedhouse was conveyed from the engine to the seedhouse by a line shaft and belting about 300 feet long. This line shaft did not extend through the full length of the seedhouse, but to about 25 to 30 feet from the east end of the same. It hung on bearings to upright posts, which were about 30 feet high, and placed on the floor on a good foundation, and extended up to within about 5 or 6 feet of the top of the seedhouse. The bearings on which the line shaft ran were on the north side of the posts, which were about 10 feet apart, and there were three pulleys between the said posts and the line shaft. The line shaft had a collar on its west end 27/16 inches in diameter, whose office it was to keep out the end play of the shaft—that is, from working east and west—and this collar was attached to the line shaft by means of a set screw running through the center of the collar. It is conclusively shown that this set screw which so fastened the collar near the west end of the shaft and against the bearing was longer than was necessary, and projected out of the collar 1 3/4 inches. The line shaft was from about 14 to 16 feet from the floor of the seedroom. Some 3 1/2 feet below the line shaft, and on the south side of the upright posts to the north side of which the line shaft was fastened by bearings, was a board 2 inches thick and 10 inches wide for the employes to stand on while putting belts on the pulleys of the line shaft and oiling the bearings of said line shaft, and that board was supported by two horizontal pieces which were fastened to the upright posts and braced. On the same side of the upright posts there was a 2x6 board extending between the two posts and fastened to them, and on the south side of them, and some two or three feet above the line shaft, for the employes to hold to while engaged in putting belts upon the pulleys of the line shaft. Appellee was 20 years of age, and had been at work in the seedhouse about three days before the injury, and before entering the service of appellant had had about 10 days' experience in working in the seedhouse of a cotton oil mill at the same kind of work. The injury is shown to have occurred in substantially the following manner: Appellee and Robert Coon had picked the lint cotton off of the reel in the seedhouse, and then appellee, as was his duty, went back on the platform that ran along by the line shaft to put on the reel belt, while Coon stayed down on the floor to hold on the shaker belt, which, without his holding it on, would come off every time the reel was started. The belt was on the left side of the pulley, and appellee turned himself towards the pulley, with his left side towards the shaft, supporting himself on the platform, and his right hand holding the support above him provided for the purpose, and with his left hand laid the belt upon the pulley, and then, laying the palm of his left hand against the belt, attempted to give the belt a tilt, and as he did so the set screw, which was somewhere between 2 and 4 feet from the pulley, caught his clothing about his hip on the left side and carried him around the shafting, tearing off his clothing, and his left arm was caught in the pulley, and was clipped off, and he fell to the floor, a distance of about 17 feet. The evidence as to whether appellee had his suspender down at the time of his injury is in conflict. Appellee says he did not have his suspender down, but properly adjusted over his shoulder. Appellee testified, in effect, that he did not know, nor had his attention ever been directed to the fact, that there was a projecting set screw in the collar around the shafting, and that he had had very little opportunity to see it because of the short time of three days he had been at work, and the fact that the end of the shaft was 15 feet above the floor of the seedroom, and at times when he had occasion to be up near the place where the set screw was the machinery was running, and the shaft, collar, and set screw were at the time revolving at a speed of 240 revolutions to the minute. The verdict of the jury involves a finding in favor of the appellee on all the issues in the case, and in deference to the verdict of the jury, which we think is sustained by the evidence, we conclude that the appellant was guilty of negligence as claimed in the petition, and that the appellee was not guilty of contributory negligence, and that he did not know, nor in the circumstances could he have reasonably seen, that the set screw projected over the rim of the collar of the line shaft, and that the amount of damages awarded by the verdict is sustained by the evidence.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

R. W. Hall, Marshall & Spoons, and Stephens & Miller, for appellant. Berry & Lucky and McLean & Carlock, for appellee.

LEVY, J. (after stating the facts as above). By the first assignment of error it is contended that the court erred in refusing to give a peremptory instruction to the jury to find for appellant. We do not think there was error. It was properly a question, we think, for the decision of the jury, in all the circumstances of the case, as to whether appellant was guilty of negligence in permitting the set screw which caused appellee's injury to project above the collar in which it was inserted. Bonn v. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 82 S. W. 809; Mountain Copper Co. v. Pierce, 136 Fed. 150, 69 C. C. A. 148; Columbia Box

& Lumber Co. v. Drown, 156 Fed. 459, 84 C. C. A. 269; Pruke v. Furniture Co., 68 Minn. 305, 71 N. W. 276; Ingraham v. Moore, 90 Cal. 410, 27 Pac. 306. See 4 Thompson, Commentaries on Neg. §§ 4020, 4022. We do not think that it could be held in the case that appellee was precluded from a recovery because he assumed the risk of danger from the set screw. The undisputed evidence shows that he had no knowledge of the projecting set screw, and had had very little opportunity to see it. He had been at work in the seedhouse only three days prior to the injury. The set screw was near the end of the shaft, and 15 feet above the floor of the seedroom, and at the times when appellee had occasion to be up near the place where the set screw was the machinery was running, and the shaft, collar, and set screw were revolving at a speed of 240 revolutions to the minute, which rendered it difficult for him to have become aware of the fact that the set screw projected out above the surface of the collar. Several witnesses testified that, while the line shaft was revolving at its usual speed, a person looking at it could not distinguish that it was a set screw. It was uncontroverted that no warning or instruction was given the appellee about the set screw. It was shown, by several competent witnesses, that it was unusual for the set screw to project from 1 to 2 inches above the collar. The servant has the right to rely upon the assumption that the machinery with which he is called upon to work is reasonably safe. He does not assume the risks arising from the failure of the master to do his duty, unless he knows of the failure and the attendant risks, or in the ordinary discharge of his own duty must necessarily have acquired the knowledge. Ry. Co. v. Hannig, 91 Tex. 347, 43 S. W. 508; Peck v. Peck, 99 Tex. 10, 87 S. W. 248; Ry. Co. v. Bingle, 91 Tex. 287, 42 S. W. 971; Oil Co. v. Thompson, 76 Tex. 237, 13 S. W. 60. As to whether or not the manner in which appellee undertook to put the belt on the pulley was more dangerous than another way that the same work might have been done is a controverted question between the witnesses who testified in the case. We do not think it could be held, as a matter of law, that appellee was guilty of contributory negligence under all the facts and circumstances of the case. Ry. Co. v. Keefe, 37 Tex. Civ. App. 588, 84 S. W. 676; Ry. Co. v. Vestal, 38 Tex. Civ. App. 554, 86 S. W. 790; Oil Co. v. Harkey, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 225, 48 S. W. 1005; Lumber Co. v. Bivins (Tex. Civ. App.) 105 S. W. 831; Smith v. Oil Co., 41 Tex. Civ. App. 267, 91 S. W. 383.

The only purpose of the evidence complained of in the second assignment being to ascertain whether or not the set screw could be produced in court, and not offered or insisted upon to show that the set screw had been removed after the injury, there was no error, and the assignment is overruled.

It was permissible for appellee to show his knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the existence and presence of the set screw, and the third assignment is overruled.

Assignments 4, 5, 5a, 5b, and 5c are overruled. The evidence which counsel commented on was properly admitted in the case in the first instance. The court failing to submit to the jury any issue of negligence as to the running board which was pleaded, the objections urged were entirely removed.

The petition alleged that appellee was a minor, and inexperienced in the work about an oil mill, and that appellant was so informed prior to the injury, and failed to instruct him how to do the work. His evidence tended to show these allegations. His evidence was to the effect that previous to the injury he did not see the set screw, and had occasion to be near it only once or twice during the time that he had been working, which was three days, and then the machinery was in continual rapid revolution. The sixth and seventh assignments are therefore overruled.

We do not think there was reversible error shown in assignments 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, and 14. We think the court fully and correctly instructed the jury as to what would constitute negligence in the case, and the eleventh assignment is overruled. Assignments 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, and 22 relate to objections made to the argument of counsel in the case. We are not prepared to hold that the remarks of counsel complained of were of that character and kind as to require or warrant a reversal of the case. The court especially instructed the jury in his main charge not to consider, or be influenced by, certain statements made by counsel.

The twenty-third, twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth, twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, and twenty-ninth assignments relate to the refusal of the court to give special charges. We have considered all these assignments, and think they should be overruled. The main charge of the court correctly, fully, and affirmatively applied the law applicable to the facts of the case.

The thirtieth and thirty-first assignments relate to the disqualification of a juror. The objection that the juror had served more than six days in the district court within the six months preceding the trial comes too late after verdict. Schuster v. La Londe, 57 Tex. 28; Newman v. Dodson, 61 Tex. 96; Rice v. Dewberry (Tex. Civ. App.) 93 S. W. 715.

The thirty-second assignment claims that the verdict is excessive. Considering the age and the injury and suffering of appellee in the case, we do not feel warranted in holding that the verdict is excessive. See Ry. Co. v. Bohan (Tex. Civ. App.) 47 S. W. 1050.

The case was ordered affirmed.

On Rehearing.

The statement in the original opinion, on page 1096, "And appellee turned himself towards the pulley, with his left side towards the shaft, supporting himself on the platform, and his right hand holding the support above him provided for the purpose, and with his left hand laid the belt upon the pulley," is not accurate, and is withdrawn and corrected so as to read: "And appellee turned himself towards the pulley, with his left side towards the shaft. His right foot was in front of him on the running board provided for the purpose, and his left foot resting back of him on a scantling towards the nearest post west of him, which post was about 2½ or 3 feet distant, and was holding with his right hand to a scantling above his head, and then, inclining his body towards the belt, with his left hand laid the belt upon the pulley."

The motion for rehearing was ordered overruled.

TEXAS & P. RY. CO. v. TAYLOR.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 13, 1909. Rehearing Denied April 10, 1909.)

1. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 803*)—DUE PROCESS OF LAW—PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS.

The statutes authorizing penalties for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502) are not contrary to Const. U. S. Amend. 14, on the ground that they make no provision for exempting the carrier from liability for failure under circumstances beyond its control, and so amount to a taking of its property without due process of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 863; Dec. Dig. § 303.*]

2. STATUTES (§ 241*)—PENAL STATUTES—RULE OF STRICT CONSTRUCTION.

The rule of strict construction of penal statutes does not consist in giving the words the narrowest meaning of which they are susceptible, nor in adopting that strained construction obviously contrary to, or destructive of, the intention of the lawmakers, manifest from one section alone, or in connection with other parts of the same act.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 322; Dec. Dig. § 241.*]

3. STATUTES (§ 241*)—CONSTRUCTION—LEGISLATIVE INTENTION AS CONTROLLING.

The intention of the Legislature, even in penal statutes, when it can fairly be discovered must in all cases control.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 322; Dec. Dig. § 241.*]

4. STATUTES (§ 241*)—PENAL STATUTES—RULE OF STRICT CONSTRUCTION.

The rule of strict construction as applied to penal statutes is more, properly speaking, a requirement that the plaintiff's case must be brought strictly within the spirit and letter of the statute.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 322; Dec. Dig. § 241.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

5. STATUTES (§ 241*)—CONSTRUCTION—PENAL STATUTES.

Courts, cannot, and ought not to, deal with an act as a crime, unless it is plainly within the language used by the Legislature; but, when determining whether or not the act is within such language, a common-sense method of interpretation to ascertain its real meaning should always be employed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 322; Dec. Dig. § 241.*]

6. STATUTES (§ 188*)—CONSTRUCTION RENDERING LAW ABSURD OR MEANINGLESS.

A construction should not be employed that would render the law absurd or even meaningless, when a rational, expressive, and wholesome meaning may be ascertained from the language used.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 266; Dec. Dig. § 188.*]

7. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—STATUTE AUTHORIZING PENALTY—CONSTRUCTION—INVALIDITY AS BEING UNCERTAIN.

The requirement of Rev. St. 1895, art. 4502, that a shipper suing for a penalty for failure to furnish cars shall have "on hand at the time any demand for cars was made" necessary freight for loading them, when read in the light of the privilege conferred on him of 48 hours for loading after the cars are delivered, means he must be the owner or manager of the freight, and have such possession or control over it that he can, and will, be ready and able to load the cars ordered within the time given by the statute; and whether he has such goods on hand within the meaning of that act does not depend upon feet or miles, but rather on his ability actually to deliver the freight and load within the time specified, and the statute, thus construed, is not void for uncertainty in the use of the expression "had on hand."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 36; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

8. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTE—MEANING OF "ON HAND."

The phrase "on hand" as used in the statute does not require that the shipper shall have the property at the immediate point of shipment at the time of demand, but, as the statute gives the railroad company six days from demand within which to furnish cars, and the shipper 48 hours thereafter to load, the words mean that he has or owns the property so circumstanced as may be shipped within the time named.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 36; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 6, p. 4972.]

9. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS.

Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4499, fixing the penalty for failing to furnish cars at "the sum of $25 per day for each car failed to be furnished," but not naming the time for which it is to be inflicted, the penalty is to be charged at the rate of $25 per day for each car, and be continued for the whole time of the carrier's delinquency, and a penalty is not forbidden if cars were eventually furnished.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 36; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

10. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—OWNERSHIP OF PROPERTY BY SHIPPER AS FIXING CARRIER'S LIABILITY.

In an action for penalties for failure to furnish cars, it is sufficient if the evidence shows plaintiff was one of the owners, and had the actual custody and control of the property to be shipped, and he need not be shown to be the sole owner.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 44; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

11. TRIAL (§ 143*)—CONFLICTING EVIDENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

A summary instruction should not be given the jury as to an issue on which the evidence conflicts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 342, 343; Dec. Dig. § 143.*]

12. EVIDENCE (§ 594*)—WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY—UNDISPUTED TESTIMONY—INTERESTED WITNESSES.

The undisputed testimony of an employé of one of the parties, consisting largely of opinions and conclusions, would not necessarily be binding on the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2431; Dec. Dig. § 594.*]

13. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—CONTRACT OF SHIPMENT AS BEING LOCAL AND INTERNATIONAL.

The statutes authorizing a penalty for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, §§ 4497-4502) apply to a contract of shipment for local transportation, though the shipper intended, when it was completed, to deliver the shipment to a connecting carrier for further transportation into Mexico; the shipment under the contract not being for that reason international.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 36; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

14. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—ACTION FOR PENALTY—EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT FINDING.

Evidence, in an action for penalties for failure to furnish cars, held to authorize a finding that the carrier's failure to furnish cars within the time demanded was without sufficient legal excuse.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 48; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

15. TIME (§ 9*)—COMPUTATION AS TO PENALTY—EXCLUDING FIRST AND LAST DAY.

Where an order, filed on November 28th, for cars to be furnished on December 2d, was complied with by furnishing cars on December 13th, December 2d, and 13th should be excluded from the computation in determining the number of days for which penalty for delay should be allowed; and hence there remain only 10 days for which it should be inflicted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Time, Cent. Dig. § 14½; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

Appeal from District Court, Mitchell County; James L. Shepherd, Judge.

Suit by E. G. Taylor against the Texas & Pacific Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Modified and affirmed.

Ed. W. Smith and Wagstaff & Davidson, for appellant. Royall G. Smith, for appellee.

SPEER, J. Appellee recovered judgment against appellant for a penalty of $1,975 for its failure to furnish cars upon his written order, under articles 4497-4502, Rev. St. 1895.

The first assignment of error, under which practically all the questions in the case may properly be discussed, complains of the court's refusal to direct a verdict for the defendant. So much of the statutes as are necessary to be set out in this case are as follows:

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

"Art. 4497. When the owner, manager or shipper of any freight of any kind shall make application in writing to any superintendent, agent or other person in charge of transportation, to any railway company, receiver or trustee operating a line of railway at the point the cars are desired upon which to ship any freight, it shall be the duty of such railway company, receiver, trustee or other person in charge thereof, to supply the number of cars so required, at the point indicated in the application within a reasonable time thereafter, not to exceed six days from the receipt of such application, and shall supply such cars to the persons so applying therefor, in the order in which such applications are made, without giving preference to any person: Provided, if the application be for ten cars or less, the same shall be furnished in three days; and provided further, that if the application be for fifty cars or more, the railway company may have ten full days in which to supply the cars.

"Art. 4498. Said application for cars shall state the number of cars desired, the place at which they are desired and the time they are desired: Provided, that the place designated shall be at some station or switch on the railroad.

"Art. 4499. When cars are applied for under the provisions of this chapter, if they are not furnished the railway company so failing to furnish them shall forfeit to the party or parties so applying for them the sum of twenty-five dollars per day for each car failed to be furnished, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction, and all actual damages that such applicant may sustain.

"Art. 4500. Such applicant shall at the time of applying for such car or cars, deposit with the agent of such company one-fourth of the amount of the freight charge for the use of such cars, unless the said road shall agree to deliver said cars without such deposit. And such applicant shall, within forty-eight hours after such car or cars have been delivered and placed as hereinbefore provided, fully load the same and upon failure to do so, he shall forfeit and pay to the company the sum of twenty-five dollars for each car not used: Provided, that where applications are made on several days, all of which are filed upon the same day, the applicant shall have forty-eight hours to load the car or cars furnished on the first application, and the next forty-eight hours to load the car or cars furnished on the next application, and so on; and the penalty prescribed shall not accrue as to any car or lot of cars applied for on any one day, until the period within which they may be loaded has expired. And if the said applicant shall not use such cars so ordered by him, and shall so notify the said company or its agent, he shall forfeit and pay to the said railroad company, in addition to the penalty herein prescribed, the actual damages that such company may sustain by the said failure of the applicant to use said cars."

"Art. 4502. It shall be necessary for the party or parties bringing suit against any railroad company under the provisions of this law, to show by evidence that he or they had on hand at the time any demand for cars was made the amount of lumber, cotton, wool, hides, or other freight necessary to load the cars so ordered: Provided, that the provisions of this law shall not apply in cases of strikes or other public calamity."

Some of the reasons urged in support of the requested peremptory instruction go to the very validity of the statutes above quoted, and will therefore be considered first. The contention that the statutes authorizing the recovery of penalties against railroad companies for failure to furnish cars are contrary to the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, because they make no provision for exempting the carrier from damages for failure under circumstances beyond its control, and hence amount to a taking of its property without due process of law, may be dismissed summarily by a reference to the decision in the case of Allen v. Tex. & Pac. Ry. Co., 100 Tex. 525, 101 S. W. 792, wherein our Supreme Court expressly repudiated such a construction, and gave to the statute a broader and more liberal interpretation, so that it does not, and cannot, fall within the condemnation of the amendment invoked.

Next it is insisted, inferentially at least, that the statute itself is void for uncertainty by reason of the language employed in article 4502, to the effect that, before a shipper may recover under the provisions of the act, he must show by evidence that he "had on hand at the time any demand for cars was made" the necessary freight with which to load them. The argument is that the expression "had on hand" is so indefinite and uncertain as to defeat the statute. While these statutes have repeatedly been held to be highly penal in their nature, and while the rule of strict construction has at all times been applied to them, we nevertheless do not feel that the application of this rule should destroy the statute upon the grounds urged. The rule of strict construction, as applied to statutes, does not consist in giving words the narrowest meaning of which they are susceptible, nor does it consist in adopting that strained construction which would obviously be contrary to, or destructive of, the intention of the law-makers, when such intention itself is manifest from the section alone or in connection with other parts of the same act. The intention of the Legislature, even in penal statutes, when that intention can fairly be in the spirit and letter of the statute the intention of the Legislature, when once that intention is discovered. To be sure, courts cannot, and ought not to, deal with an act as a crime, unless it is plainly within the language used by the Legislature; but, when determining whether or not the act is within such language, a common-sense method of interpreting the language so as to ascertain its real meaning should at all times be employed. A construction should not be employed that would render the law absurd or even meaningless, for this itself is a species of absurdity, when a rational, expressive, and wholesome meaning may be ascertained from the language used. The requirement of the statute that the shipper shall have "on hand at the time any demand for cars was made" the necessary freight for loading them, when read in the light of the privilege conferred upon him of 48 hours, after such car or cars have been delivered, of loading them, must be held to mean, we think, that such person must be the owner or manager of such freight, and have such possession of it, or control over it, as that he can and will be ready and able to load the cars so ordered within the time given him by the statute. Whether or not the shipper has such goods on hand within the meaning of the act is not made to depend upon feet or miles, but rather upon his ability actually to deliver the freight and load the cars within the time specified. The very provision allowing 48 hours within which to load the cars, and even longer under some circumstances, tends to negative the idea that the freight was to be actually tendered to the possession of the carrier at the time of making demand for cars; but, if mistaken in this and the proper construction of the statute should be, as contended by appellant, that the freight in such case should be actually delivered to the possession of the carrier, yet the statute would not be void for uncertainty for this very construction makes it certain.

In Tex. & Pac. Ry. Co. v. Smith (No. 4, 557) 118 S. W. 1118, this court construed the phrase "on hand" as follows: "It could hardly have been intended by this to require that the intending shipper shall have the property at the immediate point of shipment at the time of demand, inasmuch as the statute gives the railway company as much as six days from the time of the demand within which to furnish the cars, and the shipper 48 hours within which thereafter to load them. The provision must mean that he has or owns the property so circumstanced as that it may be shipped within the time named." We think that decision announces the correct rule, and gives to the statute a construction which correctly discovers the real intention of the Legislature. The vice in the Kentucky statute stricken down by that decision was that the act of a railroad corporation in charging and receiving more than "a just and reasonable rate of toll or compensation for the transportation of passengers or freight" was made penal, without in any manner establishing a standard of just and reasonable rates of toll, thereby leaving to the determination of individual juries whether or not given rates were just and reasonable. It may be true that such language in a penal statute renders it too indefinite and uncertain to enable those to be affected by it to know definitely beforehand whether or not a given act will be in violation of it, and that was the argument largely upon which the act was condemned, but, even applying that test to the present statute, the carrier in all cases must know, for it has the means of knowing, whether or not the shipper is within the letter of the act; that is, in a position to load the cars within the time allowed by law. The expression "on hand" is as definite and certain, and perhaps more so, than if the statute had required the shipper to be in actual possession of the property to be shipped. It is as definite, we think, as the phrase "party aggrieved," used in the act regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, authorizing certain persons to sue, and which words have been held sufficiently intelligible to render the act not uncertain. Peavey v. Goss, 90 Tex. 90, 37 S. W. 317.

Another difficulty which a very strict construction of the statute would discover has occurred to us in our consultation, and that is that by the terms of article 4499 the penalty against an offending railway company is fixed at "the sum of twenty-five dollars per day for each car failed to be furnished," but the time for which such penalty is to be inflicted is not named; i. e., whether the penalty shall be visited upon the company for one day only, or for each day during the time for which such failure may continue. But we think the language employed is fairly capable of the interpretation that the penalty is to be inflicted at the rate of $25 per day for each car, and to be continued for the whole time of the carrier's delinquency. Again, a very strict construction would forbid the visitation of a penalty upon the carrier for any failure, however long, if the cars were eventually furnished, for the letter of the act is "for each car failed to be furnished"; but this construction, though literal, would lead to a manifest absurdity and violation of the evident intention of the Legislature and is therefore to be rejected.

We will next notice those contentions which would defeat a recovery in the present case, though they do not affect the statute itself. It is insisted that the court should have directed a verdict because the evidence shows that appellee was not the sole owner of the horses and cattle, but the evidence shows he was at least one of the owners, and had the actual custody and control of the property, making the shipment in his own name, and this we take to be sufficient.

It is also insisted that the undisputed evidence showed that appellant's failure to furnish the cars upon appellee's demand was due to circumstances beyond its control, but upon this the evidence conflicted, and a summary instruction could therefore not have been given; for if appellant's witness Everman's testimony was undisputed, it would not necessarily be binding upon the jury, since he was an employé of the company, and therefore an interested witness, and his testimony at best consisted largely of opinions and conclusions. McCormick v. Kampmann (Tex.) 115 S. W. 24; Lake v. Earnest (by this court, not yet officially reported) 116 S. W. 865.

It is next insisted that a verdict for appellant should have been directed because appellee's cattle were shipped from Colorado, Tex., to a point in the republic of Mexico by a continuous shipment and journey, and that therefore, the shipment being international, the statutes of Texas authorizing a penalty do not apply in this case. The evidence shows, however, that while appellee did contemplate and did actually finally ship his cattle to a point in the republic of Mexico, yet the only contract of shipment entered into with appellant was one for transportation from Colorado City to El Paso, Tex. The cattle were not billed through to the republic of Mexico, and appellant in no manner undertook to deliver the cattle to a connecting carrier at El Paso for further transportation into the republic of Mexico, or to do otherwise than to deliver them to the order of appellee at El Paso, Tex. The contract was therefore a complete contract, looking to the transportation of the property only from one point in Texas to another point in this state, and as such fairly within the rule announced by this court in G., O. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Texas, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 73 S. W. 429, and approved by our Supreme Court (97 Tex. 274, 78 S. W. 495), and by the United States Supreme Court (204 U. S. 404, 27 Sup. Ct. 360, 51 L. Ed. 541). A single quotation from an illustration made by the United States Supreme Court in its decision of the case cited will illustrate the correctness of our holding: "To state the question in other words—if the only contract of shipment was for local transportation, would the state law in respect to the mode of transportation be set one side by a federal law in respect to interstate transportation, on the ground that the shipper intended, after the one contract of shipment had been completed, to forward the goods to some place outside the state?" Appellee's written requisition for cars was delivered to appellant November 28, 1906, demanding seven cars to be delivered at Colorado on December 2, 1906, was accompanied by the necessary deposit of one-fourth the freight charges, and in all respects complied with the provisions of the statute hereinabove quoted. Appellee and his father were the owners of the cattle and horses contained in the shipment in controversy, and had them within easy shipping distance of appellant's pens at Colorado, Tex., on the above dates, and until December 13th, on which day the cars were actually furnished. The cattle were being kept in a pasture about $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the pens, while the horses were at a farm only about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles away. They were so near by to appellant's pens that they could easily have been loaded within 4 or 5 hours upon the delivery of the cars, and were so loaded within that time when the cars were finally furnished. Under these circumstances we think the appellee was such owner of the property as was entitled to recover; that he had shown that the property was "on hand" at the time of his requisition for cars, and the jury were authorized to find from the evidence that appellant's failure to furnish cars within the time demanded was without sufficient legal excuse. Neither do we find any error in the court's rulings in giving or refusing charges.

The judgment is excessive, however, in that the penalty was allowed for 11 days, when it should have been for 10 only. As already stated, the order was filed on November 28th, and the cars were to be furnished on December 2d, and were actually furnished on December 13th. Excluding from the computation December 2d, for appellant had all of that day on which to make the delivery, and excluding also December 13th, for there was not a default on that day, there remain only 10 days for which the penalty should be inflicted, and the judgment is therefore excessive in the sum of $175. The appellee has offered to remit this sum if we hold it to be erroneous, and the judgment is therefore reformed so as to be for the sum of $1,750, and as thus reformed is affirmed.

TEXAS & P. RY. CO. v. ANDREWS, REYNOLDS & CO.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 13, 1909. On Rehearing, April 17, 1909.)

1. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 808*)—DUE PROCESS OF LAW—PENALTIES FOR FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS.

The statute authorizing penalties for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502) allows a railway company the right to excuse a failure to furnish cars within the statutory time, when such failure is caused by extraordinary conditions suddenly arising, and beyond the power of the company to control, and hence does not violate Const. U. S. Amend. 14, by depriving it of its property without due process of law.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 863; Dec. Dig. § 303.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 2*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTE—EXCESSIVE FINES AND PUNISHMENT.

The statute authorizing penalties for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497–4502), and which provides by article 4499 a penalty of $25 per day for each car failed to be furnished in addition to actual damages, is not a violation of the Constitution in that it authorizes imposition of excessive fines and punishment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 3; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

3. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—LIABILITY FOR PENALTIES—SUFFICIENCY OF APPLICATION.

Rev. St. 1895, art. 4497, makes it the duty of a railway company to supply the number of cars required by a shipper at the point indicated in the application, within a reasonable time thereafter, not to exceed a specified number of days, varying with the number of cars applied for. Article 4498 requires that the shipper shall state in his application the number of cars required, the place where they are desired, "and the time they are desired." Article 4499 provides that when cars are applied for, if the railroad company shall fail to furnish them, it shall forfeit a certain sum per day for each car, in addition to actual damages. Held, that the respective periods allowed by the statute within which to deliver cars on written order were minimum periods, which must in all cases be allowed by the shipper, but subject to which the shipper had the right, and it was made his duty, to designate the time when cars were desired, and hence an application for cars designating a day for delivery more remote than the minimum statutory time from the receipt of the application was sufficient to authorize recovery of the penalty for its disobedience.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 36; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

On Rehearing.

4. CARRIERS (§ 20*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH CARS—ACTION FOR PENALTIES—CONSTRUCTION OF FINDING.

In an action against a railroad company for penalties for failure to furnish cars, while plaintiffs sought to recover, and the court adjudged penalties only for the days including December 18, to December 27, 1906, they alleged that defendant incurred, and they were entitled to recover, the statutory penalty for the full period of delay after December 8th, the day on which the application required delivery, and the court found that "the evidence fails to show a sufficient excuse for the failure of defendant to furnish the cars in question on or before December 18, 1906, and defendant could by the use of reasonable diligence, notwithstanding the conditions prevailing at the time, have furnished said cars at M. prior to December 18th." Held, that this finding, aided by the judgment in plaintiffs' favor, required the conclusion, if necessary to support the judgment, that defendant was without excuse for its delay at any time after December 8th.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1033*)—JUDGMENT LESS THAN AUTHORIZED—RIGHT TO COMPLAIN THEREOF.

A party cannot complain on appeal merely because the judgment awards against it a less penalty than the pleadings and facts would have authorized, save for the limitation of the prayer for recovery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4061; Dec. Dig. § 1033.*]

Conner, C. J., dissenting in part.

Appeal from District Court, Midland County; W. K. Homan, Special Judge.

Action by Andrews, Reynolds & Co. against the Texas & Pacific Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiffs, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Ed. W. Smith, for appellant. S. J. Isaacs and G. B. Smedley, for appellees.

CONNER, C. J. On November 26, 1906, appellees filed with appellant's local agent at Midland, Tex., an application for eight stock cars in which to ship cattle from Midland to Ft. Worth, Tex., on December 8, 1906, at the same time depositing with such agent an amount equal to one-fourth of the freight charges on such shipment. The cars were not delivered at Midland until December 26, 1906, and appellees instituted this suit to recover actual damages and statutory penalties for delay. After alleging the facts stated, it was charged that the delay was negligent, violative of the statute, that the resultant actual damage was $365.75, and that "by reason of the defendant's failure and refusal to furnish cars on December 8, 1906, and on each day thereafter until December 26, 1906, after having been given the statutory notice and demand to do so, and after having tendered the amount of money required by law, plaintiffs are entitled to recover of and from defendant the statutory penalty of $25 for each car demanded for each day said cars were not furnished after December 8, 1906, and plaintiffs now sue for penalty in the sum of $1,600. Plaintiff says that the days for which he is suing for penalty are December 18 to December 26, 1906, both inclusive. The defendant answered by general demurrer, special exceptions, general denial, and a special answer, in which it was alleged that the failure on the part of the defendant to furnish the cars demanded at the time demanded, or sooner than they were in fact furnished, was due to the fact that prior to the time the cars were demanded to be furnished an unprecedented volume of traffic of all sorts arose on its line of railway, and continued during the time in which the matters herein arose, and that such extraordinary conditions caused a congestion of traffic and a blockade of defendant's tracks, side tracks, sidings, and switches, and that such increase in the volume of business could not reasonably be foreseen or avoided, although the defendant had ample facilities to handle such traffic as arose on its line, or was offered it by its connecting carriers, under ordinary or normal conditions, and did in fact handle such business under such conditions with reasonable promptness." The court overruled all of appellant's exceptions, and gave appellees a judgment for $60 expended by them in holding their cattle during the delay in the receipt of cars, and a further sum of $1,600 penalty. The trial was before the court without a jury and the cause is now presented to us for review on appellant's appeal, upon the evidence, the trial court's conclusions of fact and law, and the numerous assignments of error that are urged.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The action involves a consideration of the following articles of our statute (Rev. St. 1895):

"Art. 4497. (As amended 1890, p. 67.) Railroad to Furnish Cars When Demanded.—When the owner, manager or shipper of any freight of any kind shall make application in writing to any superintendent, agent or other person in charge of transportation, to any railway company, receiver, or trustee, operating a line of railway at the point the cars are desired upon which to ship any freight, it shall be the duty of such railway company, receiver, trustee or other person in charge thereof, to supply the number of cars so required, at the point indicated in the application within a reasonable time thereafter, not to exceed six days from the receipt of such application, and shall supply such cars to the persons so applying therefor, in the order in which such applications are made without giving preference to any person: Provided, if the application be for ten cars or less, the same shall be furnished in three days; and provided, further, that if the application be for fifty cars or more, the railway company may have ten full days in which to supply the cars.

"Art. 4498. Application shall State, What.—Said application for cars shall state the number of cars desired, the place at which they are desired and the time they are desired: Provided that the place designated shall be at some station or switch on the railroad.

"Art. 4499. Penalty for Failure to Furnish.—When cars are applied for under the provisions of this chapter, if they are not furnished, the railway company so failing to furnish then shall forfeit to the party or parties so applying for them the sum of twenty-five dollars per day for each car failed to be furnished, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction, and all actual damages that such applicant may sustain.

"Art. 4500. (As amended 1899, p. 67.) Applicant shall Make Deposit.—Such applicant shall, at the time of applying for such car or cars, deposit with the agent of such company one-fourth of the amount of the freight charge for the use of such cars, unless the said road shall agree to deliver said cars without such deposit. And such applicant shall, within forty-eight hours after such car or cars have been delivered and placed as hereinbefore provided, fully load the same, and upon failure to do so he shall forfeit and pay to the company the sum of $25 for each car not used: Provided, that where applications are made on several days, all of which are filed upon the same day, the applicant shall have forty-eight hours to load the car or cars furnished on the first application, and the next forty-eight hours to load the car or cars furnished on the next application, and so on; and the penalty prescribed shall not accrue as to any car or lot of cars applied for on any one day, until the period within which they may be loaded has expired. And if the said applicant shall not use such cars so ordered by him, and shall so notify the said company or its agent, he shall forfeit and pay to the said railroad company, in addition to the penalty herein prescribed, the actual damages that such company may sustain by the said failure of the applicant to use said cars."

Article 4501 relates to transportation of loaded cars, and is not applicable in this case.

"Art. 4502. Necessary for Applicant to Show, What.—It shall be necessary for the party or parties bringing suit against any railroad company under the provisions of this law, to show by evidence that he or they had on hand at the time any demand for cars was made, the amount of lumber, cotton, wool, hides, or other freight, necessary to load the cars so ordered: Provided, that the provisions of this law shall not apply in cases of strikes or other public calamity."

It is insisted that the statute authorizing a penalty is void, in that it violates the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States to the effect that no state shall deprive any person of his property without due process of law. The contention, in substance, is that the statute denies to the railway company the right to excuse a failure to furnish cars within the time required by the terms of the law, when such failure is caused by extraordinary conditions suddenly and unexpectedly arising beyond the power of the company to control. But since the construction of the statute given by our Supreme Court in the case of Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. Allen, 100 Tex. 525, 101 S. W. 792, allowing such defense, the constitutional objection now urged is not maintainable. Moreover, the trial court in this case permitted appellant to plead and offer evidence of a sudden and unexpected congestion of traffic and scarcity of cars in defense of the failure charged. It is also urged that the statute is violative of the Constitution in that it authorizes the imposition of excessive fines and punishment, but we are not inclined to give ear to this complaint, and think, besides, that the Allen Case, supra, and others that might be cited are, at least by implication, against the contention. We, therefore, overrule all objections herein urged on constitutional grounds. We also overrule several other contentions herein made or involved for the reasons given in the case of Tex. & Pac. Ry. v. Taylor (No. 5878, this day decided by us) 118 S. W. 1097, which therefore need not be repeated here.

All other assignments of error are, we think, directly or indirectly involved in appellant's contention that the application for cars made by appellees is insufficient to support the court's finding and judgment for penalties. We, therefore, address ourselves to this question without further delay. The application is as follows: "Midland, Texas, November 26, 1906. The Agent of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, Midland, Texas—Dear Sir: On Saturday, Dec. 8, 1906, we desire to ship from Midland, Texas, to Fort Worth, Texas, over your line of railroad, eight cars of cattle; and on that date, to wit: December 8, 1906, you will please furnish us at Midland, Texas, eight stock cars in which to ship said cattle. We herewith hand you $96.00, and amount equal to one-fourth of the freight charges on said cars from Midland, Texas, to Fort Worth, Texas. Yours truly, Andrews, Reynolds & Company." While the writer inclines to a contrary view, the majority are of opinion that the application is a sufficient compliance with the statute to authorize the recovery of the penalty for its disobedience. They say, in the language of Mr. Associate Justice SPEER that: "By article 4498 of the Revised Statutes already quoted, it is required that the shipper shall state in his application the number of cars desired, the place at which they are desired, 'and the time they are desired.' When the statutes are read as a whole, it is manifest that the Legislature intended to authorize the shipper to name the day on which he would have cars delivered, subject only to the qualification that the company should have at least the number of days designated by the statute. In Tex. & Pac. Ry. Co. v. Hughes, 99 Tex. 533, 91 S. W. 567, the Supreme Court held that an application for cars 'as soon as possible,' was not a compliance with the article last above cited, in that the application did not state any time whatever within which the cars were to be furnished. It is insisted, however, since the statutes provide that it shall be the duty of the railway company to supply cars at the point indicated in the application within a reasonable time thereafter, 'not to exceed six days from the receipt of such application,' and that where the application is for 'ten cars or less the same shall be furnished in three days,' and that, since by article 4499, 'if they are not furnished the railway company so failing to furnish them shall forfeit,' etc., that the order in the present case, naming December 8th, a day more than three days 'from the receipt of such application,' is not a compliance with the statute, since it demands a delivery of cars at a time other than that which the law requires the railway company to deliver them. In other words, according to article 4497 the reasonable time within which the carrier is given to furnish cars dating 'from the receipt of such application,' and that, time itself being fixed by the statute, it is not within the power of the shipper to name another date, and to recover a penalty for the company's failure to observe it. But we think the better view is that the respective periods allowed by the statute to the carrier within which to deliver cars on writ ten order are minimum periods which must in all cases be allowed by the shipper, but subject to which the shipper has the right, and it is made his duty, to designate the time when such cars are desired. If the contention of appellant were sustained, the result would be entirely to destroy that portion of article 4498 which authorizes the shipper to state the time when the delivery of cars is desired, inasmuch as under that construction the law would in all cases name the day on which such cars should be delivered. The statutes evidently never contemplated that the carrier should deliver cars within the time designated in the body of the act, where the shipper himself had designated in the order a day more remote."

As indicative of the writer's thought he wishes to briefly add that, while of course sufficient as a basis for the recovery of actual damages in event of negligence, he thinks it may well be doubted whether the application under consideration affords that degree of certainty that the law requires in cases of penalty. As exemplified by many authorities, before a person should be punished as for a crime, or in the way of a penalty, the law and the facts should leave no room for doubt as to what was the duty of the accused. And as directly applicable here, it was said by our Supreme Court, in the case of Ry. Co. v. Hughes, 99 Tex. 533, 91 S. W. 567: "The statute under which appellee seeks to recover is highly penal, and the rule applies that he who seeks to recover a penalty under such statute must bring himself strictly within the provisions of the law." See, also, Ry. Co. v. Barrow, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 611, 77 S. W. 643; Ry. Co. v. State, 100 Tex. 420, 100 S. W. 766; State v. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 103 S. W. 654; Louisville & N. Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 99 Ky. 132, 35 S. W. 130; Mathews v. Murphy (Ky.) 63 S. W. 765, 54 L. R. A. 415. It seems clear that at least the letter of the law required appellant to deliver at Midland the eight cars applied for by appellees in three days "from the receipt of such application." Vide article 4497, supra. If not so delivered, article 4499 denounced a penalty, amounting in this case to $200, for each day of failure. The application was received by appellant's agent on November 26th, and if the statutory requirement was to be followed, the cars, to avoid the penalty, must be furnished at Midland not later than November 30th, yet the applicants demanded them for December 8th, some 9 days thereafter, and until then appellant could hardly expect the operation and benefit of the reciprocal penalty denounced by article 4500 in event appellees failed to accept and load the cars within 48 hours after delivery. In such case was appellant subject to the penalty if the cars were not delivered within the time required by the statute, and compelled to hold the cars at Sweetwater during the interim without compensation or liability on the part of the appellees until 48 hours after December 8th?

But if the difficulties here suggested, if they are such, may be avoided by the reading of the statute adopted by the majority, and that construction is certainly a reasonable one if liberality of construction is allowable, then what were the duties of appellant in the matter of priorities so plainly enjoined by the statute? Article 4497 specifically requires that cars applied for under the statute shall be supplied "in the order in which such applications are made, without giving preference to any person." Let it be supposed, as may reasonably be done if we consider the length of appellant's line of railway through our extensive grazing territory, that upon November 27th appellant had received an application for eight cars or less, to be furnished December 1st, and so on up to December 8th, each case allowing the statutory period, and no more; and let it be further supposed that, by reason of prior applications and other excusing conditions recognized by law, appellant was unable to furnish all cars so applied for, including those for appellees. Then who of the applicants must await a further time? In other words, how can priority in application be observed if the statute is to be construed as allowing the shipper to make his application for cars 9, 30, 90, or any other number of days, far in advance of the time he needs them? To do so would seem to foster confusion, uncertainty, and perhaps enable a shipper to obtain advantage over others equally entitled to consideration. It may be well doubted whether the statute, in requiring an applicant for cars to state "the time they are desired," contemplates an unbridled liberty in this respect. As a whole the statutes seem inconsistent with any such purpose. It is evident that promptness and diligence, not only on the part of the railway company, but also on the part of the shipper, is intended. Not only is a penalty provided as against the shipper, but it is especially required that an applicant suing must "show by evidence" that he or they had "on hand," at the very time any demand for cars was made, the amount of freight necessary to load the cars applied for. Article 4502. If when he applies he is ready—i. e., has his property on hand—the writer sees no difficulty or deprivation of privilege in requiring an applicant, in stating the time when the cars are desired, to name that day which will give to the railway company the full number of days allowed by the law for the particular number of cars applied for, and which will also enable the company to enforce, by penalty, acceptance, and loading, within 48 hours after they are furnished. The fact that the law omitted to prescribe the particular day that should be stated in the application is not conclusive that the Legislature intended to grant an intending shipper the right to name any day he chose, however remote from the time of making his application, in view of the variation in the number of days allowed for furnishing cars, dependent upon the number of cars demanded. So that, while it may not be entirely clear, it seems to the writer that less of uncertainty and confusion will arise to construe the statute allowing the shipper to name the day he desires the cars as meaning that he shall state the first day that he is entitled to receive the cars, viz., the day immediately following the full period allowed the railway company for furnishing the particular number of cars applied for. If the shipper has his freight on hand when he makes his application, the 48 hours allowed by the statute before he is required to use the cars, a period amounting to two full days, gives all the latitude in the statement of time he needs.

However, the opinion of the majority must prevail, and we accordingly adopt the trial court's conclusions, and affirm the judgment for the penalty as well as the actual damages.

On Rehearing.

It is very earnestly insisted that we erred in ignoring and overruling appellant's first assignment of error. The insistence, in substance, is that the court in effect found that appellant was excused from its failure to furnish cars for a number of days after the time the statute required their delivery at Midland, and that hence the court erred in assessing a penalty for a time not fixed by the statute. While appellees sought to recover, and the court adjudged, penalties only for the days including December 18, to December 27, 1906, they alleged that appellant incurred, and appellees were entitled to recover, the statutory penalty for the full period of delay after December 8th, the day upon which the application required delivery, and the court's finding on the subject, which we approved, is as follows: "The evidence fails to show a sufficient excuse for the failure of defendant to furnish the cars in question on or before December 18, 1906, and defendant could, by the use of reasonable diligence, notwithstanding the conditions prevailing at the time, have furnished said cars at Midland prior to December 18th." This finding, aided by the judgment in appellees' favor, we think would require the conclusion, if necessary to support the in his findings circumstances showing a congested condition of traffic, as alleged, and awarded penalties for the period only from December 18th to December 26th, inclusive, is not deemed controlling, in view of the appellees' prayer and the final conclusion of fact on the part of the trial court. We fail to see how appellant can complain merely because the judgment awards less penalty than the pleadings and facts would have authorized save for the limitation of appellees' prayer for recovery.

Upon the question of the sufficiency of the application both the majority and the writer see no reason to change their views as expressed in our original opinion, and the motion for rehearing must therefore be overruled.

AMERICAN FREEHOLD LAND MORTGAGE CO. OF LONDON, Limited, v. BROWN et al.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 17, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 5, 1909.)

1. TRIAL (§ 295*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CONSTRUCTION AS A WHOLE.

In an action for injuries to plaintiffs' business by fraudulent statements and representations made to plaintiffs' customers, an instruction that if defendant committed the acts charged in furtherance of a design to break up plaintiffs' business, and they were financially injured thereby, the jury should find for them, was not erroneous as authorizing a recovery as to facts alleged as to which there was no testimony, and as to other facts on which the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover, where the court also charged that all allegations in support of which there was no evidence were withdrawn, and withdrew certain issues on which no recovery could be based.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 703-717; Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

2. TORTS (§ 28*)—ACTION—TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for injuries to plaintiffs' business, caused by false statements of defendant to plaintiffs' customers, the refusal of instructions that, if a certain loss resulted from bad business, or from general rumors that plaintiffs were careless and incompetent loan agents, or from any other cause than the false statements of defendant, there could be no recovery was not error; it being presumed that the jury would not give a verdict for loss not resulting from defendant's acts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Torts, Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 230*)—PRESENTATION OF QUESTIONS—ARGUMENTS OF COUNSEL.

Improper remarks of counsel not objected to at the time will not be reviewed on appeal; an objection, after a discussion of the same matter outside of the record alternately by counsel for both parties, and presentation of

AND SUFFICIENCY.

In an action for injuries to plaintiffs' business, caused by false statements by defendant to plaintiffs' customers, evidence held to justify a verdict of $40,000 actual damage and $10,000 exemplary damages to plaintiffs.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Dec. Dig. § 184.*]

Appeal from District Court, McLennan County; Marshall Surratt, Judge.

Action by R. L. Brown and another against the American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited. From a judgment for plaintiffs, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The nature of this suit is sufficiently indicated by the charge of the trial judge, which, omitting formal parts, reads as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Jury: In this case the plaintiffs allege that R. L. Brown and J. Gordon Brown, under the name of Brown Bros., had established at Austin, and in the city of Waco, a business of loan agents, which transacted business throughout the state, and had from 1888 to 1898 conducted the business of lending money on behalf of foreign corporations, receiving for their services a per cent. of the annual interest as it accrued upon the loans made; that the plaintiffs had established a good reputation as business men for honesty, promptness, and reliability, and as men who could command money for lending to those who might apply to them to borrow, and in the transaction of the business of loan agents had established business relations with many people in Texas who were borrowers of money, who had confidence in the plaintiffs, and who would have continued to do business with them, except for the interference of the defendant; that they were appointed agents of the American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited, hereinafter called the defendant company, in the year 1888, and continued to transact business as such agents for that company until the year 1898, during which time a profitable business was done for said defendant company, for which the plaintiffs received annually $8,000; that in the year 1898 the defendant company determined to change the manner of doing business in Texas, so as to pay salaries instead of commissions, as it had done with the plaintiffs; that by reason of the transactions which plaintiffs had carried on as agents lending money for the said defendant company, as well as others, they had established a valuable business, having loaned money to many persons, which loans were about to mature, and said persons would require to renew the loans, or to borrow money to pay them; that plaintiffs would have been able to control that business as agents of other companies after the agency for said defendant company had been taken from them, and to prevent this, and secure the plaintiffs' business for themselves, the said defendant company and R. B. King and T. Mallinson who are alleged to be agents of the defendant company, fraudulently and maliciously combined, confederated together for the purpose of weakening and destroying plaintiffs' business influence, financial credit and standing, and to break them up and run them out of business, and that by means of the fraudulent combination and their acts done and performed, alleged specially in the petition, the defendant succeeded in preventing the plaintiffs from continuing their business with a large number of their clients who needed to borrow money, and whose loans in other companies were maturing, and by the fraudulent and false representations alleged in the petition defendant prevented said persons from making application to the plaintiffs for such loans, and thereby weakened, and in a large measure destroyed, the business of the plaintiffs. It is further alleged that the defendant, for the wicked, malicious, and fraudulent purpose before charged, circulated and published reports and statements to the effect that the plaintiffs were insolvent and unable to accommodate their customers who might apply for loans, and by the various methods alleged, interfered, and prevented persons from applying to the plaintiffs for loans, and also by such means and false and fraudulent representations prevented plaintiffs from acquiring agencies from other companies, which otherwise they would have done, so as to enable plaintiffs to furnish money to those persons who applied to them for loans.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Index

"(2) Plaintiffs have dismissed their case as to T. Mallinson and R. B. King, and they are no longer parties to this case. The defendant company denies the allegations in the plaintiffs' petition, and specially allege that on the 20th day of July, 1899, plaintiffs and defendant company made and entered into an agreement, wherein they had a full and complete settlement of all matters in controversy then existing between said company and said plaintiffs, growing out of their relations as principal and agents, and on account of the termination thereof, and it alleges that no acts or statements complained of by the plaintiffs herein, as committed or made by its representatives (if any were actually committed or made), were committed or made under its authority, or with its knowledge or consent; nor was any such act or statement ever ratified by it; that neither it nor its representatives ever at any time caused the plaintiffs to lose any company which they had, nor caused them at any time to lose any customer which they had; that neither the defendant nor its representatives at any time prevented the plaintiffs from securing any new company, nor did it or its representatives at any time prevent the plaintiffs from securing any new customers; that neither it nor its representatives at any time prevented or caused any company or persons to desist from loaning plaintiffs any money, nor did it or its representatives ever at any time cause the plaintiffs, or either of them, to suffer any damage, save such as necessarily resulted to them by the withdrawal of defendant's business from them, which it had a full legal right to do, and for any results of which it is in no way responsible.

"(3) All allegations of fact in the pleadings in support of which no evidence has been introduced are withdrawn from your consideration, and you will not consider such allegations for any purpose in arriving at your verdict.

"(4) Under the contract of employment of plaintiffs by the defendant company said company retained the right to discharge the plaintiffs at any time for or without cause, at its discretion, and hence the plaintiffs cannot recover of the defendant any damages for withdrawing or terminating its agency contract with the plaintiffs, or for any losses which the plaintiffs may have sustained by reason thereof, regardless of the motives said company may have had in withdrawing the same. When the plaintiffs were discharged by said company, a settlement of all matters existing between them, growing out of said contract, and damages to the plaintiffs on account of the sending out of what is known as the 'Francis Smith & Co. Letters,' was made and entered into on July 20, 1899, under and by virtue of which both parties released the other from all liability for or on account of anything arising out of, or connected with, the former agency of the plaintiffs, and also the Francis Smith & Co. letters, and hence plaintiffs cannot recover of the defendant any damages for or on account of the Francis Smith & Co. letters, and are limited in the amount of their recovery in this suit, if any, to damages growing out of the alleged wrongs committed by defendant, through its officers and agents, which did not arise out of, and were not connected with, the agency referred to, nor growing out of the Francis Smith & Co. letters, namely, alleged fraudulent and malicious acts and false declarations, uttered and done by the defendant for the purpose of breaking up plaintiffs' business as loan agents, and running them out of such business; and all of the evidence which has been admitted touching the kind of business done by the plaintiffs for the defendant company and the English & Scottish Company was admitted upon the issue above stated, and can only be considered by you in determining whether or not the defendant committed the acts alleged, for the purpose alleged, as above stated; and the Francis Smith & Co. letters can only be considered by you in arriving at or determining the purpose, if any, of the out of such business, and in no event can they be considered by you in estimating the amount of damages, if any, which plaintiffs may have sustained.

"(5) Some evidence has been introduced regarding letters written, and statements made, by J. H. Harrison and F. W. Norris, employés of Francis Smith & Co., and in this connection you are instructed that you cannot consider these letters and statements for any other purpose whatever, unless you believe from the evidence that Francis Smith & Co. authorized or caused said acts and declarations to be made or done, and, unless you believe from the evidence that they were so authorized, you will disregard such evidence, and not consider the same in arriving at your verdict; but if you believe from the evidence that they were so authorized, then you will consider the statements made and letters written by them, or either of them, if any, in connection with, and as part of, the Francis Smith & Co. letters.

"(6) The plaintiffs in this case cannot recover on this suit any damages on account of the alleged statements of E. B. Hoare, 'If Mr. Brown had retained the agency, liquidation would have been unavoidable,' sued upon in the English court, because the judgment in that court adjudicated any cause of action, if any, that arose from the use of that expression, if same was used by the said Hoare, and you are instructed not to consider any evidence as to such statements for any purpose whatever.

"(7) Any unlawful act, done willfully and purposely to the injury of another, is, as against that person, malicious.

"(8) Now, if you believe from the evidence that the defendant company, acting through one or more of its controlling officers and one or more of its agents and employés, working in concert and with a common purpose, committed the acts, or some of them, or made the statements, or some of them, alleged in the petition, and did such acts maliciously, or made such statements falsely, and committed such acts or made such statements in furtherance of a design and intention to break up Brown Bros. in business, and drive them out of business, and that Brown Bros. were financially injured in their business as loan agents thereby, then you will find for the plaintiffs, and the burden of proof rests upon the plaintiffs to establish such facts by the preponderance of the evidence; and, if you do not find for the plaintiffs under this paragraph, you will return a verdict for the defendant.

"(9) By the expression 'controlling officers,' as used in the foregoing paragraph, is meant some chief officer, or vice principal of the company, who must be shown to possess, un-

"(10) If you find for plaintiffs under paragraph 8 of this charge, you will assess the damages at such sum as will compensate them for the actual financial loss or injury to their business as loan agents sustained by them, and state such amount in your verdict as actual damages; and, in arriving at such sum, if any, you will not take into consideration any damages, if any, which may have been sustained by Brown Bros. from any other source or cause than from the acts and statements of the defendant, through its officers and agents, if any, as submitted to you in paragraph 8 hereof.

"(11) If under the instructions hereinbefore given you find for the plaintiffs actual damages, then you may also, in addition to actual damages, if in your judgment the facts and circumstances in evidence warrant, find for the plaintiffs such other and further amount as exemplary or punitive damages as in your judgment, under all the facts and circumstances in evidence, may seem to you right and proper as a punishment to the defendant company for such conduct.

"(12) You cannot, in any event, find any exemplary damages unless you find for the plaintiffs actual damages, and if you do not find that the plaintiffs have suffered actual damages under the instructions herein given you, you will return your verdict for the defendant.

"(13) If you find for the plaintiffs, you will so say, and assess their actual damages, under the instructions hereinbefore given you, and state in your verdict how much you find as actual damages; and, if you find exemplary damages, you will state in your verdict how much, if any, you so find as exemplary damages.

"(14) You are the exclusive judges of the credibility of the witnesses, and the weight to be given to the testimony, and as you find so say in your verdict."

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs for $40,000 actual, and $10,000 exemplary, damages. Judgment was rendered in accordance with the verdict, and the defendant, Land Mortgage Company, has appealed.

Gano, Gano & Gano, Sleeper & Kendall, and J. E. Yantis, for appellant. Clarence H. Miller, George Clark, O. L. Stribling, and Fiset & McClendon, for appellees.

KEY, J. (after stating the facts as above). This is the third time that this case has come before this court. 97 Tex. 599, 80 S. W. 986, 67 L. R. A. 195; (Tex. Civ. App.) 81 S. W. 824; (Tex. Civ. App.) 101 S. W. 856. On the first appeal, which was prosecuted by the plaintiffs on certified question submitted to the Supreme Court, that court held that the plaintiffs' petition, alleging that the defendants conspired together to ruin plaintiffs in their business as real estate agents, and for that purpose circulated false statements that plaintiffs were bankrupt, etc., and that in consequence of such representations plaintiffs' business had been destroyed, stated a cause of action. The case was reversed by this court on account of certain errors committed during the trial. The second trial resulted in favor of the plaintiffs, and the defendant appealed and secured a reversal of the case because of an error in the court's charge to the jury. That error was cured at the last trial. The present appeal is presented in this court upon 70 assignments of error, and a printed brief on behalf of appellant comprising over 200 pages. Very many of the questions presented were urged, considered, and decided against appellant on the former appeals. However, the case has been given extended and careful consideration, and no reason has been found for changing any of the rulings heretofore made. There are some additional questions, some of which we deem it proper to consider in this opinion.

Error is addressed to the eighth paragraph of the court's charge, the contention being that it authorized the jury to consider all of the issues presented in the plaintiffs' petition, although as to some of them there was no testimony before the jury, and as to some others, even if the facts were as alleged, the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover upon such state of facts alone; and error is also assigned upon the refusal of certain requested instructions withdrawing from the jury certain allegations in the plaintiffs' petition, because no evidence was submitted tending to support them. Considering the entire charge together, and especially the third paragraph, we are of opinion that no error was committed in the matters referred to. Railway Co. v. Farmer (Tex.) 115 S. W. 260.

Complaint is made because the court refused to give the following requested instruction: "If you believe from the evidence that the English & Scottish American Mortgage & Investment Company, Limited, withdrew its business from plaintiffs on account of the bad business done for it by plaintiffs, or in its discretion for any other reason, and not because of any false and malicious statements derogatory to plaintiffs, made by the defendant company, its agents, or representatives, you will not consider the loss of said company by plaintiffs in arriving at your verdict." Considering the nature of the plaintiffs' case as asserted in their petition, and as submitted to the jury by the charge of the court, we are of opinion that the refusal of the instruction referred to does not constitute reversible error. The very gist of the plaintiffs' case was damages caused by the wrongful conduct of the defendant, and damages resulting from any other cause were not sued for. Indulging the presumption that the jury was composed of men of average intelligence, it might well be supposed that, in a case of this magnitude, which the record shows was on trial for more than a month, they would understand, without being specifically so instructed, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover for any loss or injury which had not been caused by the defendant. However, in the tenth paragraph of the charge the court specifically instructed the jury, if they found for the plaintiffs, not to take into consideration any damages which may have been sustained by them from any other source or cause than from the acts and statements of the defendant. In view of this instruction we see no reason to suppose that the jury did not fully understand the scope of their authority, and what was their duty in that regard. We do not mean to say that the refused instruction does not embody a correct proposition of law, nor that error would have been committed if it had been given, but we do not believe that its refusal constitutes reversible error in this case. Railway Co. v. Milam (Tex. Civ. App.) 60 S. W. 591.

An instruction was requested, and error is assigned upon its refusal, to the effect that, if there were general rumors that the plaintiffs were careless and incompetent loan agents, which rumors were caused by plaintiffs making loans on bad titles and insufficient security, and extravagance in the management of their business, and suffered damage on account of such rumors, the defendant would not be responsible for such damage. What has just been said in reference to the other refused instruction has application to this. Both instructions involve the same general proposition of law, to the effect that the defendant was not liable to the plaintiffs for damage that was not caused by the defendant.

Three assignments of error complain because of certain statements made and language used by the plaintiffs' counsel in arguing the case to the jury. Under these assignments but one proposition is submitted, which is to the effect that when counsel make statements outside of the record, which are calculated to excite the passions and prejudices of the jury, and the court fails to interfere, then the verdict should be set aside, although such statements were not objected to at the time. While that proposition is supported by Willis & Bro. v. McNeill, 57 Tex. 475, later cases by the Supreme Court, asserting a different rule, and holding that such misconduct, to constitute reversible error should be objected to at the time, have been followed by this court. Moore v. Moore, 73 Tex. 394, 11 S. W. 396; Moore v. Rogers, 84 Tex. 2, 19 S. W. 283; Hogan v. Railway, 88 Tex. 685, 32 S. W. 1035; Jones v. Smith, 21 Tex. Civ. App.

case some of the language used by Mr. Miller in the opening address for the plaintiffs, and objected to by the defendant, was legitimate and proper; some of it may have extended beyond proper bounds. But, instead of objecting to it at the time, the defendant's counsel, who followed Mr. Miller, replied to him, and discussed before the jury the matter now complained of. He was followed by Mr. Stribling for the plaintiffs, who also went outside of the record, and discussed the matter which had previously been discussed by Mr. Miller for the plaintiffs and Mr. Sleeper for the defendant. Then Mr. Stribling was followed by Mr. Yantis on behalf of the defendant, and the latter discussed the same question at considerable length. In closing the case for the plaintiffs Judge Clark, as had all the other attorneys, went out of the record in the same respect, and then, for the first time, the defendant objected to that character of argument. Thereupon Judge Clark stated that he withdrew the remark objected to, and requested the jury not to consider it, but stated that the defendant's counsel had alluded to it and brought it into the case first. The court stated to the jury that, if there was any question about Judge Clark's remarks being withdrawn, he would instruct them not to be influenced in any way whatever by the remarks referred to. Some further statements were then made by the other attorneys in the case as to who first mentioned the subject of trusts, and Judge Clark then used certain language which may have been inelegant and unparliamentary, but was not calculated to improperly influence the jury against the defendant. Such being the state of the record, we hold that reversible error is not shown in that regard, although a new trial was asked on account of improper argument.

There are several assignments of error which assail the verdict of the jury, the contention being that there was no evidence warranting any verdict against the defendant, and especially no evidence to justify as large a verdict as the jury returned. Appellant has cited authorities in other jurisdictions indicating rules which, if followed in this state, would require a reversal of the judgment. But, accepting the law of this case as established by the Supreme Court on the first appeal, and reasoning by analogies furnished in other classes of cases, we have reached the conclusion that the verdict finds support in the testimony, and should not be set aside by this court. The plaintiffs submitted much testimony tending to show a great amount of diminution in the volume of business transacted and profits made by them we cannot say that the jury were not warranted in concluding that, to a large extent, they probably were. The law is, to some extent, a growing science, and in the course of its development old rules are sometimes relaxed, and even new ones established. It is now the settled rule in this state that in actions for damages on account of the death of a husband, father, or son the plaintiff, if recovery be had, is entitled to such sum of money as will be equivalent to the pecuniary aid which such plaintiff would have received from the deceased relative if the defendant had not caused his death. In such a case the jury may take into consideration the life expectancy of the deceased, his existing and prospective earning capacity, and all other pertinent circumstances, and therefrom estimate the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff, although, if the death of the deceased had not been caused by the defendant, it might have resulted on the following day from some other cause. Thus it will be seen that in a case of that kind, as well as the case at bar, the damages recoverable are, in a sense, uncertain and speculative; still, if it is permissible to recover them in the one case, we see no reason why they should not be recoverable in the other.

The verdict involves findings to the effect that the defendant, acting by its controlling officers and agents, wrongfully and maliciously committed some of the acts charged in the plaintiffs' petition and submitted to the jury and that as a proximate result the plaintiffs' business was injured to the extent of $40,000; and, in view of the testimony, we adopt and approve such findings of fact.

All the questions presented in appellant's brief have been considered, and our conclusion is that no reversible error is made to appear, and that the judgment should be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

VICKERS et al. v. PEDDY.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas, April 14, 1900. Rehearing Denied May 12, 1900.)

1. HOMESTEAD (§ 128*)—TRANSFER—TITLE OF GRANTEE OF HUSBAND.

A warranty deed of a homestead executed by the husband only is void as to the wife and conveys no title to the land except by force of the covenant of warranty, which would operate against the heirs of the husband and upon his interest, which, being community property, was an undivided half, and as long as the wife lived upon the property no possessory rights could be asserted under the deed against her.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. § 230; Dec. Dig. § 128.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

2. HOMESTEAD (§ 145*)—RIGHTS OF SURVIVING WIFE—ABANDONMENT.

Where a surviving wife executes a deed of the homestead under an agreement allowing her to return and use the property as her home, such agreement is not a substitute for the homestead user after it becomes evident that she will not return.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. § 285; Dec. Dig. § 145.*]

Appeal from District Court, Sabine County; W. B. Powell, Judge.

Action by Mrs. A. I. Peddy against V. H. Vickers and another. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Goodrich & Synnott, for appellants. Geo. A. Holland and E. P. Padgett, for appellee.

JAMES, C. J. The action was by appellee, in trespass to try title to 100 acres of land, against V. H. Vickers and W. F. Goodrich. Defendants, besides the general issue, pleaded limitations and alleged: That they purchased the land from Nellie Brown, a widow, and her children; that about 1880 Cary Brown, the husband of said Nellie, deeded the land to A. J. Peddy; the husband of plaintiff, at which time it was homestead, Cary Brown having theretofore abandoned his family; that Nellie did not join in said deed; that she and her children continued to reside upon and to claim the land as their homestead, and adverse to all others, up to the date of the transfers to defendants; that said deed was in fraud of the wife and was void. Plaintiff, by supplemental petition, alleged: That Cary and Nellie Brown were never married; that when Peddy bought from Cary Brown he called upon Nellie Brown and informed her of his intention, and she then informed plaintiff that she was not Cary's wife, and in reliance upon this statement the land was bought; that plaintiff then rented the land to Nellie, who continued to occupy it as plaintiff's tenant and never asserted any ownership, and because of this defendants are estopped to claim that Cary and Nellie were married and from claiming she had homestead rights; and, that if she ever resided upon the land as her home, then long prior to the time she conveyed same to defendants she had abandoned it as her home and thereby confirmed the sale of her husband, and she and defendants are estopped from claiming it now. The cause was tried by the judge, who gave plaintiff a judgment for an undivided half of the land upon the ground that the land was community property of Cary and wife, and Cary having died, and his deed, being a general warranty deed, operated, after the termination of the homestead use, to vest in plaintiff the husband's one half interest, by estoppel. The other half was given, 31½ acres to Vickers and 18½ acres to Goodrich. From this judgment Vickers and Goodrich have appealed.

The first and second assignments of error seek to question the judge's following conclusions of fact: "(6) I find that his wife, Nellie Brown, lived upon and used the land in controversy as her homestead until the latter part of the year 1900, or first of the year 1901, at which time she left the place to live with her kindred, being old and feeble and unable to take care of herself; that no one lived on the place after she left it, or cultivated any part of it. (7) I find that Nellie Brown and Laura Brown conveyed by deed to V. H. Vickers, for the sum of $75, all of the 100 acres that had not been previously conveyed to W. F. Goodrich by deed dated May 5, 1902, which was after she had left the place." The proposition made under these assignments is as follows: "Nellie Brown had not removed her household effects from the land in controversy until after she had sold out to V. H. Vickers in May, 1902. The land, less the 18½ acres which she had previously sold to Goodrich, was her homestead at the time she transferred the land to V. H. Vickers, May 30, 1902, and when she visited her daughter she was at the time only temporarily absent from her home."

The property being homestead, the deed from her husband to Peddy was void as to the wife, and upon no theory did it convey any title to the land except by force of the covenant of warranty it contained, and the estoppel in this respect would operate against his heirs and upon his interest, which was an undivided half. As against his wife's homestead right, the deed was of no effect whatever. He died about 1881, but so long as she continued to live upon the property, and until she had in fact abandoned it as a home, no possessory rights could be asserted under the Peddy deed against her, although Peddy may have had a good title to an undivided half by estoppel against Cary's heirs. Doubtless it is with reference to this theory that appellants question the correctness of said findings of fact, and insist that the evidence showed that Nellie had not in fact abandoned, but was remaining away only temporarily from, this place as her home. It is evident that the court concluded from the evidence that she had finally abandoned all intention of returning to the place, and the evidence, notably that of Nellie herself, fully sustains such conclusion; but stress seems to be laid on certain testimony that, when she made the sale to Vickers, she had an oral understanding with him that she could still use the place for a home as long as she chose to do so. There is authority that such an agreement is valid and enforceable, though not embodied in the deed. 2 Devlin on Deeds, § 766. Assuming that she continued, after executing the deed to Vickers, and after leaving the place, to have the right under this agreement to return and use the property as her home, we do not think the existence of the agreement constituted of itself an absolute substitute for the homestead user. It might so long as she entertained an expectation to return, but certainly not after it became evident from the facts and circumstances that she would not return. We therefore overrule said assignments.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

Under the third assignment are three propositions, which we do not sustain. They assert that the deed from the husband to Peddy was an absolute nullity and conveyed nothing, either in present or in futuro, and could have no effect in any way as an estoppel or against his heirs. The deed contained a covenant of general warranty. The following cases appear to settle the question against the contentions of appellants: Colonial & U. S. Mortgage Co., Ltd., v. Thetford, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 152, 66 S. W. 103; Ley v. Hahn, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 208, 81 S. W. 354.

The fourth assignment is predicated upon the theory that nothing was capable of passing by the deed from Cary Brown to Peddy, and is therefore overruled.

We likewise overrule the fifth. The deeds from Nellie Brown to Goodrich and Vickers could convey only what she owned. The interest which her husband and his children, as his heirs, owned, was vested in Peddy by estoppel, and the children's deed conveyed nothing. Goodrich obtained 18½ acres of the undivided 50 acres which belonged to Nellie Brown, and Vickers the remainder, or 31½ acres, as found by the court.

In pursuance of what has been said, we overrule the proposition stated under the sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth assignments of error.

We overrule the tenth assignment, for the reason that plaintiff's right of possession, under the deed from Cary Brown, was subject to the right of Nellie Brown to use the property. Her possession was referable to this right and was not inconsistent with plaintiff's right under said deed.

Affirmed.

WEAD v. HELPERT et al.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 28, 1909.)

1. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 87*)—ABANDONMENT OF CONTRACT—EFFECT AS TO RIGHT TO DEPOSIT TO SECURE PERFORMANCE.

Defendant agreed to convey land to plaintiff, and to insure performance plaintiff deposited $300 in a bank, and defendant deposited a note for the same amount, the note and money to be held by the bank as liquidated damages to be paid to the one who was in default, and the contract was subsequently extended 20 days. Held, that either party would have until the extended date in which to perform or tender performance; and, where neither performs or tenders performance on that date, no cause of action exists in favor of either party for the amount deposited by the other, unless one of the parties before the time expired had abandoned the contract, and expressed to the other his determination not to perform, and in the event of one party's giving such notice, the other party need not tender performance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 147; Dec. Dig. § 87.*]

2. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 352*)—REMEDIES OF PURCHASER—ACTIONS FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT—EVIDENCE.

Evidence, in an action by a purchaser to recover a deposit made by the vendor to secure performance of a contract to convey land, held sufficient to make defendant's breach a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 1059; Dec. Dig. § 352.*]

Appeal from Millam County Court; John Watson, Judge.

Action by August Wead against Raymond Helpert and another. A verdict was directed for defendants, on which judgment was rendered, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded.

M. G. Cox and W. T. Hefley, for appellant. J. K. Freeman, for appellees.

FISHER, C. J. This is a suit by the appellant against appellee Helpert and the Burlington State Bank to recover $300 deposited in the bank by plaintiff, and a $300 note there deposited by the appellee Helpert. These deposits were made by the appellant and appellee, respectively, and so held by the bank as liquidated damages to be recovered and paid to the one who may not be in default in the performance of a certain contract concerning the sale of land, wherein Helpert agreed to convey to the appellant certain lands owned by him upon the payment by appellant of the amount agreed upon. This contract was to be executed January 1, 1908. Appellant contends that by agreement between him and Helpert the time for the execution of the contract was extended to the 20th of January, 1908. This is denied by Helpert. It is also contended by appellant that after the agreement of extension Helpert refused to recognize the agreement and to execute the contract. Helpert answered, and by cross-action asserted a claim to the amount deposited by the appellant. The trial court peremptorily instructed a verdict in favor of Helpert, and to the effect that the appellant recover nothing in his action against the appellee. Verdict was returned accordingly, upon which judgment was rendered.

We are not going to take up and discuss each of the assignments of errors. They are all overruled, except those discussed in the opinion. Upon the question of extension there was a conflict of evidence. Appellant and his witness Vassling testified that on the 30th of December, 1907, appellant and appellee entered into an agreement to extend the time of performance of the contract to January 20, 1908. This is denied by Helpert, who testified that there was no such agreement. The other facts relating to these questions will be stated in the opinion.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

If there was an extension to January 20th, either party would have to that day to perform or tender performance, and as the evidence shows that neither performed, or offered to perform, on that day, no cause of action exists in favor of either party for the amount deposited by the other, unless one of the parties, before the time expired, had abandoned the contract, and expressed to the other his determination not to perform. There is evidence of plaintiff to the effect that on January 3d the defendant Helpert informed him that he would not perform the agreement as extended. Upon this subject Wead testified that on the 3d of January, 1908, Helpert came to him, and said that he would call off the trade and release the forfeit. Helpert denied this, but said that after January 20, 1908, he told Wead that he released the forfeit, as Wead was a poor man. Wead testified that Helpert refused, on January 3, 1908, to stand by the extension agreement, and he wrote to the parties at McGregor that he would not need the money, because Helpert had called off the trade. At another place Wead testified that he expected to obtain the money from parties living at McGregor. If there was an extension, but before the time expired Helpert had to the plaintiff expressed his determination to abandon the agreement, and not to perform it, the plaintiff could treat it as at an end, and would not be required thereafter to do the useless thing of making a formal tender to Helpert, who had just, in effect, informed him that he would not receive it. Upon these facts, if true, a cause of action arose in plaintiff's favor against the defendant and the bank to recover the amount deposited by the defendant, and also the sum deposited by himself, and this phase of the case should have been submitted to the jury. On the other hand, if there was an extension of time for 20 days, and there was no refusal on January 3d by the defendant to perform, neither party could recover from the other, because, as before said, there is no evidence showing a performance, or offer to perform, by either on January 20th, and for the failure in this respect no legal excuse is shown, except the fact referred to, if it be a fact. In such a case each party would be entitled to withdraw his deposit with the bank. If there was no contract of extension, Helpert is entitled to recover, because the undisputed evidence of both the plaintiff and defendant shows that, before January 1st, the time fixed for execution of the contract by both parties, plaintiff had informed Helpert that he would not be prepared at that time to pay the sum agreed. If Helpert did not agree to extend the time, and if plaintiff failed to comply as agreed, the previous statement of the plaintiff should be treated as a refusal to comply, upon which Helpert's cause of action arose for the amounts deposited under the agreement.

For the reasons stated, the judgment is reversed and the cause remanded.

Reversed and remanded.

FT. WORTH & D. C. RY. CO. v. ANDERSON.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 15, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 13, 1909.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 113*)—LIABILITY FOR INJURIES TO SERVANT—RAILROAD TRACKS.

It is the duty of a railroad company to use reasonable care to have its roadbed free of obstructions calculated to cause injury to its employes.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 224; Dec. Dig. § 113.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 265*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—PRESUMPTIONS.

That a switchman is injured by having his foot caught in a baling wire on the track is not sufficient evidence of negligence on the part of the railroad company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 955; Dec. Dig. § 235.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 229*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

It is the duty of a switchman to exercise ordinary care to avoid injury to himself.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 674; Dec. Dig. § 229.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 240*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

It is negligence for an experienced switchman to attempt to ride on the brake beam of an approaching car, according to a custom of the railroad company's employes, instead of using the steps on the side, which are reasonably safe and intended for such use.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 753; Dec. Dig. § 240.*]

Appeal from District Court, Childress County; S. P. Huff, Judge.

Action by W. P. Anderson against the Ft. Worth & Denver City Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed and rendered.

August 6, 1907, appellee was in the employ of appellant as a switchman in its yards at Amarillo. He was then about 28 years old, and had had several years' experience in such work. At about 9:30 p. m. of the day mentioned, while attempting to get on a moving freight car, appellee had his right foot crushed as the result of one of the car's wheels running over it. After an engine pulling eight or nine cars had moved with them off a switch or side track to and southeast on the main line track, appellee in the discharge of his duty had set the switch so the train might be backed on the main line northeast to another switch about 250 feet distant which it was to take. He then signaled the engineer to back the train, and, standing astraddle of one of the rails of the track, awaited the approach of the train as it backed northeast. When it got within his reach, he grasped a handhold on the end of the first of the cars approaching him, placed his left foot on the brake beam thereof situated in front of the wheels, and attempted to place his right foot on the beam. Because, he testified, his said foot was caught by a piece of baling wire about nine feet long, with its ends tied together, as he attempted to place it on the beam, his foot was, instead, thrown under the wheel of the car. In his petition appellee alleged negligence on the part of appellant in permitting the wire to be on its track or roadbed. Appellant answered by a general denial and a general plea of negligence and assumed risk on the part of appellee. In his charge the court instructed the jury to find for appellee if they believed "that his foot was entangled in a wire, which was then on the defendant's track or roadbed, and thereby jerked the foot of the plaintiff under the wheel of the car," and further believed "that defendant or its employees in charge of its yard at Amarillo were negligent in allowing said wire to get and remain on said track," etc. The appeal is from a judgment in appellee's favor for the sum of $3,000.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

Spoons, Thompson & Barwise, Fires & Diggs, and J. M. Chambers, for appellant. W. B. Howard and William H. Allen, for appellee.

WILLSON, C. J. (after stating the facts as above). After careful consideration of the record we are of the opinion that appellant's first assignment of error should be sustained on both the grounds urged, to wit, that the evidence failed to show appellant and did show appellee, to have been guilty of negligence. It was appellant's duty to use ordinary or reasonable care to have its track and roadbed so free of obstructions calculated to cause injury to its employees as to render same reasonably safe for appellee's use in the discharge of his duties. It may be conceded that the wire referred to by appellee, if on the track, was an obstruction it was appellant's duty to use ordinary or reasonable care to discover and remove. But we think there is not in the record evidence sufficient to support a finding that it had not exercised such care. Testimony showing the wire to have been on the track and appellee to have been injured because it was there alone we think was not sufficient to support such a finding. 4 Thompson on Neg. p. 76. It does not appear from the record when the wire got on the track. Without fault on appellant's part, it may have fallen to the track from one of the cars which the evidence shows only an instant before had passed the point where appellee was when injured, or it might only a moment before he was injured have been thrown on the track by a person for whose conduct appellant was not responsible. In either of such events, reasonably it could not be said that in the exercise of proper care appellant should have discovered and removed the wire before the train as it was backed towards the switch reached and injured appellee. And logically, therefore, it could not be said in such a state of the evidence that it was sufficient to support a finding of negligence on the part of appellant on the ground that it had permitted the wire to be on its track. 3 Elliott on Railroads, p. 721.

Furthermore, it does not appear from the record whether the wire was wholly on top of the ground, where by a proper and timely inspection it should have been discovered, or, instead, was so embedded in and covered by the ground as to have rendered a failure by appellant to discover and remove it excusable. And this omission in the evidence seems to be due entirely to the failure of appellee when he was injured promptly to assert the claim he afterwards made, that the cause of his injury was the wire on the track. The wire, it seems, was seen by appellee alone. Directly after he was hurt, he accounted for the accident by saying his foot had slipped from the brake beam. Not until the next day thereafterwards did he say anything about a wire having had anything to do with the accident. A search was then made by appellant's agents at the place where appellee testified he had thrown the wire, but they failed to find it. An inspection of the wire or of the portion of the track it was on or under or of both the wire and the track might have furnished evidence tending to show whether at the time it caught appellee's foot the wire was wholly, or only partially, and if the latter to what extent, on top of the ground, and how long it had been in the position it was in. From such evidence an inference of negligence on appellant's part might or might not properly have been drawn. Without reference to how or where it got there, such an inference could not, we think, be drawn from evidence merely showing the wire to have been on the track in such a position as to catch appellee's foot, and thereby cause him to be injured. The case does not, we think, belong to the class of cases in which negligence may be presumed from proof merely of an accident and a resulting injury to the party complaining. The only case among the number cited by appellee as supporting his contention which seems to do so is that of Texarkana & Ft. S. Ry. Co. v. Toliver, 37 Tex. Civ. App. 437, 84 S. W. 375. There the plaintiff, a switchman, as he was coming from between two cars which he had uncoupled, stumbled over a rock lying by the side of the track, and in an effort to keep from falling stepped into an open frog which held him while a car ran over his leg. The defendant's switching yard had been inspected at 7:30 a. m., and accident occurred and after the yard was inspected that morning." The evidence was held to be sufficient to support the finding of the jury that the defendant was guilty of negligence in failing to discover and remove the rock, and to support the further finding that it was guilty of negligence in permitting the frog to be open. The latter finding we think furnished ample support for the judgment, but on the meager facts stated in the report of the case we cannot agree that the finding of negligence in not discovering and removing the rock was supported by the evidence.

While engaged in discharging his duties as appellant's switchman, it was appellee's duty to exercise ordinary care to avoid injury to himself. If he failed to exercise such care, and if his failure contributed as a direct cause thereof to the injury he suffered, he was not entitled to recover. If it should be said that he did not exercise proper care in taking the position he did take on the track, or in attempting as he did attempt to ride on the box car, it would follow that it should be said that the judgment in his favor is erroneous, because contrary to law and the evidence; for it cannot be disputed that his taking such position and attempting to so ride on the car contributed as a proximate cause thereof to the injury he sustained. Testifying as a witness in his own behalf, appellee stated that, after closing the switch, he stood astraddle of one of the rails of the track as the train approached him and until the car in question as it approached him got within his reach, when he grasped the handhold on the end thereof, and attempted to place his foot on the brake beam. There was evidence tending to show a custom among switchmen and brakemen to make the use appellee was attempting to make of the handhold and brake beam, and there was evidence to the contrary. But the evidence was uncontroverted that neither the handhold nor the brake beam had been constructed for any such use; on the contrary, it appeared that the handhold was intended for use in aiding employes in coupling and uncoupling cars, and that the brake beam, as a part of instrumentalities for that purpose, was intended only for use in controlling the movement of the car. It would seem that no other evidence was needed to show that appellee was occupying a dangerous position than his bare statement of the fact that he stood astraddle of one of the rails of the track, awaiting the approach of the train, or that he engaged in a dangerous undertaking when from that position, as he testified, he attempted to get upon the brake beam of the car when the train reached him; but nevertheless it was shown by ous was the undertaking, as testified to by one of the witnesses, that "nine times out of ten you are caught." The evidence was uncontroverted that the car appellee attempted to so ride upon was equipped on the right-hand side thereof as it approached appellee and near the end thereof farthest from him, and on the left-hand side thereof as it approached him and near the end thereof closest to him, with ladders or steps constructed and intended for use by employes in riding upon it in the discharge of such duties as appellee at the time he was injured was engaged in discharging, and that the same were reasonably safe for such use. We have, then, a case where the master has discharged his duty to the servant by furnishing him a reasonably safe place in which to ride on the car, where the servant has refused to use the place so furnished to him, and, instead, has attempted to use another and dangerous place not provided nor intended to be used for the purpose. In the absence of a sufficient excuse for it, such conduct on the part of the employe clearly would be negligence as matter of law. Does such an excuse appear from the evidence in the record? We think not. The fact that it may have been customary for employes to so use the handhold and brake beam did not furnish such an excuse. Having provided for appellee's use a reasonably safe place on which to ride the car in the discharge of his duties, appellant should not be held liable for consequences resulting to appellee from his choice of another and dangerous place on which to ride the car, when the place chosen was not constructed or provided, nor authorized or intended, by appellant to be used for such a purpose. The excuse urged by appellee for attempting to use the dangerous position chosen by him was that he could not signal the engineer from the ladder on the left-hand side of the car, and could not see ahead of the moving train from the ladder on the right-hand side thereof. The witness Sanders, who was assisting appellee, was at the switch 250 feet northeast from appellee, and evidently for that distance at least there was no necessity that he should keep a lookout in the direction towards which the train was moving. We do not think the excuse given is a sufficient one. In Montgomery v. Railway Co., 109 Mo. App. 88, 83 S. W. 66, a case in practically all its facts like this one so far as the question now being considered is concerned, the court denominated the excuse a "makeshift," and held the plaintiff to be guilty of contributory negligence. In discussing the facts of that case the court said: "We think plaintiff made out a case against himself. In other words, he proved that his own negligence directly contributed to his injury. He took a position upon the car by placing one foot on the brake beam and with one hand grasping the handhold on the end of the car, from which he was thrown while the car was passing over a frog of the track; the fall resulting in his injury. He placed himself in the most dangerous position on the car that he could have selected as the train was moving backwards, and where he would almost certainly be injured should he happen to fall from his place, as the result demonstrated; and also where he was liable to be injured should the train back upon other cars that were on the track. The physical fact was shown by the photograph, and by plaintiff's testimony, that at the other end of the car, but on its side, there was not only a handhold, but also a stirrup for the foot, which was a safe position, and which, had he occupied, would have prevented the injury. It was further shown that plaintiff could have signaled the engineer as well from the north end of the car as from the south end. But plaintiff stated that he was at his proper place, from which he could guard the train from backing upon other cars on the track. This appears to have been a makeshift excuse for his being there, and it must have been so considered by the trial court. Such a pretense ought not to excuse his negligence," etc. And see Burns v. Chronister Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 87 S. W. 163. We have examined the authorities cited by appellee in his brief as supporting his contention that the evidence was sufficient to authorize the finding of the jury that he was not guilty of contributory negligence. As we understand them, they do not support the contention made, and are of little value when the particular facts of this case are kept in mind.

It does not appear probable from the record that other evidence justifying a judgment in appellee's favor could be produced on another trial of the case. In reversing the judgment of the court below, a judgment therefor will be here rendered in favor of appellant.

INTERNATIONAL & G. N. R. CO. et al. v. FLORY.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 24, 1909. On Rehearing, April 28, 1909.)

1. COURTS (§ 121*)—JURISDICTION—AMOUNT—INTEREST.

In an action for damages, the interest demanded on the damages sought to be recovered forms a part of the damages; and therefore, if the amount of the damages and interest exceed the jurisdiction of the county court, such court has no jurisdiction of the action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. § 419; Dec. Dig. § 121.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1106*)—DISPOSITION OF CAUSE—REMAND.

Where the amended petition, in an action for damages begun in the county court, alleges a cause of action for an amount beyond the jurisdiction of the county court, and the original petition is not in the record, the case will not be dismissed on appeal, but will be remanded for trial on the original petition, if it states a case within the court's jurisdiction, or on some proper amendment thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4386, 4387, 4392; Dec. Dig. § 1106.*]

Appeal from Bexar County Court; P. H. Shook, Judge.

Action by Joe Flory against the International & Great Northern Railroad Company and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed and remanded on rehearing.

King & Morris, Hicks & Hicks, Terry, Calvin & Mills, and Houston Bros., for appellants. Cobbs & Cobbs, Jno. H. Cunningham, and Will A. Morris, for appellee.

JAMES, C. J. By these motions our attention is called for the first time to the question whether or not the pleadings disclose a case cognizable by the county court. Appellants now ask that the judgment be reversed and the cause dismissed for want of jurisdiction of the trial court. The amended petition alleged that plaintiff, by reason of the negligence of the defendant, was damaged in reference to one car of onions shipped from San Antonio, Tex., to New York in the sum of $580, and in reference to the other car in the sum of $419, and prayed for judgment against defendants for the aforesaid sum of $999, together with interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from July 27, 1903. In the original opinion delivered in this case we affirmed the judgment of the county court for $400. The question now presented is a fundamental one, and, if appellants are right in their contention that the demand or matter in controversy exceeded $1,000, the trial court, and this court on appeal, are without jurisdiction of the cause. We think there is no use of an extended discussion of the question, as it is concluded by the following decisions: Baker v. Smelser, 88 Tex. 26, 29 S. W. 377, 83 L. R. A. 163; Schultz v. Tessman, 92 Tex. 491, 49 S. W. 1081; W. U. Tel. Co. v. Noland (Tex. Civ. App.) 77 S. W. 1031; Railway v. Sheppard, 76 S. W. 800. The result of these and other decisions is that the interest demanded formed a part of the damages sought to be recovered. Therefore the amount sued for exceeded the jurisdiction of the county court.

The question then arises as to the proper disposition to make of the case here. There could be no purpose in remanding the cause for another trial, save to give plaintiff an opportunity to amend by reducing his de-bring a new action without waiting for the mandate in this cause.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The opinion heretofore delivered will be withdrawn, the judgment of affirmance set aside, the judgment of the county court reversed, and the cause dismissed.

On Rehearing.

There is one matter suggested in this motion which we regard as substantial. The original petition in the case is not in the record; and, though the amended petition stated a case beyond the court's jurisdiction, the original petition may not have done so. We have no way of knowing of this officially. In view of the possibility of such fact the just and proper disposition to make of this case is to remand the cause, instead of dismissing it. If the original petition states a case within the court's jurisdiction, the cause may yet be tried there on that petition, or on proper amendments thereof.

Cause remanded.

TEXAS & P. RY. CO. v. JOHNSON.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 29, 1909.)

1. TRIAL (§ 203*)—INSTRUCTIONS—EVIDENCE.

Where, in an action for injuries to a servant, the evidence tends to show facts from which the jury might infer contributory negligence, it is error to refuse a special charge grouping those facts on that issue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 477-479; Dec. Dig. § 203.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 180*)—FELLOW SERVANTS—STATUTES—"OPERATING CARS."

Where a "fire knocker," for the purpose of moving blocked cars of wood, to unload which was a part of his duty, was attempting to remove the block so as to move the cars a short distance, and another "fire knocker" was on top of the cars signaling the engineer for the same purpose, they were engaged in operating cars under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4560f, exempting persons engaged in "operating the cars" from the fellow-servant rule.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 359-368; Dec. Dig. § 180.*]

Appeal from District Court, Gregg County; W. C. Buford, Judge.

Action by Leroy Johnson against the Texas & Pacific Railway Company for personal injuries. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed, and cause remanded.

Young & Stinchcomb, for appellant. J. N. Campbell and Edwin Lacy, for appellee.

HODGES, J. The appellee brought this suit and recovered a judgment against the appellant for injuries sustained in having is known as a fire knocker; his business being to knock fire from the fire boxes of engines after they were brought in from their run. In his employment as a fire knocker, it was also his duty to unload wood from cars on a track near by, and frequently such cars had to be moved along the track a short distance by an engine to get them in proper place for unloading. The track on which the car loads of wood were placed was curved, and it appears also to have been upon a little incline. On the 26th day of February, 1908, the appellee and one Curtis Smith, who was also a fire knocker, were ordered by their superior to unload three cars of wood then standing on the track near the roundhouse. In order to hold these cars in position, the wheels or trucks had been scotched by having sticks of wood placed in front so as to prevent any forward movement. The train of which these cars formed a part consisted, in addition to the cars loaded with wood, of a dead engine and one or two other box cars. Before beginning their work of unloading, it was necessary for appellee and Smith to have these cars moved forward some 20 or 30 feet in order to be in proper position. An engine was accordingly brought out of the roundhouse and attached to the front end for that purpose. The testimony shows that the appellee and Curtis Smith, after the engine had been coupled on, walked on back toward the rear end of the train of cars, removing the scotches or blocks of wood from in front of the trucks. When they reached the car next to the last, Smith mounted that car for the purpose of loosening the breaks and of giving the signal to the engineer to start. After he had gone upon the car, the appellee undertook to remove a block from in front of the rear truck of the last car, and while doing so the train moved, his hand was caught, and some of his fingers mashed off. Upon a trial before a jury he was awarded a recovery of $725 as damages.

The first group of assignments complain of the insufficiency of the testimony to sustain the verdict of the jury. In view of the fact that we have concluded to reverse the case upon other grounds, it will be unnecessary to notice those assignments.

The sixth assignment complains of the refusal of the court to give the following special charge: "If you find from the testimony that the stick of wood or block was fast under the wheel of the car, and that the plaintiff took hold of said stick of wood or block for the purpose of removing it when the wheel should move sufficiently to release it, and that he expected the wheel to move and that the provision in article 4502 must mean that he has or owns the property so circumstanced that it may be shipped within the time named by the statute after delivery of the cars at the point demanded.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

Appeal from Mitchell County Court.

Action by Oz Smith against the Texas & Pacific Railway Company for a penalty for failure to furnish cars. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Earnest & Smith, for appellant. Ed. J. Hamner, for appellee.

CONNER, C. J. Since the decision of the case of Houston & Texas Central Railroad Company v. J. A. Mayes, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 606, 83 S. W. 53, by the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third District, in which writ of error was subsequently refused, a discussion of this case seems superfluous. In the case cited the two principal contentions of appellant herein were expressly decided adversely to appellant. It was held, not only that the penalty statute (Rev. St. 1895, art. 4497) applied in cases of interstate shipments, but also that an application in writing to the local agent of the company at the station from which it was desired to make the shipment was in substantial conformity with the statute on that subject.

The further contention, that the judgment and the court's findings are unauthorized by both the pleadings and evidence, we think, must be overruled. The statute (Rev. St. 1895, art. 4502) provides that he (the shipper) must show by evidence that he had the property he desired to ship "on hand at the time any demand for cars was made." It could hardly have been intended by this to require that the intending shipper should have the property at the immediate point of shipment at the time of demand, inasmuch as the statute gives the railway company as much as 6 days from the time of the demand within which to furnish the cars, and the shipper 48 hours within which to thereafter load them. Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497 and 4500. So that the provision in article 4502, to the effect that the shipper must have the freight on hand, must mean that he has or owns the property so circumstanced as that it may be shipped within the time named by the statute after the delivery of the cars at the point demanded. If this be the proper construction, we think, in the absence of special exception, the petition sufficiently alleged that appellee had the cattle he intended to ship "on hand," and that the proof on that subject tends to support the court's finding to that effect.

INTERNATIONAL & G. N. R. CO. v. HOOD.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. Nov. 28, 1908. On Rehearing, May 15, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 544*)—PROCEEDINGS NOT IN RECORD—STATEMENT OF FACTS—EFFECT OF ABSENCE.

If the record contains no statement of facts, alleged errors in instructions, the admission of testimony, and the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict cannot be considered on appeal, unless there is error so apparent, when considered in connection with the pleading and verdict, as to show that the verdict was rendered by improper instructions, or upon an issue not made by the pleadings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2412-2420, 2478, 2479; Dec. Dig. § 544.*]

On Rehearing by Appellant.

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 644*)—PROCEEDINGS NOT IN RECORD—WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS—TIME OF OBJECTING.

Copying the statement of facts into the record on appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals, instead of sending up the original statement, as required by Gen. Laws 1907, p. 509, c. 24, is an irregularity which is waived unless proper objection is made; and, under Court of Civil Appeals rule 8 (67 S. W. xiv), providing that, unless all motions relating to informalities in the manner of bringing the case into court be filed at least 48 hours before 10 o'clock a. m. on the day on which the case is set for hearing, they shall be deemed waived, an objection to appellant's failure to bring up the original statement of facts, made the day before the case was set for hearing, was too late, even if appellee did not waive the objection by preparing and filing a brief contesting appellant's right to a reversal without objection to considering the statement copied into the record.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2795-2798; Dec. Dig. § 644.*]

On Rehearing by Appellee.

3. TRIAL (§ 200*)—INSTRUCTIONS—REQUESTS.

In an action for damages for not putting plaintiff's wife and daughter off the train near the station at their request, when they discovered that they had no tickets, and putting them off in an improper place, at a distance from the station, a requested instruction that, if they requested to be let off at the place where they got off, and the conductor used ordinary care in putting them off there, plaintiff cannot recover was sufficiently covered by a charge that, if the conductor stopped the train on their request as soon as he might with the use of ordinary diligence, plaintiff could not recover.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 651-659; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 384*)—EJECTION OF PASSENGER—INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for damages for putting plaintiff's wife and daughter off defendant's train at a distance from the station, and at an improper place, after they had requested the conductor to put them off near the station upon discovering that they did not have tickets, where the conductor's testimony differed from plaintiff's as to whether the train was stopped when they first requested to be put off, an instruction that, if plaintiff's wife informed the conductor when they were near the depot that they had forgotten their tickets, and requested that they be put off, but the conductor disregarded their request, and negligently carried them on a considerable distance further than they would have gone had he used reasonable diligence to stop the train, and put them off at an improper place, etc., defendant would be liable did not make defendant's liability depend on whether the train was stopped pursuant to the request of plaintiff's wife, but went to the issue of negligence in putting them off where the train was stopped, and hence did not conflict with another instruction that the conductor was not bound to permit plaintiff's wife to ride without tickets, and could put her off.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 384.*]

5. CARRIERS (§ 363*)—PASSENGERS—EJECTION—PLACE.

Women who had bought tickets, but innocently left them at the station, were not strictly trespassers, and the conductor should not have ejected them at a distance from the station in a deep ditch, where they could not alight without exposing their persons, if he could have put them off at a more suitable place.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1445, 1446; Dec. Dig. § 363.*]

6. CARRIERS (§ 380*)—EJECTION OF PASSENGER—PLEADING—ALLEGATIONS—"MENTAL DISTRESS."

Allegations that plaintiff was humiliated, mortified, and shamed by being put off a train at a place where she was compelled to expose her person in alighting showed "mental distress," though that was not alleged in terms.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 380.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 6, pp. 5343-5344.]

7. DAMAGES (§ 216*)—INSTRUCTIONS—MENTAL DISTRESS—DOUBLE DAMAGES.

An instruction permitting recovery for "any pain of body, any mental distress, any humiliation or shame," etc., suffered by plaintiff did not permit the jury to award double damages for mental distress; the terms "humiliation," etc., showing mental distress.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 548-555; Dec. Dig. § 216.*]

8. CARRIERS (§ 382*)—ACTIONS—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action for damages for ejecting plaintiff's wife and daughter from defendant's passenger train at an improper place, because they had left their tickets at the station, as a result of which they were humiliated and forced to walk back a mile and a half to the station on a cold, raw day, the walk and the shock making the wife sick, a verdict for $1,000, though large was not so excessive as to require reversal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 1490; Dec. Dig. § 382.*]

Appeal from District Court, Navarro County; L. B. Cobb, Judge.

Action by T. J. Hood against the International & Great Northern Railroad Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

John M. King and Baker & Thomas, for appellant. Richard Mays, for appellee.

RAINEY, C. J. This is an action by appellee, Hood, against the railroad company to recover damages for the wrongful ejection from its passenger train of his wife, at a place which was not a regular stopping place designed for passengers. It was alleged that the conductor's manner was rude and insulting, and that she had to walk some distance, was exposed to disagreeable weather, and was made sick by reason of said treatment, etc. The defendant answered by general exception, general denial, and contributory negligence in that she was on board the train without a ticket entitling her to transportation, etc. A trial resulted in a judgment in favor of plaintiff for $1,000, and the railroad company appeals.

There is copied into the record what purports to be a statement of facts. The appellee objects to this court considering said statement, as the law requires the original statement of facts to be sent up with the record, and precludes a copy thereof from being included in the transcript. Gen. Laws 1907, p. 509, c. 24. The objection being interposed to our consideration of said statement of facts, it cannot be considered by us. This leaves the case without any statement of facts.

The assignments of error attack the charge of the court, the admission of testimony, and the lack of evidence to support the verdict. These assignments cannot be considered, as there is no error "so glaringly apparent, when taken in connection with the pleading and verdict, as to leave no doubt but that the finding of the jury was controlled by the improper instruction." Nor is it evident that the verdict was rendered upon an issue not made by the pleading. Railway Company v. Waggoner (Tex. Civ. App.) 109 S. W. 971.

The judgment is affirmed.

On Rehearing by Appellant.

Upon a reconsideration of this case we have reached the conclusion that we erred in our former disposition of the case in holding that the statement of facts could not be considered as it was copied in the transcript, and was not the original. When the statement of facts is copied in the record, instead of having the original sent up, unless objection is made, the irregularity will be considered waived, and the said statement will be considered in deciding the case. Ins. Co. v. Ry. Co. (Tex.) 116 S. W. 46. There was a waiver in this case by the appellee. He prepared a brief contesting appellant's right to a reversal of the judgment, had it printed and filed in the case, and raised no objection to the consideration of the statement of facts copied in the record until the day before the cause was submitted, when he filed a supplemental brief objecting to the consideration of said statement of facts. If it could be said that the briefing of the case by appellee was not a waiver, the failure to file an objection until the day before submission was too late.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

Rule 8 (67 S. W. xiv) for the Courts of Civil Appeals reads: "All motions relating to informalities in the manner of bringing a case into court, shall be filed and entered by the clerk on the motion docket at least forty-eight hours before 10 o'clock a. m. of the day on which 'the cause is set for a hearing,' under section 23 of the act entitled 'An act to organize the Courts of Civil Appeals, to define their jurisdiction and powers, and to prescribe the mode of procedure therein,' approved April 13, 1892; otherwise the objection shall be considered as waived if it can be waived by the party; such filing and docketing will be sufficient notice of the motion." Appellee's supplemental brief was but a motion to strike out the statement of facts for being a copy, and, not the original, a mere informality that could be waived. The appellee, not having filed his motion 48 hours before 10 o'clock a. m. of the day on which the cause was submitted, comes too late, and the motion for rehearing is granted, and the cause will be considered on its merits.

Appellee's cause of action, as alleged, in substance, is that his wife and daughter boarded the appellant's train at Mertens, Hill county, holding tickets entitling them to transportation to Leroy, McLennan county, and return. After visiting the country near Leroy for a few days, they left the country for Leroy to return home. Upon reaching Leroy in their haste they boarded the train, leaving their pocketbook containing the tickets in the wagon in which they had gone to Leroy. After the train pulled out the conductor came around collecting tickets, and when he reached them they told him of having accidentally forgotten their tickets and of having left them on the seat of the wagon, and, having no money to pay their fare, they requested the conductor to stop the train, which had only run a short distance, and was moving slowly, that they might get off and get their tickets, which he declined to do in a gruff, crabbed, and insulting manner, informing them that he was going to put them off the train, and then left them. After some little time had elapsed, and the train had gotten under headway, he returned and stopped the train, and put them off in a deep cut, where there was a deep ditch, the distance from the lowest step to the bottom of the ditch being about five feet. That the negro porter placed a foot stool for them which turned over, and was not straightened. In getting off, by reason of the distance they had to step, they were caused to expose their lower limbs, which was very humiliating. This point was about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the station, which they had to walk in returning. Mrs. Hood was in bad health. It was a raw, disagreeable day, etc. That the shock and walk made her sick, and she suffered humiliation in consequence of the acts of the conductor. There was evidence introduced by plaintiff in support of his allegations. The appellant introduced contradictory testimony.

The conductor testified: "I remember the occasion of Mrs. Hood and daughter getting on my train at Leroy in March, 1907. I helped them on the train myself. After getting on the train I gave the signal to the engineer to go ahead, and I walked from the front car into the second car, and as I came to them and asked for tickets, the older one of the ladies commenced searching for her ticket. I stood right by her side in the aisle, and after she had searched a while she said, 'I left my purse and ticket on the seat of the wagon.' I said, 'Madam, what do you want to do about it?' She says, 'Can't you stop and let me get off?' I said, 'Yes, madam,' and I turned round and pulled the signal whistle, and the train stopped. The porter came in and got the stool and put it down on the ground, and put his foot on it to hold it, and we helped them off." There was also testimony tending to contradict the plaintiffs as to the distance the train stopped from Leroy, and as to the assistance they received in alighting from the train.

The court refused to give a special charge requested by appellant, which is assigned as error, as follows: "If you believe from the evidence in this case that, at or about the place where plaintiff's wife and daughter disembarked from said train, plaintiff's wife requested the conductor to let them off at said place, and that in putting them off of said train the conductor used ordinary care (that is, such care as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under such circumstances), then you are instructed that the plaintiff cannot recover in this case." The refusal of this charge was error. It presented a theory of appellant's defense, which was raised by the evidence, and which was not embraced in the court's charge.

All the assignments have been considered, but none show cause for reversal other than the one above mentioned.

The judgment is reversed, and cause remanded.

On Rehearing by Appellee.

On a former day of this term we reversed and remanded this case, on the ground that the court refused to give a special charge requested by appellant. In the motion for rehearing our attention is called to the fact that said charge was sufficiently covered by the main charge of the court. This being so, our decision was error. The paragraph of the court's charge relating to this issue reads: "If the conductor stopped the train on Mrs. Hood's request as soon as he might with the use of ordinary diligence, plaintiff is not entitled to recover." This paragraph of the charge we think fully and concisely covers the requested instruction, and appellant has no excuse for complaint on this score.

The following paragraph of the charge is complained of, viz.: "Yet if you believe from the preponderance of the evidence that she tioned, but all have been considered, and we are of the opinion that they are not well taken.

The motion of appellee for rehearing is granted, and the judgment of the court below is affirmed.

HUCHINGSON v. TEXAS CENT. R. CO.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 14, 1909.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 304*)—PASSENGERS—LICENSEES—PERSONS ASSISTING PASSENGERS ON TRAINS.

In accordance with the established custom of assisting lady passengers to board trains, plaintiff assisted his aged and infirm sister upon a passenger train, which started while he was seating his sister, and he was injured in getting off while it was moving after it had run about 44 feet. If the train had stopped the usual length of time, plaintiff could have gotten off before it started. Held, that plaintiff was on the train as an implied licensee, and not a trespasser, and the company was bound to exercise ordinary care to protect him from injury, and would be liable for injuries caused by its failure to do so.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1104–1124; Dec. Dig. § 304.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 320*)—PASSENGERS—LICENSEES—ACTIONS—JURY QUESTION—NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries sustained while plaintiff was getting off a moving passenger train, after having entered it to assist his sister on board, by stumbling against a footstool claimed to have been negligently left upon the platform or car step, whether the company was negligent held a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 320.*]

3. CARRIERS (§ 347*)—PASSENGERS—INJURY TO LICENSEES—ACTIONS—JURY QUESTION—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries sustained while plaintiff was getting off a moving passenger train, after having entered it to assist his sister on board, by stumbling against a footstool left upon the platform or car step, whether plaintiff was negligent held a jury question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Dec. Dig. § 347.*]

Appeal from District Court, Hamilton County; N. R. Lindsey, Judge.

Action by J. C. Huchingson against the Texas Central Railroad Company. From a judgment for defendant on a directed verdict, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Langford & Chesley, for appellant. J. A. Kibler and A. R. Eldson, for appellee.

RICE, J. About 4 o'clock on the morning of March 24, 1907, plaintiff, who lived in the town of Hico, accompanied his sick and aged sister, who had been his guest, to the depot in said town for the purpose of assisting her aboard the cars of appellee. Upon the arrival of the train, having previously purchased his sister's ticket, he immediately took her aboard, passing the conductor at the steps, and having found a seat about halfway of the car, he deposited her grip, which he was carrying, and bidding her a hurried adieu, undertook to disembark; but, just as he was proceeding to do so, the conductor halloed, "All aboard," whereupon the train began to move, and as he was endeavoring to step from the moving car his foot struck a footstool, which had been left on the car platform, or on the first step, causing him to lose his balance, stumble, and fall to the ground, thereby breaking the thigh bone of his leg and otherwise seriously bruising and injuring him, from the effects of which he suffered intensely for several months, and on account of which he brought this action to recover damages, alleging negligence on the part of the company: First, in that it did not stop its train for the length of time necessary to transact its business, nor for the usual and customary length of time at said station; second, in negligently leaving a footstool or other obstruction in the path of exit from said coach; third, in the negligent act of its conductor in giving the warning cry, "All aboard," and immediately thereafter starting the train, without giving time for persons intending to disembark therefrom to do so. And in this connection he also averred that it was a custom, long known to and acquiesced in by the company at said station, for gentlemen to assist their lady friends and relatives aboard its trains. Defendant replied by general demurrer, special exceptions, general denial, and specially answered that appellant did not notify it or its servants of his intention to disembark from said train after assisting his sister thereon, nor had they any knowledge of said intention on his part, also by plea of contributory negligence in jumping from said train while the same was in motion, and also jumping therefrom in contravention of an ordinance of said town prohibiting persons from so doing. After hearing the evidence the trial court instructed a verdict for the defendant, on the ground that the evidence failed to show any negligence on the part of the company, from which judgment this appeal is prosecuted.

The evidence sustained the allegations of the petition, and, in addition thereto, showed: That the usual time for stopping trains at said station was from three to five minutes, whereas, on this occasion said train only stopped from 1 to 1½ minutes; that it was the custom, and had been for many years, at said place, for friends and relatives of lady passengers to enter trains at that point, to assist them on and off the cars; that after the announcement of "All aboard," the cars started at once, without giving time for one to alight; that appellant was leaving the cars and near the door at the time of said announcement of "All aboard"; that at the time he started to step from the train the same was moving very slowly, the evidence showing that the point on the ground where the appellant fell was only 44 feet from the place he entered the cars, and less than a car length therefrom. The evidence further discloses that he could have safely disembarked but for the fact that he stumbled against the stool which had been left upon the platform or first step of the car, and that, while he was 69 years of age, he was vigorous and active and had been much accustomed to getting off and on moving trains. It was also shown: That his sister, who had been his guest, was departing for Galveston in quest of medical aid; that she was then and had been sick, and her eyesight was bad; that she was 53 years of age and was suffering intensely at the time from an attack of neuralgia, and was unable, without assistance, to have boarded said train, whereby it was necessary for some one to assist her in doing so.

In 2 Hutchinson on Carriers (3d Ed.) § 991, it is said: "A person who comes to a railroad station to assist passengers in entering or leaving the train, though not a passenger, is not a trespasser, as he comes with at least the tacit invitation of the carrier. While so engaged, he does not stand in the relation to the carrier of a bare licensee, but is deemed to have been invited to be there by virtue of the relation existing between the carrier and the intending or arriving passenger. The carrier therefore owes to him the duty of exercising at least ordinary care to see he is not injured by reason of defective station facilities or approaches thereto. So one who goes upon a train to render necessary assistance to a passenger, in conformity with a practice approved or acquiesced in by the carrier, has a right to render the needed assistance and leave the train; and the carrier, in permitting him to enter with knowledge of his purpose, is presumed to agree that he may execute it, and is bound to hold the train a reasonable time therefor. If he is injured by reason of the sudden starting of the train, or the omission to give the customary signals, the carrier will be liable; but the duty of the carrier in this respect is dependent upon the knowledge of such person's purpose by those in charge of the train, for without such knowledge they may reasonably conclude that he entered to become a passenger, and cause the train to be moved after giving him a reasonable time to get aboard. He should, accordingly, notify some one in the management of the train of his presence, business, or purpose, so as to create some relation to the carrier, and thus make it its duty to care for him. And where the carrier's servants have no knowledge, or there are no circumstances tending to put them on notice, that a person who has boarded a train to assist another intends to alight before the train starts, they are not bound to hold the train until he has had time to disembark, nor to notify him before the train is started."

In 3 Thompson's Commentaries on the Law

of Negligence, § 2658, it is said: "A person going upon a railway train to assist another person on or off is clearly not a passenger, and is therefore not entitled to the high and exact degree of care for his safety which the law imposes upon a common carrier in respect of his passenger. He is either a licensee or a trespasser, depending upon the known rules of the company or the circumstances of the particular case. If, for instance, he is there in conformity with a practice approved or acquiesced in by the carrier, he is to be deemed lawfully there; his position is that of a licensee; and, under a principle hereafter considered, the carrier, if he have notice of his presence on his vehicle, owes him the duty of ordinary or reasonable care. In such a case he is entitled to a reasonable time for rendering the necessary assistance to the passenger to leave the vehicle of the carrier, provided the servants of the carrier have notice of his purpose to leave, and, if he is injured without negligence on his own part, in consequence of not being allowed such reasonable time to alight, he may recover damages from the carrier. It is a part of this doctrine that the company must be notified, through its servants, of an intention of the person so entering its vehicle to assist a passenger to get off the train, if the usual time for stopping is not sufficient to enable him to render such assistance and get off in safety. It must be kept in mind that the conductor and trainmen will not, ordinarily, know who, among those who get upon the train, are passengers, and who are there merely to assist passengers. Hence it is a sound and just conclusion that, in the absence of notice of his intention to leave the train after assisting a passenger into the car, the company will not be chargeable with negligence because of not stopping the train for more than the usual and reasonable time, to enable passengers exercising ordinary care to get on and off in safety; but, where such person gives notice to a trainman of his purpose to get off, those in charge of the train are bound to so regulate its movements as to afford him a reasonable time to alight in safety. * * * But if the carrier's servants have no notice of his purpose to get off, he cannot, in case he is hurt in getting off, in consequence of the starting of the carrier's vehicle, recover damages from the carrier, unless there are some other circumstances of negligence on the part of the carrier's servants."

The above seems to be the general doctrine on the subject, and most of the cases in which the question has arisen have turned upon the fact that no notice was given by the accompanying party at the time of entering the train of his purpose to assist the passenger and then retire from the train. There are cases, however, to the effect that if the circumstances, within themselves, are sufficient to give notice to the trainmen that the accompanying party is intending to disembark, them at or near the station platform while he accompanied the other upon the cars to assist her in finding a seat, this of itself was sufficient notice to the company that he intended to disembark from the train, as it could not be presumed that he intended to leave the remaining lady alone at the station at such an hour. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Satterwhite, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 170, 47 S. W. 41. Numerous cases sustain the doctrine that parties who go upon the premises of railway companies "to welcome the coming or speed the parting guest" are not trespassers, but are licensees, and that the company owes them at least the duty of ordinary care to see that they are not injured while there for such purpose.

In M. & T. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 241, 27 S. W. 905, a case in which a man had gone upon the train to assist his wife aboard, and who was injured while disembarking therefrom, the court said: "To such persons it owes the duty of providing reasonably safe platforms and approaches to its trains. Hamilton v. Railway Co., 64 Tex. 251, 53 Am. Rep. 756; Railway Co. v. Best, 66 Tex. 116, 18 S. W. 224. The relations sustained between the railway company and appellee do not arise out of contract, and the obligations are not such as are imposed by contract. Appellee did not go into the train as a passenger, and hence the duties imposed by law upon carriers to passengers did not rest upon the company and govern its conduct towards him. He went upon the train under an implied permission or license, and the company owed him the duty of ordinary care. Lucas v. Railway Co., 72 Mass. 64, 66 Am. Dec. 406. The company was under obligations to passengers to stop the train a sufficient length of time for those desiring to get off and those desiring to take passage to do so with safety. It was the duty of appellee to take notice of the usual length of time given for this purpose, and if it was not sufficient, and it was necessary for him to go into the train in order to place upon the company the duty of holding the train specially for him to disembark, he must have given notice of his intention." This case to us seems to imply that, if the usual time for stopping trains would have been sufficient for the accompanying party to have assisted his wife thereon and then safely alighted from the train, it would not have been necessary for him to have notified the company or its agents of his purpose in entering, but that this would only be necessary where the stop was not sufficient for the purpose indicated. The same doctrine is stated in Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. McGilvary (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 67.

In the case of M. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mil- order to entail on the defendant the duty to so handle the train as to allow reasonable facility for the plaintiff to get off without harm to himself, that the conductor be first seen and his permission obtained for plaintiff to go upon the train to see his wife seated. The company unquestionably had power, as a reasonable regulation of its business, to keep the husband from the train, or to prevent him from entering, he not being a passenger; but if, in the absence of any measures to that end, it allows persons who are not passengers to approach and board its train for the purpose of assisting its passengers to a seat, its consent thereto is as much obtained as if it was expressly given."

In the case of Little Rock & Ft. Smith Ry. v. Lawton, 55 Ark. 428, 18 S. W. 543, 15 L. R. A. 434 et seq., 29 Am. St. Rep. 48, being a case where the plaintiff had entered defendant's car for the purpose of assisting a lady and child to a seat, Justice Hemmingway, after discussing the contention of the railway company that as the plaintiff did not enter the car to take passage upon it, but only as an escort to a passenger, the defendant owed him no duty, except not to injure him willfully and wantonly, and the other contention by the plaintiff to the effect that as he went upon the car with the knowledge of the trainmen, and for the purpose of rendering necessary assistance to a female passenger and child, the defendant owed him the same duty as a passenger, said: "We have concluded that neither view is correct, but that reason commends as proper a rule between the two. In the case of Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Crunk, 119 Ind. 542, 21 N. E. 31, 12 Am. St. Rep. 443, the Supreme Court of Indiana held that a railroad company owed the same duty to those assisting a passenger upon a train as to the passenger himself; but it cites no precedent for the ruling, and it is opposed to all cases adjudged upon the subject to which our attention has been called. The law exacts of railroads for the protection of passengers the highest degree of care and imposes a liability for all injuries which sound judgment, skill, and the most vigilant oversight could have prevented; but this responsibility grows out of the relation of contract of carrier and passenger, on account of the great perils of the undertaking. As this is the cause and the origin of the rule, it would seem that the rule should be restricted in its application to persons who come within that relation, and such is the effect of the authorities"—citing many cases.

Proceeding, the court says: "But a denial that the extreme responsibility contended for exists is not an affirmation of the rule that responsibility is restricted to wrongs that are willful or wanton. Such conclusion would rest upon the premise that one attending a passenger enters the car from curiosity or upon his own business, under a mere license from the company, and not upon business connected with the company upon an implied invitation. If this premise be false and the converse correct, then, according to the decision of this and other courts, the carrier would be bound to the exercise of ordinary care. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. v. Fairbairn, 48 Ark. 491, 4 S. W. 50; Holmes v. N. E. R. R. Co., L. R. 4 Exch. 254. And that it is so bound in cases like this is held in the cases first cited, as well as in others upon the subject. Gillis v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 59 Pa. 129, 98 Am. Dec. 317; Griswold v. Chicago N. W. R. Co., 64 Wis. 652, 26 N. W. 101. In our opinion the rule is correct upon principle, for it is a matter of common knowledge that in the usual conduct of the passenger business it often becomes necessary for those not passengers to go upon the cars to assist incoming as well as outgoing passengers, and that a practice has grown up in response to this necessity. While it perhaps arose out of a consideration for the security and convenience of the traveler, it has proven beneficial to carriers, and now prevails in this state and extensively elsewhere, and is treated as an incident to the business in the conduct of the public and the acquiescence of carriers. It cannot be doubted that it has increased travel and the earnings of carriers, while it has promoted the convenience and security of passengers, and, if it should be abrogated, many persons would be compelled to forego journeys to the detriment of the carrier and their own inconvenience. We conclude that such attendant performs a service in the common interest of carrier and passenger, and that his entry upon a car is upon an implied invitation, which entitles him to demand ordinary care of the carrier. But although we think the attendant is entitled to demand ordinary care for his protection, and would be entitled to recover for an injury caused by its omission, still he could not recover unless he established that his injury was caused by some negligent act or omission on the part of the carrier. The word 'negligence' implies a duty as well as its breach, and the fact can never be found in the absence of a duty. Assuming, then, that the plaintiff went upon the train to render necessary assistance to a lady passenger and child, and that those in charge of the train knew that he was upon it, was it the duty of the defendant to hold the train the full length of time that was usually required for passengers to get off and on the cars at that place? The court charged the jury that it was, and this presents the controlling question upon this appeal." And the case was reversed because of the giving of the charge in the form requested.

And it will be noted in this connection that, while there were other acts of negligence charged in the case than the failure to stop the train for the full length of time at the station, still, the court held that the facts did not justify their submission to the jury; but, in the instant case, there are other acts of negligence charged than failure to stop at the station the usual length of time or for a reasonable time, which do find support in the evidence, and of which we will now speak.

While it appears from the evidence that there was no direct notice given by plaintiff to the conductor or any one else, of his purpose in boarding the train, still there is nothing to indicate that the train in the morning in question was late, and would not likely remain its usual time, and in view of the fact that it appears that the plaintiff knew its usual stay at such station, could he not, under the circumstances, assume that he would have time to aid his sister in boarding the train and get off in safety, provided it should stop as long as usual, and therefore concluded it was not necessary to give any direct notice of his intention to get off? And, in the absence of circumstances tending to show that it would not stop its usual time on this occasion, would it not be presumed, if any presumption is to be indulged at all, that it would remain the ordinary time rather than otherwise? So that since the circumstances tend to show that, if it had remained the usual length of time at said station, plaintiff would likely have been enabled to perform this service for his sister, and alighted in safety, then no direct notice, under the circumstances, would seem to be necessary. Would not the practice of persons at said station of aiding their female relatives in getting on and off trains, so long acquiesced in by the company that it had ripened into a custom, dispense with actual notice, under the circumstances, and be regarded as tantamount to a notice or as a waiver of actual notice that plaintiff intended not to become a passenger, but to get off? If it could be so held, then it seems that actual notice, under the circumstances, would not be required; but if we were to concede in this case that the facts and circumstances were not sufficient to apprise the company of the plaintiff's purpose to get off, and did not amount to a waiver thereof, still, since he was acting at the time in aiding his sister within the established custom, and since it appears that the train did not stop its usual time, and had it so stopped he could have alighted in safety, we are inclined to hold that he was not a trespasser, but was there at the implied invitation of the company, to render a service alike of interest to it and its passengers, and hence the company owed him the duty of exercising ordinary care, at least to protect him from injury in the discharge thereof; and he would be entitled to recover, if he suffered injury at its hands on account of the negligence of its servants or employees.

In the case of Doss v. M., K. & T. Ry. Co., 50 Mo. 27, 21 Am. Rep. 371, it was held, as stated in the syllabus thereof, that railroad companies are liable for injuries caused by the want of ordinary care, where the person injured was at the train to meet with or part from a passenger, although not himself a passenger or employé. And, in a case where plaintiff had in charge a lady and her infant child, it was held that he was entitled to sufficient time to escort her to a seat and then to leave the train. If the time of stopping was too short, or if the agent of the railroad company failed to give the usual notice of the starting of the train, there was not an exercise of such ordinary care as the company was bound to employ in order to escape liability; the court saying, among other things, in its opinion: "We should be very reluctant to hold that an aged or infirm mother or sister or wife, or, indeed, any other woman, especially if incumbered with an infant child, should not be allowed the assistance of a male friend or relative in getting a seat upon a railroad car, and if such friend or relative was to be treated as a mere stranger to the company, having no claim upon the company for an injury under any circumstances. Not being a passenger, it is conceded that no extraordinary care was required; but whether the neglect of customary signals would not amount to ordinary negligence is a matter upon which the Massachusetts decision is not satisfactory [referring to the case of Lucas v. Railway Co., 72 Mass. 64, 66 Am. Dec. 406]. And if a person who visits a railroad train 'to welcome a coming guest or speed a parting one' is held to have claims on the railroad company for ordinary care, surely one who attends a female passenger, incumbered with an infant and a satchel, is entitled to hold the company to equal responsibility."

So in this case, it being directly charged, among other things, that the injury was the proximate result of the carrier's negligence in leaving the footstool on the platform or steps of the car, and but for which it is shown he could have safely alighted, and it further appearing that he was not a trespasser while on the train, we think it was sufficient to justify the submission of the issues involved in the case at least to the jury for their consideration.

The question of contributory negligence on the part of appellant, as charged by the company, was a question of fact, and not one of law, and should also have been submitted to the jury under appropriate instructions. Gist v. I. & G. N. R. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 102 S. W. 457; T. & P. Ry. Co. v. Funderburk, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 22, 68 S. W. 1006; I. & G. N. R. R. Co. v. Satterwhite, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 102, 38 S. W. 401.

As to whether the evidence is sufficient to support and sustain any of the allegations of negligence charged in the pleadings, we refrain from the expression of any opinion; but do hold that, taken together, it is ample to require their submission to the jury under appropriate instructions from the court, and that a failure so to do on the part of the court was error, for which its judgment must be reversed, and the cause remanded, and it is so ordered.

Reversed and remanded.

ATCHISON, T. & S. F. RY. CO. v. WILEY et al.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 21, 1909. On Rehearing, May 19, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1001*)—REVIEW—QUESTIONS OF FACT—VERDICTS.

A verdict based on contradictory, unreasonable, and highly improbable testimony of an unreliable witness will not be allowed to stand, though three juries have found the same way.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3930; Dec. Dig. § 1001.*]

On Rehearing.

2. NEGLIGENCE (§ 58*)—PROXIMATE CAUSE.

An injury is not actionable unless it is the natural, ordinary, and reasonable result of defendant's conduct.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 71; Dec. Dig. § 58.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 129*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—PROXIMATE CAUSE OF INJURY.

Where a brakeman, after his fall from the top of a moving box car, jumped up and ran along the track in front of the car about 15 feet, when he stepped into a hole made by a rotten tie and was run over, the railroad company's failure to replace the tie was not actionable negligence, as the defect in the track was not the proximate cause of the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 263; Dec. Dig. § 129.*]

Appeal from District Court, El Paso County; J. M. Goggin, Judge.

Action by Mrs. Leo Wiley and others against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiffs, defendant appeals. Reversed and rendered.

J. W. Terry and A. H. Culwell, for appellant. Patterson & Wallace, for appellees.

FLY, J. This is a suit for damages arising from the death of Jesse Wiley, instituted by his wife, Leo Wiley, his child, Jessie L. Wiley, and his parents, Damon and Samantha Wiley, against appellant. The parents were parties pro forma and were dismissed on their admission that they were not entitled to recover because they received no aid or support from their son. There were several grounds of negligence set up in the petition, but the only one relied on and submitted to the jury was negligence in leaving a hole in the track so that the foot of deceased was caught in it while he was running in front of a moving car and was held until the car ran over and killed him. The jury returned a verdict for $7,500 in favor of appellees, and judgment was rendered accordingly.

The evidence disclosed that Jesse Wiley was a brakeman in the employment of appellant, and that while on top of a moving refrigerator car putting on the brakes, from some unknown cause, he fell from the end of the car to the track and was run over and killed. All of the witnesses agree on the facts stated, and the case against appellant must be sustained, if at all, by what occurred after the deceased struck the track on his back, and those occurrences are based on the evidence of Sam Claborn, who is described by counsel for appellee, in whose behalf he testified, as "a small, black, bullet-headed negro, densely ignorant." His evidence on his examination in chief was as follows: "My name is Sam Claborn. I am 17 years old. I live down to Mr. Henderson's by the Santa Fé track. I don't know, sir, how long I lived down in that country, a long time. I remember about two years and a half ago of witnessing an accident to a man in the yards down there. I was going to the store at the time. I was going to the store, and I saw a man fall off—try to stop the car, trying to turn the brake. He fell down. He was trying to keep the car from—stop the car, so he fell off in the middle of the track and ran down towards the switch and caught under the switch, and the coupler hit him in the back. Then the first wheel ran over him and knocked him right across the track. The first two wheels ran over him, and the last knocked him off the track, off the rails. The car was going down towards the old depot. It was a brake on the end of a car. When I first saw him he had hold of this brake trying to turn it. He fell on his back in the middle of the track. Then he got up and ran down towards the switch, and his foot caught in the switch, and the coupler hit him in the back and threw him across the track, and the wheels ran over him. The right foot was caught. It was kind of a hole, ditch like, under the rod. His foot caught under the rod across the track. I was about 40 feet from him at the time I saw him fall. When he got up he ran about 25 feet before his foot went into the hole. He fell over the rail towards town. There was nobody present there at that time but myself, and after he was run over the switchman came."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The only other witness in a position to testify as to the facts surrounding the death was G. H. Vasquez, a witness for appellees, and his evidence is in direct conflict with that of Sam Claborn. He testified as follows: "My name is George Henry Vasquez. I am a switchman. My present place of residence is 2304 Congress avenue, Houston, Tex. Yes, I was employed by the defendants, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company, and the Rio Grande & El Paso Railway Company in April and May, 1906. My last place of employment was at El Paso, Tex. I was acquainted with the deceased, Jesse Wiley. He met with an accident and was killed on or about the 14th day of May, 1906, in the yards of the defendant company at El Paso. I was present and witnessed said accident. We were making a running or flying switch of an express car in the yards. We made a run of the car, and Jesse Wiley got on the west end of the car to set the brake. I stepped off of the footboard and crossed over to the main line to notice if the brake would take any hold, as the car would come over on the main line track, and, as he passed me, he (Jesse Wiley) was in the act of setting the brake. When about 94 feet from where I was standing, I saw Jesse Wiley's body fall across the rail, and the four wheels passed over him, and the car rolled about 94 feet before it stopped. The car was a Wells-Fargo refrigerator car. I did not make any special inspection, as the track was in a fairly good shape; but at the switch where Mr. Wiley met his death there was a space of at least 5 inches between the points of the rail and the surface. The track was in fairly good shape, with the exception that there was about 8 or 10 inches between the end of the switch and the side of the last tie, leaving that much projecting over the tie, which left a space of about 5 inches between the end of the switch and the ground. The accident occurred exactly at the switch, where I have stated the tie had been left out, and where the end of the switch projected over the side of the last tie."

The only reasonable construction that can be placed upon his testimony is that the man never arose after he hit the rail, but was immediately run over and crushed to death. Not only is the evidence of Sam Claborn contradicted by that of Vasquez, but there appears in the record a statement made by Claborn at a former trial in which he said that Jesse Wiley did not get up and run along the track, but was killed where he struck the rails when he fell from the top of the car. On that former trial he swore that Wiley fell off at the switch and did not get to his feet, but was immediately killed. It is true that on the following day he was again placed on the stand and swore substantially as he did on the present trial, but that, instead of strengthening his testimony, should have rendered it utterly unworthy of belief. If there had been no evidence directly contradicting the testimony of Sam Claborn, and if he had been consistent in his different statements, his evidence seems to be so unreasonable and improbable that we would hesitate to sustain a judgment based upon it. It is highly improbable that a man who had fallen from the top of a refrigerator car with his back across an iron rail would be able at once to spring to his feet, and, if this point is passed, it is unreasonable to suppose that he would run along the track, for a distance of 15 feet, when at one step he could have placed himself in a position of absolute safety.

fresh tracks in the hole, was corroboration of Sam Claborn's statement. We do not think that this necessarily follows, for the tracks may have been made by Jesse Wiley's feet at the time or after he fell and lay on his back across the rail. The footprints, which were described as "kind of scratched," are more consistent with the theory that they were made by Jesse Wiley in his struggles to rise than that they were made at the end of a run of 15 feet. There was no evidence of any footprints on the roadbed from where the fall was stated, by Sam Claborn, to have taken place to the place of the tragedy. The fact of the presence of Sam Claborn and footprints in the hole, made by the absence of a tie, was not sufficient to corroborate the contradictory and improbable statements made by an irresponsible and unreliable witness. A verdict based upon such testimony is a travesty upon justice, and the number of times that such verdict has been repeated can add no sanctity to it. It may be a matter of astonishment and grief that such a verdict could have been rendered by three different juries, yet a vicious action repeated a hundred times does not thereby become meritorious and right, and the same duty rests upon the courts to cancel and destroy a judgment based upon it. The jury system handed down by our English forefathers can never be too highly commended, nor too sacredly guarded and protected by the courts of the country; but there can be no more insidious and deadly attack upon it than to sustain and uphold flagrant and outrageous assaults upon the rights of person or property made in its name or under its cover and protection. The courts are the ultimate resort to which the citizen should with confidence appeal in every lawful emergency.

The learned trial judge was profoundly impressed with the utter lack of evidence to support the verdict, but felt that under the law he had no power to grant another new trial, as appears from the following order overruling the motion for new trial: "Notwithstanding that this court believes that the verdict of the jury is against the preponderance of the evidence and not supported by the same, yet, two new trials having already been granted by it, the court is of the opinion that the power of the district court to grant a new trial has been exhausted, and, except for the opinion that the limit of new trials has been reached, the court would grant the motion of the defendant." Whether the power of the court, in the premises, had been exhausted or not, the language used shows that the judicial conscience of the trial judge was shocked at the verdict, and that only a belief that his authority had

The judgment will be reversed, and judgment here rendered that appellees take nothing by their suit, and that appellant recover of them all costs in this behalf expended.

On Rehearing.

If it should be admitted that the evidence of the witness Claborn was worthy of belief, and that the deceased did run along the track and did get his foot fastened in the switch, there was no evidence of negligence on the part of appellant. How could appellant have anticipated that a switchman would fall from the top of a moving car, and then jump up and run along the track, step into a hole made by a rotten tie, and be run over and killed? The proximate cause of the death of Wiley was not the hole in the track, but acts for which appellant was not responsible. If deceased had not fallen from the car and had not run along the track, he would not have been killed. That is patent, and it cannot be said from the evidence in the case that he would not have been killed if he had not stepped in the hole.

The rule in regard to damages arising from a tort is that, in order for a defendant to be liable, the injuries must be the natural, ordinary, and reasonable consequences of his conduct. It is not claimed that the deceased was placed in his position of danger on the track, after his fall from the top of the car, by the negligence of appellant, and neither can it be claimed that appellant is responsible for the act of the deceased in running along the track. Its negligence is predicated alone on its failure to replace a rotten tie which made a hole in the track, and over which deceased, while running along the track in front of a moving car, stumbled and fell. He was not engaged at that time in the service of appellant, and he was not in his perilous position by reason of any negligence of appellant. It owed him the duty to furnish him a safe place in which to perform the service of his master, but no duty rested upon it to furnish a safe track on which he could run in front of a moving car, where his duties as switchman did not place him. It is not pretended that the car furnished by appellant on which deceased was working was not a safe place for labor; but the negligence is claimed to rest on the defective condition of the track, where deceased had not been placed by appellant, nor was in any manner responsible for his being there. It owed him no duty whatever in so far as its track was concerned under the facts of this case. He was not at that time engaged in its service and was not running along the track in pursuance of his duties. The case of deceased must be viewed therefore just as track, and neither would the condition of the track be the proximate cause of the injury. The motion for rehearing is overruled.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO. v. HUGHEY.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 22, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 13, 1909.)

1. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 66*)—ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES—EVIDENCE.

Evidence in an action against a telegraph company for failure to deliver a telegram held to show that such failure was due to the negligence of defendant's agents, and that but for such negligence plaintiff could have reached the bedside of his dying wife about 15 hours sooner than he did.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

2. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 65*)—ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES—PLEADING.

A petition in an action for failure to deliver a telegram, alleging that, when plaintiff left home, his wife was in good health, but on the next day she became suddenly sick and telegraphed him to come home, that, had the telegrams been delivered within a reasonable time after their reception at their destination, plaintiff could and would have reached home more than 15 hours before he did, and, by reason of the negligence charged, he was deprived of conversing with her during her last illness, is sufficient as against a general demurrer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 54-60; Dec. Dig. § 65.*]

3. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 66*)—ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES—BURDEN OF PROOF.

In an action for failure to deliver a telegram under a complaint alleging that, when plaintiff left home, his wife was in good health, but on the next day she became suddenly sick, and sent telegrams calling him home, and, had they been delivered within a reasonable time after their reception at their destination, plaintiff could and would have reached home more than 15 hours before he did, and that, by reason of defendant's negligence, he was deprived of conversing with her during her last illness, no burden rests on plaintiff to show that his wife was conscious and capable of conversing with him had he arrived 15 hours sooner, as consciousness is the normal state of the mind, and will be presumed unless shown to be otherwise.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 67*)—PRESUMPTION—CONTINUANCE OF CONDITION.

Normal conditions will be presumed to exist in every instance until the contrary is shown, and presumptions arising from proof of a given status operate prospectively, and not retrospectively.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 87, 88, 103; Dec. Dig. § 67.*]

Appeal from District Court, Dallam County; J. N. Browning, Judge.

Action by H. J. Hughey against the Western Union Telegraph Company, for appellee.

HODGES, J. The appellee sued the appellant telegraph company for damages for failure to deliver a telegram informing him of the serious illness of his wife. A judgment was recovered for the sum of $1,400, from which the appellant prosecutes this appeal.

The evidence shows: That Hughey, the appellee, was a drummer, and lived at Dalhart, Tex. That on the evening of April 15th, about 9 o'clock, he left home on one of his customary trips. That at that time his wife was in good health. On the following day, the 16th, a short time after noon, the following telegrams were delivered to and accepted for transmission by the appellant's agent at Dalhart: "Dalhart, Tex., April 16, 1907. To Mr. Hughey, Texhoma, Oklahoma: Come home on No. 29; very sick. [Signed] Mrs. Hughey." Second message: "Dalhart, Tex., April 16, 1907. To Mr. Hughey, Guymon, Oklahoma: Come home on 29. Very sick. [Signed] Mrs. Hughey." Those telegrams were actually written and delivered to the agent by T. L. Swearingen, who testified that he did so in response to a request over the telephone from some lady. Swearingen lived in Dalhart, was in business there, and knew both the appellee and his wife. The appellee testifies that, after leaving home Monday evening, he went to Stratford, where he spent the night. He left there the next day at 12:25, passed through Texhoma, but did not stop, and arrived at Guymon about 1 or 1:30 p. m. The telegram addressed to him at Guymon was received at that place by the agent in time for its delivery, so that the appellee might have left for home over train No. 29 referred to in the message, and, had he done this, he could have reached his home at 5:30 the same evening. The telegrams were never delivered, and appellee knew nothing of his wife's illness till he arrived at Dalhart the next morning about 9 o'clock. His wife was then in a dying condition, was unconscious, and lived only about 30 minutes after his arrival. The testimony was sufficient to authorize the jury to find that the failure to deliver the telegram at Guymon was due to negligence on the part of the appellant's agents at that place, and is also sufficient to show that but for such negligence appellee could and would have reached the bedside of his wife about 15 hours sooner than he did.

Practically the only question involved in this appeal is: Were the pleadings and evidence sufficient to warrant the court in giving the following charge to the jury: "If you find for the plaintiff, you will assess the damages at such sum of money as you believe and find will reasonably compensate him for any actual damage he may have sustained on account of the grief or mental anguish of being deprived of seeing and conversing with his wife before she became unconscious, and before her death. And, in such event, the form of your verdict will be as follows: 'We, the jury, find for plaintiff, and assess his damages at ——— dollars,' etc." It is contended that there was neither allegation nor proof that, if the appellee had reached the bedside of his wife earlier than he did, he would have found her in a conscious condition. The allegations are substantially that, when appellee left home on the night of the 15th, his wife was in good health; that on the next day she became suddenly sick, and caused the telegrams to be sent; that, had they been delivered within a reasonable time after their reception at points of destination, appellee could and would have arrived at the bedside of his wife more than 15 hours before he did; that, by reason of the negligence charged, he was deprived of conversing with her during her last illness. There were also other elements of damage alleged not necessary here to mention. The only exception to the petition was a general demurrer, and which, we think, was properly overruled by the court. The only testimony upon the point in issue is that of Swearingen and of the appellee. Swearingen stated that at about 1 or 2 o'clock on the 16th he was called over the telephone by some lady, and requested by her to send the telegrams above set out. He asked her where Hughey could be found, and she told him at either one or the other of the places named in the messages. He could not say that he recognized the voice of the lady doing the talking as that of Mrs. Hughey. The appellee testified that, when he arrived at the depot in Dalhart on his return at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 17th, he then for the first time learned that his wife was very sick. He found her unconscious and in a dying condition, and she lived only about a half hour after he reached her.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

No burden rested on the appellee to allege or prove that his wife was conscious and capable of conversing with him had he arrived 15 hours sooner. Consciousness is the natural and normal state of the human mind, and it will be presumed to be the mental status of all living persons until shown to be otherwise. The fact that Mrs. Hughey was sick, or even very sick, without stating the character of her illness, does not of itself furnish evidence of the abnormal condition called unconsciousness. It is true that consciousness is often lost in severe cases of illness, but the occurrence is not so common that proof of illness alone will afford a basis for the presumption of unconsciousness. Normal conditions will be presumed to exist in every instance till the contrary is shown. The court had the right to assume, as he did, that, had the appellee arrived at the bedside of his wife at the time he would have done so had the message been punctually delivered, he would have found her conscious and capable of conversing with him in some form or to some extent at least. The fact that she was unconscious and in a dying condition when he did arrive is no evidence that 15 hours before that time she was in the same condition. Presumptions which arise from proof of a given status or situation operate prospectively and not retrospectively. Windhaus v. Bootz, 92 Cal. 617, 28 Pac. 557; Bradner on Evidence, p. 627. Furthermore, in this case we think the inference is strongly suggested that her unconscious condition was due to the fact that she was in articulo mortis when her husband arrived.

The same questions here raised are presented in different forms under other assignments, but we deem it unnecessary to further discuss them.

We have found no error in the judgment, and it is therefore affirmed.

MECCA FIRE INS. CO. OF WACO v. WILDERSPIN.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 22, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 13, 1909.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 830*)—FINDINGS OF POLICY—MORTGAGE ON PART OF PROPERTY—"SUBJECT OF INSURANCE."

An insurance policy on household goods, which provided that it should be void if the subject of insurance, being personal property, should be or become incumbered by a chattel mortgage, is not rendered void by a mortgage on a part of the property at the time the policy was executed, where the value of the unincumbered portion exceeds the amount of the insurance on all the goods, as "subject of insurance" means all property covered by the policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 829-841; Dec. Dig. § 830.*]

2. STIPULATIONS (§ 16*)—CONCLUSIVENESS AND EFFECT—SUBMISSION OF ISSUES.

Where the parties agree in open court to submit certain issues agreed upon to the jury, neither party can be heard to complain of the action of the court in submitting any of the issues.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Stipulations, Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

3. STIPULATIONS (§ 18*)—CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION—SUBMISSION OF ISSUES.

In an action on an insurance policy for $500, where certain issues of fact, not including the value of the property, were submitted to the jury by agreement of the parties made in open court as the only issues of fact to be determined, defendant cannot complain that the evidence was not sufficient to support a finding that the property destroyed was not worth the sum alleged in the petition, as the agreement that the issues submitted were the only ones was an admission that the property destroyed was worth the sum alleged in the petition.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Stipulations, Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

4. INSURANCE (§ 598*)—INTEREST ON AMOUNT OF LOSS.

Under a policy of insurance, giving the insurance company 90 days after proof of loss in which to pay the loss, interest on the amount due will not begin to run until the expiration of the 90 days.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 1494; Dec. Dig. § 598.*]

Appeal from Tarrant County Court; John L. Terrell, Judge.

Action by A. K. Wilderspin against the Mecca Fire Insurance Company of Waco. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Modified and affirmed.

The suit was on a fire insurance policy for $500 written and dated March 1, 1907, covering certain household goods destroyed by fire March 18, 1907. By its terms the policy was to continue in force during the three years next following its date. The premium on it amounted to $10, $6 of which was paid by appellee to appellant's agent, Lovejoy, on the day the policy was written, and the remainder of which he agreed to pay about April 1st following. After the policy was written, possession thereof was retained by the agent, to hold, he testified, for the insurance company until the remainder of the premium should be paid, or, appellee testified, for safe-keeping and for his accommodation. After the goods had been destroyed, but on the day they were destroyed, appellee tendered to the agent the balance then remaining unpaid of the premium, and demanded that possession of the policy be delivered to him. First refusing to do so, the agent finally received and receipted appellee for the $4 tendered, and at the same time turned the policy over to him. Before turning over the policy to appellee, the agent testified, but after it was turned over to him, appellee testified, the agent indorsed on same as follows: "This policy was delivered March 18, 1907." At the time the policy was written, and at the time the goods were destroyed, a portion of them was incumbered by mortgages; but the value of the unincumbered portion thereof exceeded the amount of the insurance on all the goods. By its terms the policy was to be void if the "subject of insurance should be or become incumbered by a chattel mortgage." The cause was submitted to a jury on special issues, with reference to which the judgment recites as follows: " * * * And it being agreed in open court by counsel that there are only two issues of fact to be determined by the jury and one of law by the court, said two agreed special issues were submitted to the jury," etc. The special issues submitted were: (1) "Did Lovejoy hold the policy in question at the time of the fire as the agent of Wilderspin or as the agent of the insurance company?" The jury answered: "He held it as the agent of Wilderspin." (2) "Did Wilderspin represent to Lovejoy that he was the sole owner of the property described in the policy?" The jury answered: "No." This appeal is prosecuted from a judgment in favor of appellee against appellant for the sum of $500 and interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from June 20, 1907.

W. L. Eason, for appellant. Cook & Orr, for appellee.

WILLSON, C. J. (after stating the facts as above). We do not agree with appellant that, because it appears that a portion of the property covered by the policy was incumbered by mortgages, it should be held to be void. The proviso in the policy referred to by appellant as demanding such a holding is as follows: "This policy * * * shall be entirely void * * * if the subject of insurance be personal property and be or become incumbered by a chattel mortgage." Construing strictly the language of the clause in the contract quoted, the phrase "subject of insurance" should not be held to mean less than all the property covered by the policy. Giving it such a meaning, the policy was not void, for the greater portion of the property insured was not in any way incumbered. That to avoid a forfeiture of rights acquired under such a contract the phrase referred to should be construed to carry the meaning indicated seems to be fairly well settled by the decisions of the courts of this state. Bills v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 87 Tex. 547, 29 S. W. 1063, 29 L. R. A. 706, 47 Am. St. Rep. 121; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Walker (Tex. Civ. App.) 60 S. W. 825; Id., 94 Tex. 473, 61 S. W. 711; North British & Mer. Ins. Co. v. Freeman (Tex. Civ. App.) 33 S. W. 1091; Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Brady (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 516.

It is insisted that the court should not have submitted to the jury as an issue to be determined by them a question as to whether, while holding the policy, Lovejoy was acting as appellee's or appellant's agent, but instead should have submitted to them a question as to whether the policy had been delivered to appellee prior to the fire or not. From the recital in the judgment it appears that the issue so submitted in open court was agreed to by the parties as one of the only two issues of fact in the case. This being true, neither of the parties should be heard to complain of the action of the court in submitting it. Rule 47 for district courts (67 S. W. xxiv). For a like reason, the complaint made that the evidence was not sufficient to support a finding that the property destroyed was worth as much as $500 will not be considered. The agreement that the issues of fact submitted were the only ones in the case should be treated as an admission that the property destroyed was worth the sum it was alleged in the petition to be worth.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The judgment in appellee's favor was for interest on the sum recovered from June 20, 1907. By a term in the policy appellant was not bound to pay on account of a loss covered by it until 90 days after it had been furnished with proof of such loss. It was not furnished with such proof until May 7, 1907. Therefore the judgment should have been for interest from August 6, instead of from June 20, 1907. Queen Ins. Co. v. Jefferson Ice Co., 64 Tex. 578; 4 Cooley's Briefs on Ins. p. 3838.

It will be so reformed as to adjudge interest on the amount of the recovery from August 6, 1907, and as so reformed will be affirmed. The costs of this appeal will be adjudged against appellee.

ATCHISON, T. & S. F. RY. CO. v. PICKENS.†

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 21, 1909. On Rehearing, May 12, 1909.)

1. STATUTES (§ 281*) — PLEADING FOREIGN STATUTES—NECESSITY.

In an action for injuries to an employé in another state, in the absence of pleading and proof as to the law of such other state, the law of the forum will be applied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 380; Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 882*)—ERROR INVITED BY APPELLANT.

The error of submitting a cause on an erroneous theory cannot be said to have been invited by appellant by requests for instructions, where such requests were offered in explanation and amplification of the general instructions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 8602; Dec. Dig. § 882.*]

On Motion for Rehearing.

3. TERRITORIES (§ 11*)—LEGISLATIVE POWER OF CONGRESS—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY ACT.

The federal employer's liability act (Act Cong. June 11, 1906, c. 3073, 34 Stat. 232 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 891]) is constitutional in its application to injuries to an employé in territories, notwithstanding its unconstitutionality in its application to interstate commerce; the provisions defining the liabilities of employers engaged in commerce in any territory being within the power of Congress to govern territories and independent of the provisions relating to carriers engaged in interstate commerce based on the constitutional power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Territories, Cent. Dig. § 8; Dec. Dig. § 11.*]

4. COURTS (§ 91*) — DECISION OF SUPREME COURT—EFFECT ON COURT OF CITY APPEALS.

The decisions of the Supreme Court on the validity of the federal employer's liability act (Act Cong. June 11, 1906, c. 3073, 34 Stat. 232 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 891]) in its application to causes arising in territories will be followed by the Court of Civil Appeals.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. § 325; Dec. Dig. § 91.*]

Appeal from District Court, El Paso County; J. M. Goggin, Judge.

Action for personal injuries by M. E. Pickens against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed on rehearing.

Terry, Cavin & Mills and A. H. Culwell, for appellant. P. H. Clarke and T. A. Falvey, for appellee.

JAMES, C. J. The action is for damages, the petition alleging injury received by appellee, a brakeman in appellant's service, while working as such between Raton and Las Vegas, N. M.; that plaintiff was caused to fall from the top of a caboose through the negligence of the engineer of a pusher engine in suddenly withdrawing said engine, by reason of which the caboose was suddenly jerked and jarred. The answer was general demurrer and denial, assumed risk, and contributory negligence. Plaintiff was awarded $7,500.

By the assignments of error appellant complains of the charge submitting the case on the theory of comparative negligence; this being based upon the act of Congress known as the "Employer's Liability Act (Act June 11, 1906, c. 3073, 34 Stat. 232 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 891])", which has since the trial been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States. There are assignments also which complain of the charge in applying the rule as to the acts of fellow servants as the same obtains in this state, instead of applying, as appellant says, the law which prevails in New Mexico on the subject, which appellant states is different from ours. We have held that, if the law of New Mexico is different, it is a fact necessary to be alleged and shown, and, where this has not been done, the rule that governs here will be applied. Railway v. Mills (Tex. Civ. App.) 108 S. W. 490; Tempe v. Dodge, 89 Tex. 71, 82 S. W. 514, 88 S. W. 222.

In reference to the submission of the case upon the rule of comparative negligence, appellee argues that the error was invited. We overrule this. It appears that the requested charges upon which this argument is founded were asked in explanation and amplification of the charge of the court, and they refer in terms to it, and therefore it appears they were asked after the court's charge was prepared and known. Under these circumstances the charge cannot be held to have been induced by the requests. Moreover, it is probable, and we may say manifest, that the act of Congress, since pronounced unconsti-sued in the disposition of the cause upon a false theory, and to this, and not to the requests of defendant, the charges complained of were really due. We are of opinion that the charges as given were not invited error; and that appellant, owing to the circumstances, should not be held estopped by said requests or by proceeding with the trial of the case upon that theory.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

† Writ of error denied by Supreme Court May 26, 1909.

In order for appellant to be relieved of the consequences of the judgment, it was not necessary for it to show to this court that the facts were not sufficient to warrant the recovery had, nor that the verdict was excessive.

Reversed and remanded.

On Rehearing.

The motion has been held for some time awaiting further decisions touching the validity of Act Cong. July 11, 1906, c. 8073, 34 Stat. 232 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 891), known as the "Employer's Liability Act," in its application to territories, in view of the decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the case of Hyde v. Railway Co., 31 App. D. C. 466, affirming the validity of the act in its reference to territories. The Supreme Court of this state has recently in the case of Gutierrez v. Railway Co., 117 S. W. 426, adopted this view.

Our opinion has been that it is evident that Congress had no intention to enact any but a general statute, and would not have enacted this statute, independent of its having general application to all cases arising under its provisions, and that the effect of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Howard v. Ill. Cent. R. R. Co., 207 U. S. 463, 28 Sup. Ct. 141, 52 L. Ed. 297, was to nullify the act entirely. In the above circumstances our views should be subordinated to those of the highest court of this state, and we therefore grant the motion for rehearing, and, no error otherwise appearing in the record, the judgment of the district court is affirmed.

WRIGHT v. RILEY.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 15, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 13, 1909.)

1. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 27*)—BOND FOR TITLE—ESTATE CONVEYED.

Where the purchase price has been paid, a bond for title to land operates to convey to the grantee an equitable title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 32; Dec. Dig. § 27.*]

2. TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE (§ 10*)—TITLE TO SUPPORT.

A bond for title to land after the payment of the purchase price is an equitable title, which

SUE AND LIMITATIONS.

Rev. St. 1895, art. 3360, limiting the time for suing for specific performance of a contract to convey land, does not apply to an action of trespass to try title for the recovery of the land pursuant to a bond for the conveyance after payment of the price.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass to Try Title, Cent. Dig. §§ 30, 31; Dec. Dig. § 25.*]

4. CONTRACTS (§ 108*)—VALIDITY—PUBLIC POLICY.

A contract by a railroad section foreman to procure a switch track to be constructed at a specified place by the company, in consideration for a conveyance of land to him, is not void as against public policy; the track being beneficial to the company and to the public.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Dec. Dig. § 108.*]

5. TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE (§ 33*)—PLEADING—EFFECT OF PLEA.

In trespass to try title, pleas of general denial, not guilty, statute of limitations, and want of consideration for the contract on which plaintiff's title is based, have the legal effect of admitting possession in plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass to Try Title, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-46; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

Appeal from District Court, Hall County; S. P. Huff, Judge.

Action by T. J. Riley against D. M. Wright. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The suit was brought by appellee against appellant in the ordinary form of trespass to try title to certain lots in the town of Esteline in Hall county, Tex. Appellant answered by general denial, not guilty, statute of limitation of 10 years under article 3360, Rev. St. 1895, and a plea of want of consideration for the execution of a certain bond for title. A trial without a jury resulted in the court's rendering judgment for appellee for the land sued for.

Appellee offered in evidence a patent from the state of Texas to appellant to 160 acres of land, being the northwest one-fourth of section No. 796, Block H, Waco & Northwestern Railroad Company, in Hall county, Tex., dated May 31, 1897, recorded June 30, 1897. He next offered the following written instrument, duly acknowledged and recorded January 22, 1895: "Know all men by these presents that I, D. M. Wright (an unmarried man), of the county of Hall, and state of Texas, held and firmly bound to T. J. Riley of the county of Hall and state of Texas, in the sum of $300.00 to be paid to said T. J. Riley, executors, administrators, or assigns, to the payment whereof I bind myself, my heirs, executors, and administrators, firmly by these presents, dated this 6th day of October, 1892. The condition of the above obligation is that, whereas, the above-bound D. M.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes lots in certain blocks in the town of Estelline, Hall county, Tex., as shown by the plat of said town recorded in the deed records of Hall county, Tex.]. The consideration paid and agreed to be paid for said land is as follows: $150 to me in hand paid by T. J. Riley. Now if the said D. M. Wright shall upon receiving a patent from the state of Texas make or cause to be made to the said T. J. Riley, his heirs, assigns, and legal representatives, a good and sufficient title to said premises, then this obligation shall be null and void; otherwise it shall remain in full force and effect. D. M. Wright." The effect of appellee's testimony, elicited on his examination as a witness, and the only oral evidence in the record, was that the appellant agreed with appellee, who was a section foreman of the railway company, to sell and convey to him the lots sued for if he would procure the railway company to put in a side track to its main line at Estelline. Appellee carried out the agreement and procured and had the railway company to put in the side track. Appellant then sold appellee the lots sued for and executed the instrument above set out in payment for the said services of appellee. Appellee's petition was filed October 7, 1907.

Fires & Diggs, for appellant. T. J. Montgomery and H. E. Deaver, for appellee.

LEVY, J. (after stating the facts as above). By his first assignment of error appellant claims that this suit is an action for specific performance of a contract for the conveyance of land, and was therefore barred by limitation of 10 years under article 3360, Rev. St. 1895, at the time suit was brought. We do not think the contention can be sustained. It was clearly a suit by the appellee to recover the land, and not a distinct action for a decree for the enforcement or the performance of the contract to convey the same. The bond for title offered in evidence was relied on, as it could be, as a species of title to the land. A bond for title, when the purchase price has been paid, which was done in this case, operates to convey to the grantee an equitable title; and an action of trespass to try title against the grantor, as is this suit, may be maintained on such equitable title. Miller v. Alexander, 8 Tex. 36; Wright v. Thompson, 14 Tex. 558; Elliott v. Mitchell, 47 Tex. at page 450; Downs v. Porter, 54 Tex. 59; Thompkins v. Brooks (Tex. Civ. App.) 43 S. W. 70. It follows, we think, that the statute of limitation of article 3360, Rev. St. 1895, is not applicable to the case.

By the second assignment it is contended man of the railway company to procure a switch to be located on the main line of the railway company at Estelline, was void as against public policy. We think it should be held in the case under the evidence that the services rendered by appellee under his agreement with appellant were a valuable consideration paid for the land, and the court did not err. It does not appear that the services rendered by appellee were in violation of law, or were or had a tendency at the time or now to be injurious to the public or against the public good. Unless the agreement or services could be held—and we do not think they could be—to fall within the classes or either of them stated, they would not be void. 9 Cyc. 483. The agreement and services did not go further than to merely procure the railway company to construct a side track to its main line at the town of Estelline. This but enabled the railway company to perform its full duty to the public, and was beneficial to it and the public and the appellant.

The ruling on the first assignment disposes of the third assignment.

By the fourth assignment it is contended that the court erred in rendering judgment for appellee, because the evidence fails to show that the lots sued for are covered by the land described in the patent. We do not think that the objection that the evidence does not sustain appellee's right to recover the particular lots sued for is tenable. The bond for title clearly describes the land sold and contracted to be conveyed by appellant as certain lots in certain blocks in the town of Estelline in Hall county, Tex., "as shown by the plat of said town which is recorded in volume 5 of Records of deeds of Hall County, Tex." The pleas of appellant have the legal effect to admit possession in appellee. Appellee being in possession of the particular lots under title superior to appellant's, and there being no doubt as to the identity of the land sued for and claimed by appellee, he was, as against appellant, entitled to recover the same.

The case was ordered affirmed.

McKEE v. WEST.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 28, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 19, 1909.)

1. PUBLIC LANDS (§ 178*)—LAND OFFICE—RIGHT TO FILE TRANSFERS OF LEASE.

A transfer of a lease of school lands is authorized to be filed in the land office without being acknowledged by the grantor, or recorded in the county where the land is.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. §§ 579, 582; Dec. Dig. § 178.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

2. EVIDENCE (§ 342*) — DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE — CERTIFIED COPIES — RECORDS IN LAND OFFICE.

A transfer of a lease of school lands, being a record of the land office in which it is filed, certified copies thereof were admissible as prima facie evidence in an action to try title to the land in question, under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2306, making translated copies of records in the land office, certified to under the hand of the translator and the commissioner of the General Land Office, attested with the seal of the office, prima facie evidence in all cases where the original records would be evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 1306; Dec. Dig. § 342.*]

3. EVIDENCE (§ 342*) — DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE — CERTIFIED COPIES — LETTERS OF LAND COMMISSIONER.

Copies of letters of the land commissioner, preserved in the ordinary way, are copies of records of the land office.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 1306; Dec. Dig. § 342.*]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1051*)—REVIEW—HARMLESS ERROR — ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

Admission of a letter from the land commissioner to show an award of land to defendant, in an action to try title to the land, if error, was harmless, where the award to defendant was otherwise shown.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4161; Dec. Dig. § 1051.*]

5. TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE (§ 38*)—AWARD AND SALE BY LAND COMMISSIONER—PRESUMPTION AS TO VALIDITY.

In trespass to try title to public school land, held by defendant under an award and sale of the land commissioner as additional to his home section, under the presumption in favor of the validity of the commissioner's act, it will be presumed that defendant was owner of his home section when he applied for the additional land, until the contrary is affirmatively shown.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass to Try Title, Cent. Dig. § 53; Dec. Dig. § 38.*]

6. JUDGMENT (§ 251*) — CONFORMITY TO PLEADING—PLEA OF NOT GUILTY IN TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE.

In trespass to try title, where defendant simply pleads not guilty, the appropriate judgment for defendant is that plaintiff take nothing by his suit; but a further adjudication of title and right of possession would add nothing thereto.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 437; Dec. Dig. § 251.*]

7. JUDGMENT (§ 251*) — CONFORMITY TO PLEADING—PLEA OF NOT GUILTY—WRIT OF POSSESSION.

In trespass to try title, where defendant simply pleaded not guilty, an award to defendant of a writ of possession upon rendering judgment in his favor was improper, as going beyond what was involved in the pleadings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 437; Dec. Dig. § 251.*]

8. COSTS (§ 238*)—COSTS ON APPEAL—FAILURE TO CALL COURT'S ATTENTION TO ERROR.

In trespass to try title, where the court on rendering judgment for defendant awarded him a writ of possession which was not justified by the pleadings, and plaintiff did not call the error to the attention of the court, the reformation of the judgment in that respect on appeal will not relieve plaintiff from the costs of appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Costs, Cent. Dig. § 912; Dec. Dig. § 238.*]

Appeal from District Court, Schleicher County; J. W. Timmins, Judge.

Trespass to try title by J. F. McKee against C. C. West. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Reformed and affirmed.

L. H. Brightman, for appellant. Sillimann & Campbell, for appellee.

JAMES, C. J. Action by McKee of trespass to try title to school section 106 in block A granted the Houston, East & West Texas Railway Company in Schleicher county. The court rendered judgment for the defendant West.

Appellant's only proposition under his first assignment of error is: "The Commissioner of the General Land Office cannot give a certificate of fact which would be admissible in evidence based on an instrument, which said instrument itself would not be admissible if offered." The only question which this proposition raises is that the documents from which the fact certified to was taken would not themselves have been admissible. The certificate of the commissioner was as follows: "I, J. T. Robison, chief clerk and acting commissioner of the General Land Office of the state of Texas, do hereby certify that the records, papers and documents of said office show that on the 9th day of February, 1898, W. S. Davis conveyed to H. A. Thompson, all of his right, title and interest in and to school sections 16, 106, 108 and 166, Block A, H., E. & W. T. Ry. Co., in Schleicher county, which were leased to the said W. S. Davis, in lease 20,492. That on March 27, 1906, H. A. Thompson conveyed all his title and leasehold interest in and to all of lease No. 20,492 to C. C. West, which latter transfer was filed in this office April 4, 1906, and said section 106, was canceled out said lease 20,492, and sold to C. C. West April 12, 1906." When the above was offered, plaintiff interposed objections thereto, and "for the purposes of the bill of exception only," in connection with the objections, offered and introduced certified copies from the commissioner of the transfer of said lease from Davis to H. A. Thompson, and of the transfer of same from Thompson to West. These certified copies showed that neither of the transfers was acknowledged by the grantor, nor recorded in the county where the land was situated. It was proved that the tract in question was included in a lease to W. S. Davis that ran for 10 years from September 29, 1897. There can be no doubt that the transfers of the lease were authorized to be filed in the land office, and became records of that office without being acknowledged or recorded in the county where the land is. There is no statute requiring such papers to be acknowledged in order to be filed and acted upon in that office, and being records of the office, article 2306, Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, made certified copies of them prima facie evidence. The proposition under the first assignment does not raise the question of whether or not the facts stated in the commissioner's certificate were such as it is contemplated by said article he may certify to.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The second assignment complains of the admission of a certified copy from the land office as follows: "April 5, 1906. Mr. O. O. West, Eldorado, Texas—Dear Sir: This department is in receipt of yours of the 27th ult. in which you state that you desire to purchase sec. 106 block A, certificate 55, H. E. & W. T. Ry. Co., in Schleicher county embraced in lease No. 20,492, under your preference right as assignee of the said lease. You are advised that this section will be subject to sale to you as a whole as dry agricultural at $6.00 per acre as provided by the act of April 15, 1905. Respectfully, John J. Terrell, Commissioner." The commissioner's certificate to this paper shows that was a "copy of the imprint of a letter as appears on page 501 of Letter Book vol. 1. No. 820 which said volume is kept as an archive in this office." We are of opinion that the copies of letters of the land commissioner, preserved in the ordinary way, are copies of records of that office. However, the admission of this in evidence was harmless as the award of the land to West was otherwise shown.

The fourth assignment is that the court erred in rendering judgment for the defendant, and in holding that defendant was entitled to recover the land in controversy as additional land to section No. 78 block certificate 41 granted to the Houston, East & West Texas Railway Company. Appellant's proposition is: "A person buying school land as additional to some other land must have title to the home or mother tract before they are entitled to buy." Defendant holding under an award and sale by the land commissioner, the presumption was in favor of the validity of that officer's act until plaintiff affirmatively showed its invalidity. No evidence was offered to show that defendant was not in fact owner of his home section at the time he applied. The fact was sustained by the presumption.

The third assignment is that the court erred in giving judgment in favor of defendant because the evidence shows that the land was under lease at the time the defendant filed on the same, and at the time it was awarded to him, and the evidence fails to show that the defendant was the assignee of lease No. 20,492 issued to W. S. Davis. The evidence did show that West was the assignee of the lease at the time. Appellant assigns as fundamental error the rendition of a judgment in favor of appellee for the title and possession of the land, there being no affirmative pleading by the defendant. It has been held that, when defendant's pleading is simply not guilty, the appropriate judgment is that plaintiff take nothing by his suit. Still the further adjudication of title in the defendant adds nothing to it, citing French v. Olive, 67 Tex. 408, 3 S. W. 568. We think an adjudication of the title and the right of possession, would comprehend no more than is involved in an adjudication that plaintiff take nothing by his suit. But the judgment here goes still further, and awards defendant a writ of possession. This appears to go beyond what was involved in the pleadings, and ought not to be in the judgment. However, this matter was not called to the attention of the trial court, where doubtless it would have been remedied, and therefore the reformation of the judgment in this respect will not relieve appellant from being taxed with the costs of this appeal.

The above disposes of all the assignments of error, and the judgment will be reformed and affirmed.

INTERNATIONAL & G. N. R. CO. v. FORD.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 17, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 15, 1909.)

1. NEGLIGENCE (§ 4*)—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS—INSTRUCTIONS—"ORDINARY CARE."

An instruction defining "ordinary care" as that degree of care which a person of ordinary prudence would usually exercise under the same circumstances, and the failure to use such care is negligence, is not erroneous because of a qualification of the word "exercise" by the word "usually."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 6; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 296*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CURE BY OTHER INSTRUCTION.

Error in an instruction as to negligence of a carrier in not furnishing a stool to enable a passenger to alight, as not being based on the evidence, is cured by the giving of a special charge at the request of the carrier withdrawing that issue from the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 717, 718; Dec. Dig. § 296;* Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 1406.]

3. CARRIERS (§ 321*)—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS—INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for injuries to a passenger, in which the acts of negligence charged were a failure to stop the train at a safe place, failure to light the place, and a failure to assist plaintiff to alight, an instruction to find for defendant, if defendant was guilty of the acts charged, enumerating them, and using the conjunctive instead of the disjunctive, is not erroneous by the use of the conjunctive, in view of another instruction authorizing the jury to find for plaintiff, if defendant was guilty of either of the acts of negligence charged.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1326, 1332; Dec. Dig. § 321.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

4. TRIAL (§ 263*)—REQUESTS FOR INSTRUCTIONS—GIVING ONE OF SEVERAL.

Where, in an action for injuries to a passenger, defendant requests several instructions on the issue of contributory negligence, it cannot complain that the court gave only one of them, or that the court should have chosen another one.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Dec. Dig. § 263.*]

5. TRIAL (§ 260*)—REQUESTS FOR INSTRUCTIONS.

The refusal of a requested special charge fully covered by the main charge is not error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 651; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

Appeal from District Court, Johnson County; O. L. Lockett, Judge.

Action by G. W. Ford against the International & Great Northern Railroad Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Baker & Thomas, for appellant. J. B. Haynes, for appellee.

TALBOT, J. Ford, the appellee, sued the appellant, railway company, to recover damages on account of personal injuries sustained by him in alighting from one of appellant's passenger trains at Bradley station. The petition alleged, in substance: That plaintiff was a passenger on defendant's said train going from Everman station to said Bradley station; that when the train reached his destination it was night and very dark; that the train was stopped, the station announced, and plaintiff invited or directed by the conductor in charge thereof to alight; that the place where the train was stopped and plaintiff requested to alight was unsafe and dangerous for him to do so, in that the railroad track was upon an embankment and the distance to the ground from the steps of the car about four feet; that defendant's servants negligently failed to furnish a light at or near said place, and so failed to assist him to alight, and failed to provide a box or stool for plaintiff to step upon; that plaintiff did not know of the distance from the steps of the car to the ground; and that, though exercising due care and caution in stepping from the car, because of the great distance to the ground he was thrown or fell with great violence to the ground and seriously injured in his left shoulder, hand, and fingers—the shoulder dislocated and fractured, and the bones of his hand and fingers crushed and broken. The defendant answered by general and special exceptions, a general denial, and plea of contributory negligence. A jury trial resulted in a verdict and judgment in favor of plaintiff, and the defendant appealed.

The evidence was sufficient to establish the material allegations of plaintiff's petition and to justify the jury's findings that the negligence alleged on the part of the defendant was the proximate cause of his injuries, and that plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence and sustained damages in the amount awarded by the verdict.

The court charged the jury that "ordinary care means that degree of care which a person of ordinary prudence would usually exercise under the same circumstances, and the failure to use such care is negligence." It is contended that this charge is an incorrect definition of "ordinary care" because of the qualification of the word "exercise" by the word "usually." With this contention we do not agree. The definition given, if not entirely accurate, is substantially correct, and furnishes no ground for a reversal. In the case of Railway Company v. Brown, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 57, 69 S. W. 1010, cited by appellee, the language employed in the definition of "ordinary care" was that degree of care and caution that a person of ordinary prudence is "accustomed to use" under like circumstances, and the appellate court, after stating that there could be no valid objection to the definition, said: "There can be no practical difference between what a person of ordinary prudence would ordinarily do or usually do, and what such person is accustomed to do under similar circumstances."

Nor do we think there was any error in submitting to the jury in the main charge the question whether or not the appellant failed to furnish appellee a box or stool upon which to step in alighting from the train, of which appellant can justly complain. If the evidence did not authorize the submission of that question as one of negligence on the part of appellant, the error in submitting it was cured and rendered harmless by a special charge, given at the request of appellant, entirely withdrawing that issue from the consideration of the jury. The court's general charge and the special charge upon the question were not in conflict. By the special charge the issue of negligence, respecting the failure of appellant to furnish the stool, was expressly withdrawn, and the jury instructed not to consider the same.

Appellant's third assignment of error complains of the following paragraph of the court's charge: "On the other hand, if you believe from the evidence that the defendant's employes stopped defendant's train on said night at a reasonably safe place, and that defendant's employes in charge of the train furnished a light at or near said place where plaintiff alighted so as to enable plaintiff to alight with reasonable safety, and that the defendant's employes assisted plaintiff in alighting from said train, * * * to find for defendant." The objection to this charge is that it required the jury to believe that the appellant had performed each and all of the acts mentioned in the charge before they could return a verdict in its favor. The charge does not warrant a reversal of the judgment. The grounds of negligence alleged were, in substance, that defendant had stopped its train at an unsafe place for plaintiff to alight, that it failed to have the place where plaintiff was required to leave the train lighted, and failed to assist plaintiff in alighting. If defendant was negligent in either of those respects, and the same proximately contributed to cause plaintiff's injuries, and he was not guilty of contributory negligence, he was entitled to recover; and the jury were, in effect, so instructed by the paragraph of the court's charge immediately preceding the one of which complaint is here made. So that in submitting the converse of the proposition it was essential, in order to properly guard the plaintiff's rights, to join the sentences relating to the different acts of negligence alleged by the conjunction, "and." If the disjunctive, "or," had been used in framing the charge, a verdict would have been authorized for the defendant if it was not guilty of negligence in some one of the respects charged, although it was guilty of negligence in one or all of the other respects.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes.

It is assigned that the court erred in refusing to give a special charge requested by the defendant, to the effect that if the jury believed it was dangerous for the plaintiff to alight from defendant's train, and that the plaintiff knew, or in the exercise of ordinary care should have known, that it was dangerous to alight from defendant's train to the ground at the time and place he did alight, and that by reason of said danger in alighting in the manner and at the time and place he did alight he would fall and be injured, then he could not recover. This charge was one of two or three asked by the defendant upon the issue of contributory negligence, one of which was given by the court, and the defendant is not in a position to complain that the one in question was not given instead of the one selected by the court, or that both should have been given. Besides, the special charge requested by the defendant and given upon the subject was, especially in view of the court's main charge and other special charges given, a sufficient application of the law to the facts. In the special instruction given, the jury were told that if they believed from the evidence that an ordinarily prudent person, under the circumstances, would not have alighted from defendant's train at the time and in the manner in which the plaintiff did alight, and that the plaintiff failed to use such care to prevent being injured as an ordinarily prudent person would have used under the same or similar circumstances, to find for defendant.

For the same reason we think the court did not err in refusing to give defendant's special charge, the refusal of which is made the basis of its fourth assignment of error, to the effect that if the jury believed that an ordinarily prudent man, situated as plaintiff was, would not have attempted to alight from the train at the time and in the manner he did without assistance, to find for defendant.

We have examined and carefully considered all of the assignments, and, because we are of opinion that none of them point out reversible error, the judgment of the court below is affirmed.

S. G. CARTER & CO. v. HARRELL & WALKER.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 15, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 13, 1909.)

1. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 84*) — CONTRACTS—CONSTRUCTION.

A vendor, in a contract for the sale and purchase of real estate stipulating that a part of the consideration shall consist of land of the purchaser to be conveyed to the vendor, that both parties shall furnish abstracts of title by a designated date, that the parties shall have 30 days from the date of the opinion of their attorneys to clear title, as shall be required, and that if the title will not pass the opinion of the attorneys the trade shall be declared void and all forfeits withdrawn, etc., permits either party to withdraw from the contract on being unable to furnish satisfactory title, and the vendor may exercise his right to withdraw after the expiration of the time within which he is to furnish satisfactory title, on the purchaser refusing to accept the title tendered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 140; Dec. Dig. § 84.*]

2. BROKERS (§ 61*) — COMMISSIONS — WHEN EARNED.

A broker, employed to procure a purchaser, agreed to furnish an abstract of title. He procured a purchaser who entered into a contract with the vendor. The contract gave either party the right to withdraw on being unable to furnish satisfactory title. The purchaser objected to the title of the vendor, and the broker was unable to cure the defects. The vendor exercised his right to withdraw after the time fixed for the furnishing of a satisfactory title, on the purchaser insisting that the title was unsatisfactory as to a part of the land. Held, that the broker was not entitled to commissions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Cent. Dig. §§ 77, 78, 92, 93; Dec. Dig. § 61.*]

Appeal from District Court, Johnson County; O. L. Lockett, Judge.

Action by S. G. Carter & Co. against Harrell & Walker. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Poindexter & Padelford, for appellants. Ramsey & Odell and Crane, Seay & Crane, for appellees.

HODGES, J. In 1906 the appellees, Harrell & Walker, owned 20 sections of land situated in the counties of Roberts and Gray, which they desired to sell. On May 30, 1906, they entered into a written contract with the appellants, by the terms of which the latter were given an exclusive option on the land at an agreed price till the 1st day of July following. It was also provided in that contract that, in the event the land was not sold by the time the option expired, it was to be listed for sale with the appellants, but no exclusive option given. Among the different provisions of the contract referred to was one binding the appellants in case of sale to prepare and furnish an abstract of title to all of the land, this to be done at their own expense, except as to matters outside of the counties of Roberts and Gray, where the land was situated. It appears that after the contract was executed, and probably on the same day, the parties entered into the following supplemental agreement: "Referring to a certain tract, an option this the 30th day of May, 1906, made by and between Harrell & Walker of Johnson county, Tex., and S. G. Carter & Co. of Miami, Tex., it is agreed and understood that in case Harrell & Walker cannot execute a good abstract of title satisfactory to the purchaser, then the said S. G. Carter & Co. are not to claim or collect a commission unless the purchaser accept the title and abstract as presented under the sale." This was signed by all of the parties in interest. The exclusive option given to the appellants having expired, it was extended by an agreement till the 28th of August following. On that date they found purchasers in the persons of Clark & Clark, who resided at Vernon, and who were willing to purchase the land upon the terms exacted by the appellees, and a written contract was on that day entered into between the appellees and the Clarks, containing the different stipulations regarding the details of the transfer, the terms of the sale, and the obligations of the parties as to the abstracts of title and conveyances necessary to consummate the trade. This contract is quite lengthy, and we deem it unnecessary to quote or refer to any part of it, except those portions bearing upon the questions involved in this appeal. A part of the consideration to be paid by the Clarks consisted of 194 acres of land situated in Bell county, Tex. The contract contained the following provision: "As to the title to land here conveyed by both parties of first and second part, it is expressly agreed that both parties shall furnish to the attorneys of opposite parties an abstract of all land conveyed, said contracts to be furnished by October 1, 1906. Then said attorney shall examine within five days and report his opinion on said title, and if exceptions are found to either tract of land or tracts of land then said parties who are recited above as transferring said land shall have 30 days from the date of the lawyers' opinion to clear title as the attorney shall require, or if titles are not in shape and will not pass the opinion in due form of the attorneys of said parties of second part and said parties of first part as above set forth and within the time limit as here given, then this trade shall be declared void and all forfeits shall be withdrawn." And also this further provision: "For a guarantee of good faith that both parties of the first and second parts hereto and to guarantee that they will perform as near as is possible the compliance of this contract and agreement the said Harrell & Walker and the said A. P. Clark, Sr., and A. P. Clark, Jr., have deposited in the First National Bank of Grandview, Tex., the sum of twenty-five hundred ($2,500.00) dollars each, that should the said party of the first part be in position to close the trade as above set out and in the time above set out, and should fail to do so, then the said First National Bank of Grandview, Tex., shall pay to said parties of the second part the full sum of both forfeits, namely, $5,000.00, and should the said parties of the second part be in position to make deed to land, and fail to do so, or should said parties of second part fail to comply with this contract, then the said First National Bank of Grandview, Tex., shall deliver to said parties of first part the entire forfeit pledged, namely, $5,000.00. However, should the said parties of first part or the said parties of the second part be unable to make title to land herein set out in the time as herein given, then the said First National Bank of Grandview, Tex., shall return to parties of first part their forfeit of $2,500.00 and to parties of second part their forfeit of $2,500.00, and this trade shall be declared off."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

It appears that no special attention was paid to the time limit within which the abstracts of title were to be presented and accepted or rejected. According to the contract this should have been done by or before November 5th. A few days after this time limit had expired, a conversation took place between Harrell, one of the appellees, and one of the Clarks, concerning the abstracts of title which each was to furnish for their respective tracts of land. This resulted in an agreement for them to meet at Vernon and discuss the matter further. About November 18th, Harrell, in response to the request of Clark, went to Vernon, and a conversation occurred between them as to the sufficiency of the abstracts which had been presented for examination. Harrell expressed a willingness to accept the title of the Clarks to the 194 acres, but Clark declined to accept that of the appellees to the 20 sections, and pointed out two objections made by his attorney to two of the sections, and at the same time delivered the abstracts to Harrell, demanding that the objections be removed before he would take the land. The defects consisted of the absence of any evidence to show that one Mary Hull was a party to a former litigation involving section 105, and that one Maud Sumner was the same person as Maud Horsford mentioned in the record relating to another section of the land. These were considered by Clark and his attorney as being material and important, and Harrell was given to understand ing; but we think, when considered in its most favorable light toward the appellants, the evidence is sufficient to show that Clark delivered to Harrell the abstracts to the 20 sections and refused to complete the purchase till those objections mentioned by him were removed. He appeared willing, however, that Harrell should have further time in which to do this. It also appears that Harrell then agreed to visit Carter, upon whom he was relying to prepare the abstracts, and ascertain from him whether the objections had been met or could be, and agreed to wire Clark informing him of the result. They differ as to whether or not Harrell at that time informed Clark that he would call the trade off, and that Clark assented to it; these facts being affirmed by Harrell and denied by Clark. Clark, however, does say that he was unwilling to accept the land at that time unless the objections mentioned by him were removed, and that he so informed Harrell; but that he was anxious that the objections should be removed, and was still willing to take the land in the event this was done. Harrell, accordingly, visited Carter at his home at Miami, and was informed by Carter that the objections had not been met, and, from a conversation which each has detailed as having occurred, it does not appear that Carter at that time had any substantial evidence upon which he could rely to expect that the objections would be met in the future, but stated what efforts he had made to furnish the proof which Clark's attorney demanded as to those particular facts and his inability so far to procure it. He asked and received permission from Harrell to wait until the next day, in order that he might communicate with Clark. He, accordingly, visited Clark on the following day. Harrell testifies that he did wait until the following day, and, not having received any further information regarding the removal of the objections, he telegraphed Clark that fact and declared the trade off. It appears that this telegram was received by Clark during Carter's visit. Carter returned with a written agreement on the part of Clark expressing a willingness to take all of the land at the prices agreed upon, except section 105, and to permit the appellees to thereafter complete the abstracts with reference to that section, to allow them as much time as they wanted to remove the objections urged, and when this was done to take that section also. This was refused by Harrell, who stated that the land had at that time been sold. Later, and after Clark had learned that the land had been sold by Harrell, he telegraphed his willingness to accept all of the land upon the terms named and without insisting upon sale. Carter, one of the appellants, testified that it was the duty of his firm, under their contract with the appellees, to furnish the abstracts of title to the 20 sections of land owned by the appellees.

The appellants brought this suit upon their contract for commissions, alleging a sale made to the Clarks on August 28, 1906, as evidenced by the contract hereinbefore referred to. The court instructed the jury at the conclusion of the evidence to return a verdict in favor of the appellees, defendants in the court below. Hence this appeal.

There are several errors assigned, but we think the case may be properly disposed of upon that assignment which is based upon the giving of the peremptory instruction to find for the defendants. The real question here involved is: Did the appellees have the right, under their contract with the Clarks, to withdraw their offer to sell the land at the time they did? It seems that the contract with the Clarks had been so worded as to permit either party to withdraw their offer if they were unable to furnish a satisfactory title. Appellees did not exercise that right till after the expiration of the time within which they were to do this and after the Clarks had refused to approve the abstract furnished and accept the title tendered, or to take the land unless the objections pointed out by their attorney were removed. The undisputed evidence shows that Harrell consulted Carter as to whether or not the latter had the data with which to meet the objections urged by Clark, and was informed by Carter that he had not, and from what Carter himself says it was exceedingly uncertain as to whether these could be obtained even by waiting. The appellants, by their contract with appellees, undertook to get up the abstracts, and, further, were bound to do it within the time stipulated in the contract between appellees and the Clarks; that is, within 35 days after October 1st. In this they failed. The fact that the parties had tacitly consented not to invoke the time limit after its expiration does not help the cause of the appellants. The right of either party to withdraw his offer when this time had expired did not depend upon the consent of the other, but was governed by the terms of the contract which they had made. If the appellees made a bona fide effort to furnish a title satisfactory to the Clarks within the time specified, and failed, the refusal of Clark to accept the title which they offered would release appellees from any further obligation to continue to hold their offer open, and they had the right to declare the negotiations ended. Appellants cannot claim that Harrell & Walker, the appellees, did not make a bona fide effort to furnish the title, because appellants undertook to do for them this particular work, and the failure was theirs.

Appellants insist that, the Clarks being willing to extend the time for appellees to perfect title and remove the objections made to the abstracts, the latter had no option but to take the time. We think the position utterly untenable, and that it is opposed to the very terms of the contract. If the Clarks wanted the land, they had but to waive their objections to the title and take it before the offer was withdrawn. If they were unwilling to accept the title tendered, they had no right to thus tie up this land indefinitely and prevent sales to other parties who might be willing to accept the title which the appellees offered. The extension of the time limit beyond that stipulated in the contract was as much a matter of agreement between the parties as was the making of the original contract in the first instance. The question of forfeiture as urged by appellants is not involved. If, after the stipulated time expired within which the parties were required to furnish their abstracts of title, the bona fide offers of title had not been accepted, either party had a right to withdraw their offers, and nothing was forfeited. Appellants by their own contract with appellees made their commissions to depend upon the acceptance of appellees' title by the purchaser. It was expressly stipulated that, unless this was accepted, they should receive no commissions. In this case the purchaser refused to accept the title offered till after he knew the land, or a portion of it, had been sold to another. Clark's offer to take part of the land and wait on the appellees to perfect title to the remainder was not in accord with the terms of the contract. That instrument provided for the sale of all of the land in a lump.

We think, under the undisputed evidence in this case, considered in its most favorable aspect toward the appellants, the court properly instructed a verdict in favor of the defendants in the court below.

The judgment is, accordingly, affirmed.

KNOX et al. v. McELROY et al.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. Nov. 11, 1908. On Rehearing, May 19, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 564*) — RECORD — STATEMENT OF FACTS—NECESSITY FOR FILING IN LOWER COURT.

Act May 25, 1907, § 14 (Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 512, c. 24), provides that every statement of facts shall be approved and filed within 30 days after the final adjournment of the term, and that if appellee fail to agree to a statement of facts submitted by appellant, he shall prepare a statement, from which statements the court shall make up a statement and file it within the prescribed time. Section 5 provides that if the parties cannot agree upon a statement of facts, each shall submit to the court a condensed statement, and the court shall make out a statement of facts, and may require the court stenographer to read from his notes, and may direct the stenographer to make up the statement of facts which shall be filed in the case. Held, that the statement of facts, whether agreed to by the parties, prepared by the judge, or under his direction by the stenographer, must be filed within 30 days from adjournment of the term.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2555; Dec. Dig. § 564.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 934*) — REVIEW — PRESUMPTIONS—SUFFICIENCY OF PLEA OF RECONVENTION.

In trespass to try title, where only a general demurrer was interposed to a plea of reconvention setting up defendant's claim for damages, and the demurrer was not called to the attention of, nor acted upon by, the court, every intendment that could have been indulged in favor of the plea, had the demurrer been insisted on, should be given it on appeal, where the validity of the judgment is assailed on account of the insufficiency of the plea.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3777-3782; Dec. Dig. § 934.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 253*)—EXCEPTIONS BELOW—MISJOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION.

A misjoinder of actions should be excepted to in the lower court; and, if it is not, it cannot be objected to on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 1485; Dec. Dig. § 253.*]

4. JUDGMENT (§ 235*)—SEPARATE JUDGMENTS FOR DIFFERENT PARTIES—CONSISTENCY.

A judgment in favor of one person for title to land and for another for damages in the same action is not necessarily inconsistent in itself.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 414; Dec. Dig. § 235.*]

On Rehearing.

5. TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE (§ 47*)—SUIT BY NAKED TRESPASSER—RELIEF TO DEFENDANT.

Prior possession is sufficient to recover land from a naked trespasser, and hence, where defendants were in actual possession and enjoyment of land as their property when plaintiffs sued for its recovery, and remained in possession until they were dispossessed by the sheriff by virtue of a writ of sequestration wrongfully sued out by plaintiffs, they were entitled to recover possession, where plaintiffs dismissed their suit, and defendants proceeded to trial on their pleas in reconvention, claiming title; there being no evidence tending to show title in plaintiffs.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass to Try Title, Cent. Dig. § 69; Dec. Dig. § 47.*]

6. SEQUESTRATION (§ 15*)—RIGHTS ACQUIRED BY IMPROPER SEQUESTRATION.

Where persons having no rights in land gained possession by wrongfully obtaining a writ of sequestration and having it executed, they acquired no rights by the possession so gained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sequestration, Cent. Dig. §§ 25-32; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Appeal from District Court, Sabine County; W. B. Powell, Judge.

Trespass to try title by W. H. Knox and others against S. P. McElroy and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Goodrich & Synnot, for appellants.

to try title, to recover the North Half of the David White one-fourth league survey, and at the same time sued out a writ of sequestration under which the land was sequestered. After the appellees answered by pleas of not guilty and limitation, they filed a plea in reconvention, setting up title in themselves and actual possession of the premises at the time of the institution of the suit, alleging that they had been dispossessed by the sheriff under the writ of sequestration, which was wrongfully and maliciously sued out by plaintiffs, and had been damaged by the illegal suing out of said writ and seizure of their property thereunder. They prayed for recovery of the land, that their title be quieted against plaintiffs' claim, and judgment for the damages sustained. The plaintiffs answered defendants' plea in reconvention by a general demurrer and a plea of not guilty. When, on October 25, 1907, the case was called for trial the plaintiffs appeared and announced that they would no longer prosecute their suit, whereupon, as to them, a judgment of nonsuit was entered. The case was then tried, without a jury, on the defendants' plea in reconvention, and the trial resulted in a judgment in favor of the defendants S. P. McElroy and E. P. Padgett against plaintiffs for the land in controversy, and in favor of defendants Lightfoot and Hornsey against them, for the sum of $2,400 actual damages. The appeal is from this judgment.

Among the papers of the case filed in this court are 49 pages of typewritten matter on sheets of paper which have printed on their margin in red letters, "Geo. G. Markley, Official Court Reporter, First Judicial District," and on the last sheet thereof, on the obverse side, is attached this writing:

"I have looked over the record and find the same correct except: First. The taxes. Second. The testimony of A. L. Norsworthy. Third. Affidavit, bond and writ of sequestration. Mr. Goodrich agrees to put in the record. With these added the statement is O. K. Tom C. Davis, Atty. for Lightfoot.

"November 22, 1907. The above was appended to the 49 pages when they were delivered to me by Mr. W. F. Goodrich, and is not indorsed by me except as my statement of a full page does so. H. B. S., Atty. for P. & McE."

And there is written on said page in pencil this certificate: "The foregoing statement of facts was presented to me and by me approved and ordered filed in this case"—which is signed officially by the judge of the First judicial district. These sheets are fastened together with brass brads, which are pushed through the upper corners and their ends pressed down against the paper. The brad in the left-hand corner goes through 26 sheets papers, thus described, though it does not appear to have been filed in the court below, was evidently intended by appellants to be taken as the statement of facts, containing the oral and documentary evidence introduced upon the trial of the cause; for their brief shows that it was taken as such by them. Are we authorized to so take and consider it on this appeal? Section 14, Act May 25, 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 512, c. 24), is as follows: "Each and every statement of facts to be filed in any cause as provided for in this act shall be approved by the court and filed within thirty days after the final adjournment of the term of court at which such cause was tried. Provided that the appellant shall prepare or cause to be prepared as hereinbefore provided such statement of facts and present the same to the opposite party or his attorney of record for his approval within fifteen days after the final adjournment of such court. And when presented to such opposite party or his attorney of record, such opposite party or his attorney of record shall within ten days thereafter, if he fail or refuse to agree to such statement of facts as submitted by the appellant, prepare or cause to be prepared as hereinbefore provided a statement of facts upon which he relies to be submitted to the court as hereinbefore provided, and from such statements and the record of the case, the court shall make up such statement of facts and approve and file the same as hereinbefore provided within the said thirty days after such final adjournment of such term of court." Section 5, preceding, of the same act provides: "If the parties cannot agree upon a statement of facts in any case, each party or his attorney shall make out a condensed statement of facts and submit such statement to the court and the court shall make out a statement of facts. The judge of the court may call the stenographer and require him to read from his stenographic notes for his information and may direct such stenographer to make up such statement of facts for him which, when so made, and approved by the court, shall be filed in the cause, and shall constitute the statement of facts in such cause." From these quotations from the act it will be seen that the trial judge is required to make up a statement of facts, or direct the stenographer to do so, only in the event the parties cannot agree, and that the statement of facts, whether agreed to by the parties, prepared by the judge, or under his direction by the stenographer, must be filed within 30 days from the adjournment of the term.

In this case we think it is apparent, from the judge's certificate hereinbefore copied, that the batch of papers above referred to was not made up by him, and it is hardly presumable that it was prepared by the stenogshowing that the parties or their attorneys agreed upon it as a statement of facts. If, however, the judge's certificate showed that he made up, or required the stenographer to prepare, the statement of facts, it might be presumed it was on account of a disagreement of the parties. Darcy v. Turner, 46 Tex. 30; Steinbeck v. Stone, 53 Tex. 385. But as the certificate repels the idea that the statement was prepared by the judge, it cannot be presumed that it was made up by him because of such disagreement. If, however, the paper attached to the page on which the judge's certificate is written can be looked to for the purpose of determining the matter, it would appear that they did not agree. As, in such event, it became the judge's duty to make up the statement of facts, or direct the stenographer to do so, it might possibly be presumed that it was made up by the stenographer under the judge's direction, and presented him by the stenographer. Such a presumption, however, might be considered violent. But be this as it may, as it does not appear that such batch of papers was ever filed in the court below, or, if filed within the time prescribed by law, we do not believe we are authorized to consider it as a statement of facts; and, on our own motion, it is stricken from the record.

There being no statement of facts with the record, we cannot revise any of the rulings complained of by the assignments which relate to the admission or exclusion of testimony, or to the conclusions of the court upon evidence introduced; it not appearing from bills of exception and the record that any of such rulings was erroneous and caused injury to appellants. A., T. & S. F. Ry. v. Lochlin, 87 Tex. 467, 29 S. W. 469; Brown v. Vizcaya (Tex. Civ. App.) 55 S. W. 191; Gatlin v. Street, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 304, 90 S. W. 318; M., K. & T. Ry. v. Elliott, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 519, 98 S. W. 706.

This requires us to overrule all the assignments, except the eleventh and thirteenth. Of these the first complains that the court erred in rendering judgment in favor of the defendants Lightfoot and Hornsey for $2,400 damages, for the reason there was not sufficient to base the same. Only a general demurrer was interposed to the plea of reconvention setting up defendants' claim for damages, and it was not called to the attention nor acted upon by the court below. In view of this every intendment that could have been indulged in favor of the plea, had the demurrer been insisted on, should be given it here, when the validity of the judgment is assailed on account of its insufficiency. Tested by this principle, we believe the pleading sufficient to support the judgment. The other (the thirteenth) assignment complains that the court erred in rendering such judgment the court below; and, if it is not, it cannot be objected to on appeal. A judgment in favor of one person for title to land and for another for damages is not necessarily inconsistent in itself, as is illustrated by the pleadings in this case. For if the allegations in defendants' plea in reconvention are true (and they must, in the absence of a statement of facts, be presumed in favor of the judgment to be), defendants Padgett and McElroy were owners of the land. Defendants Lightfoot and Hornsey had contracted with them for the timber thereon, and were on the premises by virtue of the contract, when dispossessed by plaintiff by virtue of the writ of sequestration, and were thereby prevented from reaping the fruits of their contract, to their damage, etc. If these allegations were true, the owners of the land were entitled to possession, and Lightfoot and Hornsey, who were on it under contract with the owners, were entitled to recover any damages occasioned them by the wrongful action of plaintiffs.

The judgment is affirmed.

On Rehearing.

As appears from the original opinion, we refused to consider the batch of papers therein described as a statement of facts for the reasons therein stated. Consequently no assignments of error were considered save such as related to the pleadings, which involved their sufficiency to support the judgment. It is made satisfactorily to appear by this motion that the "batch of papers" described in the original opinion was in fact prepared by the stenographer, in accordance with law, under direction of the court, certified to by the trial judge, and handed by appellants' counsel, within the time prescribed, to the clerk of the district court as the statement of facts in the case, and that, though through inadvertence the clerk failed to indorse his file mark upon it, it was really, in contemplation of law, filed, and was entitled to be taken and considered as a paper in the case. We will therefore set aside our order striking it from the record, and consider the case in the light of it as a statement of facts.

The plaintiffs having dismissed their suit, the defendants, having proceeded to trial on their pleas in reconvention, must be regarded in the attitude of plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs in that of defendants, in the trial and on this appeal. The evidence shows that the appellees were in actual possession and enjoyment of the land as their property when the suit was instituted, and until they were dispossessed by the sheriff by virtue of a writ of sequestration wrongfully sued out by appellants. This, in the absence of evidence tending to show title in appellants, was sufficient to maintain appellees' recovery of the land involved. For prior possession is enough for one to show in order to recover from a naked trespasser. The appellants are none the less wrongdoers for having dispossessed appellees by an abuse of the process of the courts. Such process is given to enforce and protect one in his rights, and, when he has no right that authorizes its issuance, none can be acquired by its execution. Besides we think the evidence reasonably tends to prove that the appellees McElroy and Padgett had title to the land under and by virtue of the 10-years statute of limitation when the suit was brought. They also exhibited in evidence a chain of title from David White, to whom it was admitted the land was titled, down to themselves. The several instruments and documents composing this chain were introduced in evidence over objections of appellants, and their admission as evidence over the objection is the basis, of several of the assignments of error. Inasmuch as the appellees were entitled to recover on their prior possession, as well as under the statute of limitation, we deem it sufficient to say, without discussing the assignments just referred to, that we do not believe any of them is well taken.

The evidence is amply sufficient to support the judgment in favor of defendants Lightfoot and Hornsey for the damages awarded them. None of the assignments of error relating to this part of the judgment can be sustained.

The motion for rehearing is overruled.

NEWMAN et al. v. SATTERWHITE.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. May 5, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 744*)—FILING ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS—EFFECT OF STATUTE.

A statute requiring an appellant in all cases to file with the clerk of the court below all assignments of error, distinctly specifying the ground on which he relies, before he takes the transcript of the record from the clerk's office, is mandatory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3044; Dec. Dig. § 744.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 745*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—INCORPORATION IN RECORD.

It is usual and proper to incorporate assignments of error in the record; but, in the absence of objections, assignments of error, properly filed in the lower court, and accompanied by the proper certificate, will be considered on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. § 745.*]

Appeal from District Court, Houston County; Benj. H. Gardner, Judge.

Action by M. W. Satterwhite against Porter Newman and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Moore & Sallas and Porter Newman, for appellants. Nunn & Nunn, for appellee.

FLY, J. Appellee sued E. B. Hale, Nat Wetzel, Porter Newman, N. J. Badu, and W. A. Forbes to recover damages for unlawfully entering upon his land and carelessly and negligently setting fire to his house and destroying it. A plea to the jurisdiction filed by W. A. Forbes was sustained, and he was dismissed from the suit. A trial by jury resulted in a verdict and judgment for appellee, and against Hale, Wetzel, Badu, and Newman, for $414.12. This appeal was prosecuted by Wetzel and Newman; but afterwards the appeal of Wetzel was dismissed at his request.

This cause was tried at a term of the district court ending on April 25, 1908, and the record was delivered to appellants on August 5, 1908, and filed in the Court of Civil Appeals of the First Supreme Judicial District on August 7, 1908. The record contains no assignments of error; but on December 2, 1908, an application for a writ of certiorari was filed by Newman, supported by the affidavit of appellant's attorney that he had filed assignments of error with the district clerk or his deputy, which was flatly contradicted by the affidavits of the clerk and his deputy. The Court of Civil Appeals at Galveston refused the writ of certiorari. The application of appellant shows that no assignments of error were on file in the office of the district clerk, and his object was, not to supply something on file with the district clerk, which is the office of a writ of certiorari, but to supply a record that never existed or had been lost. The assignments presented to the appellate court do not appear to have ever been filed in the district court.

The statute requires that the appellant or plaintiff in error shall in all cases file with the clerk of the court below all assignments of error, distinctly specifying the grounds on which he relies, before he takes the transcript of the record from the clerk's office. That statute is mandatory, and, while it is usual and proper to incorporate the assignments in and make them a part of the record, still, in the absence of objections, assignments of error, properly filed in the lower court, and accompanied by the proper certificate, might be considered on appeal. McAfee v. Wheelis, 1 Posey, Unrep. Cas. 65.

Rule 100 for district and county courts (67 S. W. xvii) provides that the party, or his counsel, who has applied for a transcript, and finds it defective, may return it for correction; and it is provided that "the reception of it by the party or his counsel, without being so returned for such purpose, will be regarded as an assumption by him of all the responsibility for any and all deficiencies found in the transcript, resulting from the violation of these rules or of the statutes." The transcript could have been filed in the appellate court for at least a week after the transcript was obtained by appellants, and the duty devolved on them to see that the assignments of error were filed in the district clerk's office before the transcript was taken out, and that they accompanied it.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

There being no assignments of error, and no errors apparent of record, the judgment will be affirmed.

TEXAS & P. RY. CO. et al. v. GOLDSMITH & GARRETT.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 29, 1909.)

EVIDENCE (§ 471*)—OPINIONS—SHIPPER OF LIVE STOCK—LENGTH OF RUN.

In an action against a carrier for delay in transporting cattle, the shipper was incompetent to testify as to what would be a reasonable run with cattle from one point to another.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2149-2151; Dec. Dig. § 471.*]

Appeal from Midland County Court; Charley Gibbs, Judge.

Action by Goldsmith & Garrett against the Texas & Pacific Railway Company and others. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendants appeal. Reversed and remanded.

Ed. W. Smith and H. C. Hughes, for appellants. S. J. Isaachs and G. B. Smedley, for appellee.

LEVY, J. The suit was to recover damages for the alleged negligent handling and delay en route of a certain shipment of cattle. In accordance with the verdict of a jury, judgment was entered in favor of the appellees.

The appellants each, in the second assignment of error, complain of the admission of certain evidence in the trial of the case. One of the appellees, testifying as a witness, was allowed by the court, over the objection of the appellants, to state his opinion as to "what is a reasonable run with cattle from Midland to Ft. Worth over the Texas & Pacific Railway, and from Ft. Worth, to Kansas City over the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad." It has been ruled in case of Railway Co. v. Noelke (Tex. Civ. App.) 110 S. W. 82, that similar testimony was improper and inadmissible. Also, see Railway Co. v. May (Tex. Civ. App.) 115 S. W. 900.

The case was ordered reversed and remanded.

GARDNER et al. v. 'PLANTERS' NAT. BANK OF HONEY GROVE.†

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 25, 1909. Rehearing Denied April 15, 1909.)

1. LIENS (§ 3*)—VALIDITY—EFFECT AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

A verbal agreement by a bank to furnish money to buy cattle upon which it should have a lien, and that, as the buyer should sell the cattle, the proceeds should be paid direct to the bank, and should be its money so far as necessary to reimburse it for such advances, is valid between the parties and as to volunteers and persons having notice thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Liens, Cent. Dig. § 24; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

2. BANKRUPTCY (§ 295*)—ACTIONS AGAINST TRUSTEE—JURISDICTION OF STATE COURTS.

Where money claimed by plaintiff has been paid by the agents of a bankrupt to his trustee in bankruptcy, an action against the trustee and the agents may be brought in a state court for the recovery of the money. As plaintiff does not seek to disturb the possession of the trustee nor interfere with the proceedings of the bankruptcy court, and the agents of the bankrupt being proper parties, plaintiff could not sue them in the bankruptcy court, and Act Cong. Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 3, 25 Stat. 436 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582), provides that every receiver or manager of property appointed by any United States court may be sued in respect of any act or transaction of his in carrying on the business connected with such property without leave of the court in which he was appointed, but the suit shall be subject to the general equity jurisdiction of the court appointing him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

3. BANKRUPTCY (§ 299*)—ACTION AGAINST TRUSTEE—PARTIES.

Plaintiff was the claimant of a fund which was in the hands of agents of a bankrupt, and paid by them with full knowledge of plaintiff's rights to the trustee of the bankrupt after demand upon them by plaintiff. Held, that such agents were proper parties in a suit against the trustee to recover the money.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 299.*]

4. BANKRUPTCY (§ 295*)—ACTIONS AGAINST TRUSTEE—JURISDICTION OF STATE COURT—WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS.

Where money in the hands of agents of a bankrupt also claimed by plaintiff is garnished by a creditor of the bankrupt, and is subsequently paid to the bankrupt's trustee, and suit is brought by plaintiff in a state court against the trustee and bankrupt's agents to recover the money, if the trustee by supplemental answer seeks to have an order dismissing the garnishment set aside, he thereby waives his objections to the jurisdiction of the state court over him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 916*)—REVIEW—PRESUMPTION AS TO RULING OF TRIAL COURT.

Where defendants file a plea of privilege which is overruled, and an amended answer is filed, and the record fails to show the contents of the first answer, it will be presumed in favor of the judgment that the ruling of the trial court as to such plea is correct.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3699-3705; Dec. Dig. § 916.*]

6. VENUE (§ 22*)—RESIDENCE OF PARTIES—CO-DEFENDANTS.

Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, subd. 4, providing that, where there are two or more defendants residing in different counties, a suit may be brought in the county where any one of the defendants reside, an action against the trustee of a bankrupt and the agents of the bankrupt to recover a sum of money paid by the agents to the trustee may be brought in the county in which the trustee resides, although the agents do not reside in that county.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

† Writ of error denied by Supreme Court June 2, 1909.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Venue, Cent. Dig. §§ 35-37; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

7. BANKRUPTCY (§ 283*) — ACTION AGAINST TRUSTEE.

Where a contract between two parties, by which money in the hands of the agents of one party is to belong to the other party and be paid to it, is not carried out because of the failure of the agents to pay the money to the party to whom it belongs, the right of the party to collect such money will not be affected thereby, as equity looks upon that as done which ought to have been done, and the party to whom the money rightfully belongs may bring action against the trustee in bankruptcy of the other party to whom the money was paid by the bankrupt's agent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 283.*]

8. BANKRUPTCY (§ 303*)—ACTIONS AGAINST TRUSTEE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence in an action against the trustee of a bankrupt and the agents of the bankrupt to recover a sum of money paid by the agents to the trustee and claimed by plaintiff held to sustain a finding for the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 303.*]

9. BANKRUPTCY (§ 188*) — PREFERENCES — LIENS.

An agreement by which a bank advanced money to a bankrupt to be used in the purchase of cattle, giving the bank a lien on the proceeds from the sale of the cattle, does not constitute a preference by the bankrupt in violation of the bankruptcy act, nor is the contract invalid for want of record.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 188.*]

10. BANKRUPTCY (§ 195*)—PRIORITY OF GARNISHMENT TO OTHER LIEN—NOTICE TO GARNISHER.

Where a garnisher has notice of a prior lien on the money which he attempts to garnish, such lien will prevail against the rights of the garnisher, and the rights of a trustee in bankruptcy to whom the money was subsequently transferred by the persons holding it; the trustee having notice also of the prior lien.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Dec. Dig. § 195.*]

Appeal from District Court, Fannin County; Ben H. Denton, Judge.

Action by the Planters' National Bank of Honey Grove against S. H. Gardner and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Appellee, as claimant of $1,000.77, the net proceeds of the sale of certain cattle, and for recovery of the same and to have the rights of each of the parties growing out of the transaction settled and adjusted, brought the suit in the district court of Fannin county, Tex., against the appellants Davis & Hamm and S. H. Gardner as trustee of the estate of G. F. Newberry, bankrupt. The petition alleged that on August 21, 1907, said Davis & Hamm, a partnership and doing business as commission merchants in Tarrant county, Tex., as agents of G. F. Newberry, sold a certain lot of cattle which had been shipped and consigned by Newberry to them for sale on commission, the property of Newberry, and, after deducting freight, commissions, and other expenses, there remained in their hands the sum of $1,000.77, the net proceeds of such sales; that the said net proceeds was the property and money of the appellee; that appellee had theretofore advanced said Newberry the money with which to buy said cattle under a contract entered into between it and Newberry, by the terms of which it was agreed, for a valuable consideration, that all cattle purchased by Newberry with the money advanced by appellee should stand as security for the repayment of such money, and that the net proceeds of all sales of such cattle should be paid directly to appellee to be applied in payment of the debt owing by Newberry on account of money advanced by appellee; "that Davis & Hamm knew of such agreement between plaintiff and Newberry on August 21, 1907, at the time they received the proceeds of such sales from the purchasers of said cattle, and they knew of the existing agreement between plaintiff and Newberry to the effect that such proceeds should be paid by Davis & Hamm to plaintiff, and not to Newberry;" that thereafter, on September 21, 1907, said Newberry was duly adjudged a bankrupt in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Texas, and on October 8, 1907, said Gardner was duly appointed or elected trustee of said bankrupt's estate and qualified as such, "and afterwards, on October 15, 1907, said Gardner represented to said Davis & Hamm that said bankrupt court had ordered them to turn over said $1,000.77 to him as trustee aforesaid, and on or about the same day Davis & Hamm, without the knowledge or consent of plaintiff, paid said money to said Gardner, trustee, who still has it in his custody as such trustee, claiming that same belongs to said bankrupt's estate, and denies the right of plaintiff thereto." It was alleged that the bankrupt court had no such order nor was appellee in any way a party to said bankrupt proceedings, but that Davis & Hamm relied upon said representation of said Gardner in making such payment, and, in fact, did not know to the contrary. Appellant Gardner pleaded to the jurisdiction of the court, and Davis & Hamm filed a plea of privilege, each of which pleas was overruled by the court, and they defended by general denial and special defenses.

It was substantially proved in the record that about January 1, 1907, the appellee bank and G. F. Newberry made an agreement, which was, in substance, that the appellee would furnish him money with which to buy cattle and hogs, and that he would ship out and sell the same along as he would accumulate small lots, and that the live stock so bought would stand for the money so advanced, and, as sales should be made, the net proceeds from the sales should be paid to the appellee, and not to Newberry, and which money should belong to the appellee to the extent necessary to cover the advances; that the appellee would advance the money by paying Newberry's checks, thus making an overdraft at the bank. This arrangement between them was to continue as long as agreeable to Newberry and the bank. It did continue until the appellee's rights asserted in this case accrued. Newberry was insolvent when the agreement was made, and with no property subject to execution, and so continued thereafter; but he adhered strictly to his agreement with the appellee bank. As further security, and as evidenced by this agreement, Newberry gave the bank a mortgage on all his cattle and hogs and on those to be bought with the appellee's money on March 2, 1907. About June 10, 1907, the bank released this mortgage for the sole purpose of allowing the appellant Davis & Hamm to obtain a mortgage on the cattle that Newberry then owned to secure a loan they were then making him, with the agreement with Newberry that it would not change his arrangement with the appellee bank, and immediately Newberry gave the appellee bank a new mortgage on all the cattle to be purchased with the money furnished by it. The money loaned by the appellant Davis & Hamm paid Newberry's debt to this appellee bank; and soon thereafter Newberry began to buy more cattle with the appellee bank's money, and on August 19, 1907, Newberry shipped a lot of cattle to the market at Ft. Worth, Tex., consigned to appellant Davis & Hamm, which Davis & Hamm sold on the open market on August 21, 1907, and the net proceeds of that part of the cattle which Newberry had bought with the appellee bank's money since June 10, 1907, amounted to the net sum of $1,000.77, and was in the possession of appellant Davis & Hamm on August 21, 1907, and at which time T. W. Trout sued Newberry for a debt and garnished the appellant Davis & Hamm, who refused to turn this money over to the appellee bank on their demand, but who were informed that appellee bank claimed and owned this money, and that Newberry claimed no part of it, as the appellee bank's advances to him exceeded these particular proceeds. Previous to this time, also during that year, Newberry had informed appellant Davis & Hamm of his arrangement with the appellee bank. On the 15th of September, 1907, Newberry filed his petition in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Texas, and was adjudged by that court a bankrupt on September 17, 1907; and on October 7, 1907, the appellant Gardner was appointed trustee of the estate of said bankrupt, and qualified immediately thereafter. In October, 1907, Gardner as trustee demanded of Davis & Hamm the $1,000.77, and they sent him their check in payment thereof. Gardner, trustee, and Trout, at the time and previous thereto, each knew of the bank's claim to the said particular proceeds. Trout had dismissed his garnishment. There appears in the record, as offered by the appellant, the following ex parte order of the referee in bankruptcy: "In the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Texas. In the matter of G. F. Newberry, bankrupt, in bankruptcy, at Sherman, in said district, on the 8th of October, 1907. It appearing to the court that Davis & Hamm Commission Company of Fort Worth, Texas, have in their possession a large sum of money belonging to said bankrupt's estate, to wit, $1,000.77, it is therefore ordered that said S. H. Gardner, trustee in said bankruptcy, demand of said Davis & Hamm Commission Company said sum of money." The trial was by jury, and upon their answers to the special issues submitted judgment was entered by the court. The judgment as entered on the findings of the jury, omitting formal parts, is: "It is adjudged by the court that plaintiff, the Planters' National Bank of Honey Grove, Tex., a corporation, recover of the defendants W. D. Davis and A. B. Hamm (composing the partnership Davis & Hamm) and S. H. Gardner, trustee of the estate of G. F. Newberry, bankrupt, jointly and severally, $1,000.77, and that said plaintiff recover of said Davis & Hamm the further sum of $20, being 6 per cent. per annum interest on $1,000 from November 16, 1907, up to the present time, and that plaintiff recover of said Davis & Hamm all costs of this suit, and that execution issue against said Davis & Hamm for said recoveries against them, but that no execution issue against said Gardner, trustee, but, in lieu thereof, it is decreed by the court that plaintiff is the owner of the $1,000.77 paid by Davis & Hamm to Gardner, trustee, aforesaid, and that said Gardner, trustee, is not entitled to said money, and that plaintiff may present this judgment to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Texas in the cause therein pending entitled 'In the Matter of the Estate of G. F. Newberry, Bankrupt, in Bankruptcy,' where said money is on deposit, as authority for said bankrupt court to pay over said money to plaintiff. It is further decreed that, should said Davis & Hamm discharge this judgment, then said recovery against said Gardner, trustee, inure to their benefit and subrogate them to the rights of plaintiff; and, should plaintiff receive from said bankrupt court or from said Gardner any of said $1,000.77, the same shall be a credit on said recoveries against Davis & Hamm."

From this judgment the appellants have brought the case on appeal to have same revised for the errors assigned.

Gross & Armstrong, for appellants. McGrady & McMahon, for appellee.

LEVY, J. (after stating the facts as above). By the first assignment of error, it is contended that the court erred in overruling the plea of the trustee in bankruptcy to the jurisdiction of the court over his person and the subject-matter of this suit. We do not think this was error in a proceeding of the instant kind. The appellee having furnished Newberry the money to buy the cattle, under an agreement that it should have a lien on the cattle and that they should stand as security for the advances, and that, as Newberry should sell the cattle, the proceeds should be paid direct to appellee, and should be the money of appellee so far as necessary to reimburse it for such advances, such agreement is valid between the parties and as to volunteers and persons having notice thereof, and entitles appellee to the proceeds of the cattle when sold. 3 Pomeroy, Eq. Juris. § 1235; 4 Cyc. 43; 19 A. & E. Enc. 14; Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 17 Sup. Ct. 439, 41 L. Ed. 855; Railway v. Hurley, 153 Fed. 503, 82 C. C. A. 453. By giving such effect, and we think it should be, to the intent and purpose of the agreement alleged, and we think sufficiently proved, between appellee and Newberry about the particular funds in the hands of Davis & Hamm, then appellee could maintain an action against the trustee and Davis & Hamm, who, having knowledge of its rights to the property, interfered with its rights, because of the fact that appellee would not claim through the estate of the bankrupt, but adversely to it. Being an adverse claimant to the particular fund in controversy, and the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy of the money not being disturbed nor sought to be disturbed, nor the proceedings in the bankruptcy court interfered with nor sought to be interfered with, then we think the court in which this suit was brought had jurisdiction to try and determine the controversy between the parties and to adjust and settle the rights of the parties to the particular property or fund. Skilton v. Codrington, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885; Frank v. Vollkommer, 205 U. S. 521, 27 Sup. Ct. 596, 51 L. Ed. 911; Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. Ed. 403. Appellant Davis & Hamm, holding the particular fund as the agent of G. F. Newberry, and with full knowledge of appellee's rights thereto and of Newberry's consent and agreement that the particular fund should be the money of appellee and be paid by them direct to the appellee, and demand upon them for the money having been made by appellee previous to the delivery by them of the money to the trustee, and having surrendered the particular fund to the trustee after such knowledge and demand without the consent of appellee or Newberry, were proper parties to the suit, and appellee had the right to make them parties. Cobb v. Barber et al., 92 Tex. 309, 47 S. W. 963. Appellee could not force Davis & Hamm into the bankrupt court. Bardes v. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1175. That Gardner as trustee could be sued in the case we think is clear from Act Cong. Aug. 13, 1888, c. 860, § 3, 25 Stat. 436, 4 St. Ann. p. 387

(U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582), which provides "that every receiver or manager of any property, appointed by any court of the United States, may be sued in respect of any act or transaction of his in carrying on the business connected with such property, without the previous leave of the court in which such receiver or manager was appointed; but such suit shall be subject to the general equity jurisdiction of the court in which such receiver or manager was appointed, so far as the same shall be necessary to the ends of justice." A trustee in bankruptcy is appointed by a "court of the United States," and comes clearly within the meaning of the act. The portion of the act reserving in the court appointing the "manager of any property" a general equity right to protect against injustice we think shows that it was the intention of Congress to allow disputes about and adverse claims to the property to be litigated in courts other than the one appointing the manager or receiver. The judgment as rendered in this case does not disturb the possession of the bankrupt court. It only provides for a certification to that court for observance in so far as just and equitable. It appears in the record that the trustee, Gardner, by supplemental answer, sought as affirmative relief to have an order dismissing a garnishment against this particular property sued out by T. W. Trout set aside, and that he be subjected to the garnishing creditors' rights, and the court to enforce this right. This would appear to be a waiver of his objections to jurisdiction of the court over him. Slater v. Trostel (Tex. Civ. App.) 21 S. W. 285; Douglas v. Baker, 79 Tex. 499, 15 S. W. 801.

By the second assignment of error, it is claimed that the court erred in overruling the plea of privilege urged by appellant Davis & Hamm. It appears that the plea of privilege was heard and overruled on February 4, 1907, and that permission was granted to amend the answer February 26, 1907. The record failing to show the contents of the first answer, we would be required to indulge the presumption in favor of the correctness of the ruling of the trial court. The first answer may or may not have, for aught the record shows, admitted facts which showed jurisdiction, or contained a cross-bill which of itself would have waived the plea. Presumptions are in favor of the judgment rendered, unless such state of facts is shown as to enable the appellate court to say the ruling was error. Punderson v. Love, 3 Tex. 63; Pierce v. Pierce, 21 Tex. 469. But, even if it should be held that the plea had not been waived, appellant Gardner resided in Fannin county, and appellee had the right to sue all the parties in this case in the county of his residence. Article 1194, subd. 4, Rev. St. 1895; Cobb v. Barber et al., 92 Tex. 300, 47 S. W. 963.

Assignments Nos. 3 to 6, inclusive, are overruled. We think, as determined in the first assignment, that the agreement between appellee and Newberry was legally sufficient to give appellee the right to the particular fund in the hands of Davis & Hamm. If the agreement so made between appellee and Newberry had been allowed to be carried out as intended by them, and not interrupted by appellants, the effect of this intention and purpose would have given to appellee the power to collect. This would constitute a sufficient transfer of interest to maintain a recovery. See Rollson v. Hope, 18 Tex. 446; Crews v. Harlan, 99 Tex. 93, 87 S. W. 656. Equity looks upon that as done which ought to have been done. This agreement would be valid, though wholly verbal, or if part verbal and part written. 3 Pomeroy, Eq. Juris. § 1237. The evidence was sufficient to warrant the finding returned by the jury, and the court did not err in submitting the issue as submitted to the jury. The transaction between plaintiff and Newberry was not a preference in violation of the bankruptcy act (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 544 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3418]), nor invalid for want of further record. Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; Hall v. Keating, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 526, 77 S. W. 1034; Mercer's Trustee v. Mercer (Ky.) 74 S. W. 285; Kaufman v. Treadway, 195 U. S. 271, 25 Sup. Ct. 33, 49 L. Ed. 190; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 25 Sup. Ct. 306, 49 L. Ed. 577; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 25 Sup. Ct. 567, 49 L. Ed. 956.

We do not think that the seventh and eighth assignments could be sustained, and they are overruled.

The garnishment by Trout, even if it had been reserved to the trustee in bankruptcy instead of being dismissed, could not avail against the prior rights of the plaintiff; and the ninth assignment is overruled. Trout dismissed his garnishment. Both Trout and the trustee had notice of the appellee's claim to the particular proceeds. Grocer Co. v. Jackson, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 353, 45 S. W. 615; Smith v. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 40 S. W. 1038; Smith v. Railway (Tex. Civ. App.) 39 S. W. 969.

Finding no reversible error in the case, we are of the opinion that the same should be affirmed.

HOUSTON & T. C. R. CO. v. JOHNSON.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 24, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 15, 1909.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 293*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—INSTRUCTIONS—NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries to an employé while erecting a coal derrick, there being evidence that defendant's foreman in moving a brace suddenly applied the power used in moving it, thereby causing the brace to be carried up, and plaintiff with it, about 20 feet, that the foreman could have released the power, but did not until plaintiff fell to the ground, and the brace turned over and injured him, an instruction is not erroneous which authorizes the jury to find for plaintiff if they believe that such conduct of the foreman constituted negligence, unless under other instructions they should find for defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1155, 1156; Dec. Dig. § 293.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 281*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries to an employé while erecting a coal derrick, caused while attempting to raise and put in position a brace, the evidence held sufficient to justify a finding that plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence in adjusting the rope with which the brace was raised.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 992; Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 296*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—INSTRUCTIONS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Plaintiff, while assisting in the erection of a coal derrick, in attempting to remove a brace connected therewith, was carried up into the air about 20 feet and fell and was injured. Held, that an instruction that if the jury believe that plaintiff was guilty of negligence in continuing to hold onto the brace when the same was started upward until he was carried into the air, and caused to fall, and that such negligence, if any, proximately contributed to his injury, they will find for the defendant, submitted the issue of contributory negligence as favorably as defendant was entitled to have it submitted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 1192; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 245*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

If an employé, while engaged in erecting a coal derrick, attaches a rope to a brace in order to move the same, and does so under the orders of defendant's foreman, he is justified in obeying the orders of the foreman as to the place at which he should tie the rope, unless he knew that it was dangerous to tie it at that place, and his obedience would not constitute contributory negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 781; Dec. Dig. § 245.*]

5. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 291*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—ACTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS—NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries to an employé while erecting a coal derrick, allegations in the complaint that defendant's foreman, in moving a brace connected with such derrick, applied the power with such suddenness as to lift the brace with a jerk, causing it to overturn and the part upon which plaintiff was at work to go upward, and that the foreman, after he found that the brace would go upward and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff, failed to shut off the power so as to prevent the same, justifies an instruction allowing a recovery if, in the exercise of ordinary care for plaintiff's safety, defendant's foreman should have discovered that the brace would go upward and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 1136; Dec. Dig. § 291.*]

6. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 291*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—INSTRUCTIONS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—BURDEN OF PROOF—"ESTABLISH."

In an action by an employé for injuries, an instruction that: "The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show by preponderance of the evidence, by which is meant the greater weight and degree of credible testimony, the facts which will entitle him to recover. A like burden is on defendant to establish its plea of contributory negligence of plaintiff—is not erroneous; the word “establish” being used therein as synonymous with proof, which would make the burden of proving contributory negligence no greater than that of proving negligence.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 1144; Dec. Dig. § 291.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 3, pp. 2469-2473.]

7. TRIAL (§ 260*)—INSTRUCTIONS—REPETITION.

It is not error to refuse to give an instruction which is contained in the court's main charge.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 851; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

8. TRIAL (§ 194*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE.

Plaintiff, while helping to erect a coal derrick, fastened a rope to a brace connected with such derrick for the purpose of moving the same, and in moving it by power, applied by defendant's foreman, the brace turned over and injured plaintiff. Held, that it was not error to refuse to give instructions to find in favor of defendant if plaintiff's injuries were caused by the rope being tied at an improper place by plaintiff; such instructions being on the weight of the evidence as authorizing the jury to find for defendant if plaintiff tied the rope, regardless of whether or not the act was negligence or whether or not it was the proximate cause of the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 439-466; Dec. Dig. § 194; * Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 356-360.]

9. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 267*) — ACTIONS FOR INJURIES—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action against a railroad company for injuries to an employé, evidence showing that plaintiff had sustained an injury while employed by another railroad company, had brought suit for damages, and had settled the same, having been introduced by defendant, evidence as to the amount for which he settled such claim was irrelevant, immaterial, and argumentative.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 909; Dec. Dig. § 267.*]

10. EVIDENCE (§ 471*)—OPINION EVIDENCE—BODILY CONDITION—CONCLUSION OF WITNESS.

In an action by an employé for injuries, evidence by plaintiff's wife as to a difficulty which he had in passing urine was not inadmissible as being the opinion of a witness who did not testify as an expert, as she was asked no technical question, but was asked as to what she knew and saw.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2149, 2150; Dec. Dig. § 471; * Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 833-836.]

11. EVIDENCE (§ 553*)—OPINION EVIDENCE—EXAMINATION OF EXPERT—HYPOTHETICAL QUESTIONS.

In an action by an employé for injuries, defendant proved by a physician that he had examined plaintiff after a prior injury, while he was at work for another employer, and defendant then asked: “If those injuries for which you examined him at that time, and if the symptoms you had found, had been real or true symptoms, what would be your opinion as to whether or not they would still be existing at this time?” Held, that the question was objectionable as being argumentative, in that it contained an inference that plaintiff's symptoms were not real or true, which was a matter for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2373; Dec. Dig. § 553.*]

12. WITNESSES (§ 240*)—LEADING QUESTIONS.

Plaintiff, an employé, was injured, while helping to erect a coal derrick, by the overbalancing of a brace that was being moved under the supervision of defendant's foreman. In an action for the injuries, defendant's foreman, after explaining how the accident occurred, was asked by plaintiff if there was any way for him to prevent plaintiff from getting hurt after the brace was overbalanced. Held, that the question was leading.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 838, 839, 844; Dec. Dig. § 240.*]

13. EVIDENCE (§ 471*)—CONCLUSIONS OF WITNESSES.

The question was also objectionable as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2149, 2150; Dec. Dig. § 471; * Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 833-836.]

Appeal from District Court, Grayson County; B. L. Jones, Judge.

Action by John Johnson against the Houston & Texas Central Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Baker, Botts, Parker & Garwood and Head, Dillard, Smith & Head, for appellant. C. B. Randell and J. H. Wood, for appellee.

BOOKHOUT, J. On October 21, 1906, appellee was in the employ of appellant, working under Foreman C. H. Steele, and engaged, with other employes, in erecting a contrivance to be used for loading locomotives with coal, known as a “coal derrick,” or “dinky,” when he sustained personal injuries, to recover damages for which this suit was instituted. A trial before a jury, on April 18, 1908, resulted in a verdict and judgment in favor of appellee for $7,000, to reverse which this appeal is prosecuted.

The first assignment of error reads: “The verdict of the jury is contrary to the undisputed evidence in finding that defendant's foreman, C. H. Steele, after he applied the air in the first instance, discovered, or in the exercise of ordinary care for plaintiff's safety should have discovered, that said arm or brace would go upward and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff, and that said Steele, after he had thus seen the probable result of the application of the air, failed and refused to shut same off, and that said Steele, after he had made such discovery, could have shut off the air in time to have prevented the injury to plaintiff.” The proposition presented is that the evidence was not sufficient to authorize or sustain a finding that Steele could have shut off the air in time to have prevented the injury to plaintiff after he discovered that the arm or brace would overbalance and probably cause the injury.

The charge of the court complained of is as follows: “Or if you believe from the evidence that the said foreman applied said air at said time with such suddenness as to lift said arm or brace suddenly and with a jerk; and if you further believe from the evidence that the said Steele, when said air was so applied, if you have found said air was so applied, discovered, or in the exercise of ordinary care for plaintiff's safety should have discovered, that said arm or brace would go upward and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff; and if you further believe from the evidence that said Steele, after he had thus seen the probable result of the application of said air, if you should find that he did so see same, failed and refused to shut off said air; and if you further believe from the evidence that, after the said Steele had made said discovery, if you find he did make same, he could have shut off said air; and if you further believe from the evidence that the shutting off of said air at said time would have prevented the injury to plaintiff; and if you further believe from the evidence that in his failure to shut off said air at said time, if you find he did so fail, the said Steele was guilty of negligence that proximately contributed to plaintiff's injury, if any—then in either of these events you will find for the plaintiff and assess his damages as hereinbefore instructed, unless you should find for defendant under other instructions given you." The court in the former part of this paragraph instructed the jury to the effect that if they should find and believe from the evidence that Foreman Steele applied the air with such suddenness as to lift said arm or brace suddenly and with a jerk, and the same was caused thereby to overturn and to go upward and injure plaintiff, and his acts in so doing constituted negligence to find for plaintiff.

The allegations of negligence set out in the petition, and upon which a recovery was asked, are as follows: That on said date he was a common laborer, and under the direction of a foreman then and there superintending and directing the work in which plaintiff was engaged. That on said date plaintiff was engaged in the due performance of his duties, acting with proper care and caution, in working on an apparatus known as a "coal derrick," or "dinky," a contrivance used for the purpose of hoisting coal onto locomotives and tenders. That the arm and brace of said coal derrick or dinky was being put in place by power applied by the use of air and steam on a similar coal derrick or dinky situated by and near the one upon which plaintiff was at work. Plaintiff was undertaking to adjust the bottom of the brace of said coal derrick into the socket on the upright part of said derrick, and in order to do so it became necessary to raise said arm and brace. That defendant's foreman was then and there situated upon the other derrick or dinky through and by which the power, consisting of air or steam, was being applied for the purpose of raising said arm and brace.

That said foreman applied the air and steam with such suddenness as to lift said arm and brace suddenly and with a jerk, thereby causing the same to overturn, and the part upon which plaintiff was at work to go upward. That defendant's said foreman then and there, after he found that said arm and brace would go forward and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff, failed and refused to shut off the air or steam, so as to prevent the same, but kept the air or steam applied. That he caused the rope, or cable, to be fastened on the arm of said derrick or dinky for the purpose of raising the same, at a place that, when said air or steam was applied, it would cause said arm to overbalance and overturn, and caused the brace where plaintiff was at work to go upward. That defendant's said foreman then and there in charge of and operating said derrick and dinky, by the application of air or steam, applied said air and steam so suddenly and with such force and with such irregularity as to overturn said arm and said brace, and cause it to go upward, and strike the plaintiff and cause him to fall as aforesaid. That by reason of the fastening of said rope or cable at a point where it would cause said arm to overbalance, and by reason of applying the power for lifting the same with such irregularity and suddenness, and by reason of failing to shut off the power after said foreman was aware of the danger, said foreman was then and there guilty of gross negligence and carelessness, and said arm and brace was caused to overbalance and overturn, and the part thereof on which plaintiff was at work to go outward and upward with great force and violence, thereby striking and throwing, and causing plaintiff to fall with great force and violence, inflicting upon him serious, painful, and permanent injuries. There was evidence tending to support each and all of these allegations. There was evidence that Foreman Steele, who applied the air, could have shut it off by turning a valve, and could have done so before appellee was carried as high as he was. He was carried up about 20 feet. Steele did not release the air until appellee had fallen to the ground and was injured. His injuries resulted from the negligence of the foreman in applying the air suddenly and with a jerk and failing to shut off the air after he discovered that the arm or brace would overbalance and overturn. There was no error in giving the charge complained of. The court fully submitted the negative of these issues.

It is contended that the verdict of the jury is not supported by the evidence, in finding that plaintiff was not himself guilty of contributory negligence in tying and adjusting the rope used in raising said arm or brace, in the manner in which and at the place where he did tie or adjust same. It is insisted that the undisputed evidence showed that the rope was tied by plaintiff himself, to the bottom piece of a heavy, triangular shaped machine, for the purpose of raising it, and that it was negligence to so tie said rope which proximately contributed toward causing plaintiff's injury. The court on this issue instructed the jury as follows: "On the other hand, if you believe from the evidence that plaintiff was himself guilty of negligence in tying and adjusting the rope used in raising said arm or brace, and that such negligence, if any, proximately contributed to his injuries, you will find for defendant." The evidence was amply sufficient to justify the jury in finding that appellee was not guilty of contributory negligence in tying and adjusting the rope. There is evidence that he tied the rope under the foreman's directions and at the place directed by him. There is no evidence that appellee was aware of the danger of tying the rope at the place he did.

Again, it is insisted that appellee was guilty of contributory negligence in holding to said arm or brace when the same was carried upward until he was carried in the air and caused to fall. The court submitted this issue to the jury as follows: "Or if you believe from the evidence that plaintiff was guilty of negligence in continuing to hold to said arm or brace, when same was started upward, until he was carried into the air and was caused to fall, and that such negligence, if any, proximately contributed to his injuries, if any, you will find for defendant." This charge submitted this issue to the jury as favorably as appellant was entitled to under the law. It is doubtful whether, under the evidence, the court should have submitted the issue of contributory negligence. The plaintiff and two other witnesses testified that Foreman Steele directed appellee to tie the rope and where to tie it. Foreman Steele testified, on cross-examination, as follows: "I am working for the Houston & Texas Central now in the same capacity, hostler. I don't think I was foreman of this work at all. I was not directing those negroes. We were all working there together. I was there to see that they did the work. They were to do what I told them. I had the right to direct them in the performance of their duties. John suggested that we move that rope. I have told that before. I don't know whether John suggested moving the rope first or I did. I will say that we agreed to move it, and we agreed to the place where it should be tied." If appellee ties the rope under the orders of Foreman Steele, then, unless he knew that it was dangerous to tie it at the place he did, he was justified in obeying the orders of his foreman, and could not be charged with contributory negligence in tying the rope at such place. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Duvall, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 348, 35 S. W. 699; Railway v. Watkins, 88 Tex. 20, 29 S. W. 232; Jackson v. Railway, 90 Tex. 372, 38 S. W. 745.

118 S.W.—73

The appellant assigns as error the clause of the court's charge reading as follows: "Or, in the exercise of ordinary care for plaintiff's safety, should have discovered that said arm or brace would go upward and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff." It is insisted that there is no allegation in plaintiff's pleading of failure on the part of Steele to exercise ordinary care to discover that the brace or arm would go up and overbalance and probably injure plaintiff; but, the sole allegation on this point being of negligence on the part of Steele, in failing to shut off the air after he actually discovered the danger, it was error for the court to give that part of paragraph 5 of the general charge set out in the assignment. We do not concur in this contention. The petition set out the facts, and the charge was fully authorized by the allegations therein.

Error is assigned to that part of paragraph 9 of the main charge as follows: "A like burden (burden of proof) is on defendant to establish its plea of contributory negligence of plaintiff." The entire paragraph is as follows: "The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show by a preponderance of the evidence, by which is meant the greater weight and degree of credible testimony, the facts which will entitle him to recover. A like burden is on defendant to establish its plea of contributory negligence of plaintiff. You are the exclusive judges of the facts proven, of the credibility of the witnesses, and of the weight to be given the testimony; but the law you will receive from the court and be governed thereby." Construing the entire paragraph as a whole, we think it apparent that the word "establish" as used therein, was used in the sense of the word proof. The jury must have so understood it and understood the charge as instructing them that a like burden of proof was on defendant to prove its plea of contributory negligence.

The court did not err in refusing appellant's requested charge reading as follows: "Unless you believe, from a preponderance of the evidence, that Foreman C. H. Steele failed to exercise that degree of care that a man of ordinary prudence would have used under the circumstances which then surrounded him, either in the way he applied the air in the first instance, or in the way he afterwards controlled or handled it, and that such failure on his part was the cause of the injuries to plaintiff, you will find in favor of the defendant, and in this connection you are instructed that, in deciding as to whether or not said Steele did exercise such ordinary care, you must view the facts as they would have appeared to a man of ordinary prudence under the circumstances which surrounded him at the time Steele was called upon to act, and not as they may have appeared to one looking back after the accident had happened." This charge was fairly contained in the court's main charge.

Nor was there error in refusing appellant's requested charge No. 4, as follows: "You are instructed that, in deciding as to whether or not C. H. Steele exercised, or failed to exercise, ordinary care in the matters submitted to you in other paragraphs of the charge, you must view the facts as they would have appeared to a man of ordinary prudence, under the circumstances that surrounded him at the time said Steele was called upon to act, and not as they may have appeared to one looking back after the accident had happened." The charge of the court clearly refers to the acts of negligence of Steele at the time the injuries were inflicted, and the special charge was not called for by the facts.

Complaint is made of the court's refusal to give appellant's requested charges 6 and 7, as follows: "(6) If you believe from the evidence that C. H. Steele exercised ordinary care, both in the way he applied the air in the first instance, and in the way he afterwards controlled or handled it, and that plaintiff's injuries were caused by the rope being tied at an improper place, you will find in favor of the defendant. (7) If you believe from the evidence that plaintiff's injuries were caused by the rope being tied at an improper place upon the hoist, and that said rope was so tied at said place by plaintiff himself, you will find in favor of the defendant." There was no error in refusing these charges. The question of negligence on the part of plaintiff in tying the rope at the place where it was tied was fully submitted in the court's charge. Again, said special charges are not correct propositions of law, and are upon the weight of evidence, in this: They tell the jury to find for defendant if plaintiff tied the rope, regardless of whether or not the act was negligence, or whether it was the proximate cause of the injury.

Error is assigned to the action of the court in refusing to allow defendant to prove the amount received by plaintiff from the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company in settlement of his former injuries sustained by him while working for that company. The proposition presented is that, one of the most important issues in this case being whether or not plaintiff was attempting to perpetrate a fraud by making his injuries appear more serious than they really were, defendant should have been allowed to prove, not only that plaintiff had claimed to receive similar injuries while at work for another railroad for which he had procured a settlement by compromise, but should also have been allowed to go further and show that the amount which he received in such settlement was a large sum, to wit, $2,500. H. V. Rankin, a witness for defendant, testified that in the year 1902 he was employed as claim agent by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company of Texas, and as such claim agent had investigated the claim of plaintiff against that road for the injury claimed to have been received while in its employ, and had attended to the settlement of said claim with plaintiff. He was then asked the following question: "What was the amount at which said claim was settled?" This question and answer were objected to as irrelevant, immaterial, hearsay, and argumentative. The objections were sustained, and the witness not permitted to answer. Defendant then sought to prove by plaintiff himself that his claim against the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company was settled for $2,500. The same objections and ruling were made to this testimony. There was no error in this ruling. The testimony was irrelevant, immaterial, and argumentative. The witness was permitted to prove that plaintiff had sustained a former injury, had brought suit for damages by reason of same, and had settled it.

Error is assigned to the admission in evidence of the testimony of the witness Rosa Johnson. It is contended that her testimony was only the opinion and conclusion of a nonexpert witness. Rosa Johnson was the wife of plaintiff, and, while testifying as a witness in his behalf, was asked the following questions: "After he was hurt, do you know anything about any trouble he had in reference to passing water? A. Yes, sir; he had trouble of passing water. Q. Now just state to the jury what you know—what you saw—in reference to passing water, while he was there in bed. A. Well, on the first his urine—he passed some blood, and his water then kind of passed leaking like. Q. Explain what you mean by leaking? A. Well, he couldn't—his kidneys, or something, was so weak he couldn't hold water on the first at all. I had to keep clothes under him, same as I would a baby." The objection was overruled, and defendant took its bill of exception. There was no error in this ruling. The witness did not testify as an expert. She was not asked any technical question. She was asked as to what she knew and saw, and her testimony stated a fact and was properly admitted. While defendant's witness Dr. E. J. Neathery was on the witness stand in their behalf, and after he had testified that he had examined plaintiff at the time of his former injury by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company of Texas, and had testified to his opinion as to the character, the nature, and extent of plaintiff's injuries and symptoms at that time, as shown by statement of facts, defendant asked him this question: "Now, Doctor, if those injuries for which you examined him at that time, and if the symptoms that you had found had been real symptoms, true symptoms, what would be your opinion as to whether or not they would still be existing at this time?" This question was objected to as irrelevant and immaterial and not a proper hypothetical question, and argumentative, that the question was too indefinite, which objections were by the court sustained. If permitted, the witness would have answered that in his opinion, if the symptoms of plaintiff's injury at the time of his examination, as to which he had testified, had been true symptoms, the injuries would be existing to a considerable extent at this time. The court's action in this respect is assigned as error. There was no error in this action of the court. Appellant proved by Dr. Neathery the result of his examination of plaintiff as to his former injuries. He was permitted to testify that he thought that the plaintiff would improve and would ultimately recover from such injuries. The question inferred that appellee did not have real or true symptoms, which was a matter for the jury. It sought to base an inference upon an inference and was argumentative.

While the defendant's witness C. H. Steele was on the witness stand, and after he had explained how the accident had occurred, said Steele was asked the following question, in behalf of defendant: "Was there any way for you to prevent Johnson getting hurt, after it was overbalanced that way?" To which question and answer thereto plaintiff's counsel objected, on the ground that the same was an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and leading, which objection was by the court sustained, and the witness was not permitted to answer, to which action of the court defendant then and there in open court excepted. The witness, if permitted to answer the question, would have answered that he could have done nothing to have prevented Johnson's getting hurt, after the derrick was overbalanced in the way mentioned. There was no error in this ruling. The question was leading and called for a conclusion and opinion. The witness had testified fully as to how the injury occurred.

The twenty-second assignment, which complains of the verdict as excessive, is overruled. The evidence was amply sufficient to sustain a verdict for $7,000.

Finding no error in the record, the judgment is affirmed.

ST. LOUIS, S. F. & T. RY. CO. et al. v. ADAMS.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 14, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 12, 1909.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 244*)—ADMISSIONS—BY CARRIER'S AGENTS.

In an action against a carrier for damages from negligently putting cattle in quarantine pens so that they could not be forwarded to their destination, evidence as to what the carrier's agent at the place told plaintiff when the cattle were there in regard to some of them being placed in the pens was admissible, the declarations being within the scope of the agent's apparent authority and in the line of his duty, and at the time and place when and where the negligent act occurred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 925; Dec. Dig. § 244.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 244*)—ADMISSIONS—BY CARRIER'S AGENTS.

In an action against a carrier for damages from negligently putting cattle in quarantine pens so that they could not be forwarded to their destination, evidence as to declarations of a person whose duty was to load and unload cattle for the carrier at the place in question as to his unloading a car of plaintiff's cattle in the quarantine pens was improperly admitted, where the declarations were made long after the unloading occurred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 933; Dec. Dig. § 244.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1051*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF IMPROPER EVIDENCE.

The act of negligence to which declarations testified to related having been indisputably shown by other evidence free from objection, the admission of the declarations was not prejudicial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4161; Dec. Dig. § 1051.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 229*)—CARRIAGE OF STOCK—INJURIES IN TRANSIT—ACTIONS—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

Where a carrier negligently placed cattle in quarantine pens, so that they had to be sold under the requirements of the quarantine authorities, and could not be forwarded to their destination, the rule as to damages where a carrier negligently fails to transport property to its destination applied, and the measure of damages was the value of the cattle less the freight, if unpaid, at the time and place where they should have been delivered, and not at the place where the enforced sale occurred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 963, 964; Dec. Dig. § 229.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 759*)—BRIEFS—COPYING ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR.

Breaking up an assignment of error in the brief by copying its several subdivisions separately, and presenting propositions under each of them, is not a compliance with the rules of the Court of Civil Appeals.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3094; Dec. Dig. § 759.*]

6. DEPOSITIONS (§ 107*)—OBJECTIONS—TIME FOR TAKING—MANNER AND FORM OF TAKING.

Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2289, providing that, if a deposition shall have been filed at least one entire day before trial, no objection to the form or manner of taking shall be heard unless made in writing, on notice given before the trial commences, objections as to the manner and form of taking a deposition made when it was offered in evidence were properly overruled.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Depositions, Cent. Dig. §§ 315, 316; Dec. Dig. § 107; * Trial, Cent. Dig. § 189.]

Appeal from Hardeman County Court; J. C. Marshall, Judge.

Action by J. M. Adams against the St. Louis, San Francisco & Texas Railway Company and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

O. H. Yoakum and Decker & Clarke, for appellants. M. M. Hankins and D. E. Magee, for appellee.

NEILL, J. Appellee brought this suit against the St. Louis, San Francisco & Texas Railway Company and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company to recover $743.30 damages to a shipment of 300 head of calves delivered to defendants at Quanah, Tex., on the 20th of October, 1907, to be transported thence over their road to St. Louis, Mo., and there delivered to their connecting carriers, to be carried from there and delivered to plaintiff at Coshocton, Ohio. The negligence charged against defendants was delay and rough handling between Quanah and St. Louis, by reason of which the animals' value was diminished $1 per head, and that one car containing 62 head of the calves was unloaded en route at Sapulpa by defendants, and negligently placed in their quarantine pens at their yards at that station, in consequence of which they could not lawfully be carried to their destination, and were sold by defendants at St. Louis for $12.50 per head, and that, had it not been for such negligence, they would have been carried to Coshocton, where they would have brought $20, whereby plaintiff lost $7.15 per head on said car load of calves. The defendants answered by a general denial, and pleaded specially certain stipulations in the contract of affreightment in limitation of their common-law liability as common carriers. The trial of the case resulted in a verdict and judgment against the defendants for the damages sued for.

Conclusions of Fact.

The evidence was reasonably sufficient to warrant the jury in finding that the defendants were guilty of delay and of negligent handling of the calves in transportation between Quanah and St. Louis, and that, by reason of such negligence, the market value of those which arrived at Coshocton, Ohio, was $1 less per head in their damaged condition than it would have been had it not been for such negligent delay and rough handling.

The evidence shows beyond question that one car load of 62 head of the calves was negligently placed by the defendants in their quarantine pens at Sapulpa, by reason whereof they could not be delivered to plaintiff at Coshocton, but were sold by defendants at St. Louis and brought $7.50 less per head than they would have sold for at their destination had they been transported there with the other part of the shipment, and of the proceeds of sale $681.22 were paid to plaintiff.

Conclusions of Law.

1. The testimony of plaintiff as to what defendants' agent at Sapulpa said to him when the cattle were there in regard to a car load of them being placed in the quarantine pens is not obnoxious to the objections urged by the first assignment of error, because the declarations of the agent were in respect to a matter within the scope of his apparent authority, were made in the line of his duty, and at the time and place the negligent act complained of occurred. However, it is wholly immaterial whether such declarations were admissible or not, since the undisputed evidence shows that a car load of the cattle were placed in the quarantine pens by defendants' employees at Sapulpa, and that plaintiff was damaged in consequence of such act of negligence as alleged in his petition.

2. It was undoubtedly error for the court to admit in evidence the testimony of the witnesses Speer and Harper, complained of in the second and third assignments of error, as to what the man charged with the duty of loading and unloading cattle for defendants at Sapulpa told them about unloading a car of plaintiff's cattle at that station in the quarantine pens, because such declarations were made to each of the witnesses long after the negligent act spoken of by declarant occurred. Wagoner v. Snody, 98 Tex. 512, 85 S. W. 1134. But such errors could not possibly have injuriously affected the defendants, because the act of negligence to which the declarations testified to relates was indisputably shown by other evidence free from objection.

3. It is urged by the fourth assignment of error that the court erred in admitting evidence as to the market value of the car load of calves at East St. Louis which had been placed in the quarantine pens and were sold at that place by the order of defendants; the objections being that the measure of damages for conversion is the market value of the property at the time and place of conversion. If such rule was applicable in a case like this, it could not be said that such evidence was inadmissible; for, if defendants can be regarded under the facts in this case as having converted plaintiff's property, it cannot be said that the conversion actually occurred until the calves were offered for sale by defendants in East St. Louis. But in this case the sale of the cattle was the natural sequence of defendant's negligence in placing the calves in the quarantine pens at Sapulpa. When this occurred, the cattle could not be legally carried to Coshocton, but were required by the quarantine authorities to be sold by defendants at East St. Louis. Therefore the rule that the measure of damages where a common carrier negligently fails to transport the property to its destination is the value of the property, less the freight, if unpaid, at the time and place it should have been delivered, is the one which applies in this case. As the plaintiff was paid $681.22 of the proceeds of the sale, he was entitled to recover the difference between that amount and the market value at Coshocton at the time the cattle should have arrived there, had it not been for defendants' negligence, which difference was $443.30. Really it is a matter of no moment, so far as plaintiff is concerned, what the market value of the calves was in East St. Louis when sold; for plaintiff was entitled to recover of defendants their market value at Coshocton at the time they should have arrived there but for their negligence.

4. The fifth assignment of error, as it appears in the record, is not copied in appellants' brief; but is broken up and its several subdivisions copied separately, and propositions presented under each of them. This is hardly in compliance with the rules of this court; but, as it does not appear from the statement under the several propositions that the objections to the deposition, they being as to the manner and form of taking, were made as required by article 2289, Rev. St. 1895, it appearing from the bill of exceptions that the objections were made when the deposition was offered in evidence, there was no error in the court's overruling them. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. v. Barrett (Tex. Civ. App.) 101 S. W. 1025.

5. The fourteenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth assignments, which complain of the court's charge, are overruled, because the charge correctly presents the law of the case as made by the pleadings and evidence.

There is no error in the judgment, and it is affirmed.

ALLEN v. HERRICK HARDWARE CO.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 14, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 12, 1909.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 134*)—COLLATERAL AGREEMENTS—AS EQUITABLE DEFENSE.

In an action on a note by the payee against the maker, an answer alleging a contemporaneous verbal agreement that there should be an accounting between the parties at a later date, and, if the note was in excess of the maker's indebtedness, he should have credit, and that the note was in excess of what the maker owed, stated an equitable defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. § 326; Dec. Dig. § 134.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 441*)—PAROL EVIDENCE.—VARYING TERMS OF WRITTEN CONTRACT.

Evidence of the contemporaneous agreement would not vary the terms of the contract embodied in the note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2044; Dec. Dig. § 441.*]

3. EVIDENCE (§ 442*)—PAROL EVIDENCE.—VARYING TERMS OF WRITTEN CONTRACT—APPLICATION OF RULE.

The rule that, when parties reduce their contracts to writing, the writing is to be taken as embodying all previous negotiations and understandings about its terms, and cannot be varied by parol, does not apply where the instrument was not intended to be a complete and final settlement of the whole transaction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 1874; Dec. Dig. § 442.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 441*)—ACTIONS—EQUITABLE RELIEF.

In an action by the payee against the maker of a note, if the strict letter of the law would preclude defendant from offering proof entitling him to credits on the note by reason of a contemporaneous oral agreement, because the note was evidence of a full settlement, equity would allow him to show that the note was not intended as a full settlement between the parties, but that it was agreed that there should be a further settlement, in which the maker should have the benefit of credits claimed by him. •

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2044; Dec. Dig. § 441.*]

5. EVIDENCE (§ 417*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—ENTIRE CONTRACT NOT IN WRITING.

Where an entire contract was not placed in writing, the whole contract could be proved by parol testimony.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 1882; Dec. Dig. § 417.*]

Error from District Court, Harris County; W. P. Hamblen, Judge.

Action by the Herrick Hardware Company against A. C. Allen. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Masterson, Atkinson & Masterson, for plaintiff in error. Baker, Botts, Parker & Garwood, for defendant in error.

FLY, J. This is a suit on a promissory note for $3,640.20, together with interest and attorney's fees, instituted by defendant in error against plaintiff in error, who answered that the note was given under a verbal agreement that there should be an accounting between the maker and payee on a later date, and if the note did not represent the true balance between them, or if the note was in excess of the indebtedness of the maker, the latter should have credit for the excess; that the amount was in excess of what the maker owed in the sum of $1,500. Plaintiff in error also pleaded in offset an account for $845 for guns, pistols, wagons, and "sundry articles," and asked that the $1,500 excess and $845 account be deducted from the amount of the note. Plaintiff in error also pleaded that he was not liable for $400 claimed in the suit.

It was alleged in the answer that the note was given for implements, harness, cutlery, mules, and other things, and further alleged: "That on the day said note was given J. W. Orand, who, as plaintiff is informed and believed, if not the largest, is one of the largest, owners of the said Herrick Hardware Company, came to Houston with a purported statement of this defendant's account with said Herrick Hardware Company for business done by him with them at Whitney, Morgan, and Blum, Tex., said account being very long, and consisting of many items the correctness of which could only have been ascertained by a long and thorough audit of same, by comparison with orders given by this defendant to said hardware company. That all the said machinery, implements, and other articles bought by this defendant from said hardware company were bought for, and used upon, the ranch and farm of said defendant and his mother, situated in Bosque county, Tex., and at said ranch and farm were all the papers, account slips, and all orders were filed, and without which it was impossible for this defendant to know, with any degree of certainty, the correctness or incorrectness of the account as presented. That when said purported account was presented to this defendant with the request that he give to the Herrick Hardware Company a note for the amount of said account, this defendant stated to said Orand, who has charge of the Morgan house of said hardware company, that this defendant had no means of testing the accuracy of the account, because all papers pertaining to the same were at his farm and ranch in Bosque county, Tex., and further made known to said Orand that there were certain credits due this defendant for merchandise bought by the Herrick Hardware Company of this defendant, consisting of certain guns, pistols, rifles, and other articles, for which there appeared to be no credit on the account, but said Orand insisted that these matters could all be adjusted hereafter, that personally he knew nothing about these matters, as they occurred with the Whitney house, and that the Herrick Hardware Company and this defendant had done business together for a great many years, and that said hardware company was in very straightened circumstances, and had been able to collect but a very small percent of what was owing it, and that it was in a position where its doors could be closed by its creditors unless it get immediate help, and that, as defendant's was one of the largest, if not the largest, account they had out, if they could get a note for the amount, it would put it in a position to do something to protect itself from harsh action by creditors, said Orand stating that, if the defendant would give him said note, it would probably aid said hardware company very materially in being able to resist the pressure that was being brought to bear on it by persons to whom it was indebted, and that it was not a question of months or weeks, but a question of days in which it must have help or suffer the consequences, and asked defendant to sign said note, and take up the matter of adjustment of the difference between them, and promised in behalf of said company they would do so later on, saying that as those transactions wherein this defendant was entitled to credits were with the Whitney house, he knew it would do what was right in the matter. That it was on these representations of the strained financial condition of plaintiff, and its inability to meet the demands of its creditors and of the promise by plaintiff, as aforesaid, to take up and adjust any difference between plaintiff and defendant, that this defendant executed the note sued upon, defendant believing that plaintiff might not be able to withstand the pressure brought to bear upon it, unless it being placed in an embarrassing position that defendant executed said note without any knowledge of its correctness as to amount. Defendant avers that by reason of the facts alleged said note represents more than this defendant owes said hardware company, and that, while said note was given and intended to settle the account of this defendant, it was only intended to pay what defendant actually owed said Herrick Hardware Company, and that, as to any balance over and above what defendant owed it, defendant would be protected by said Herrick Hardware Company. In other words, said note, to the extent it exceeds the amount defendant owed plaintiff, as to such excess, as defendant is informed and believes, is, to wit, $1,500 accommodation paper. Thereafter, to wit, November 12, 1907, W. T. Herrick, of Whitney, Tex., one of the proprietors of said Herrick Hardware Company, came to Houston and brought with him the note herein sued on, and stated to defendant that, owing to the bank panic then existing, and owing to the fact that they would have to negotiate the note elsewhere than at Whitney, unless the note was secured, the Herrick Hardware Company could not handle the same and get the benefit of it. Said Herrick stated to defendant that the Herrick Hardware Company was right at the point where it could go no further without financial assistance; that it was being crowded very much by its creditors, and particularly by creditors to whom it owed on money loaned. Said Herrick represented to this defendant that it was now not a question of days, but only perhaps one day, before the creditors would take harsh measures, unless they could raise money, that it had a note for $10,000 due the Provident National Bank in Waco, and that said bank was crowding said hardware company, and had indicated to said Herrick that it would only wait until the next day or would take action against plaintiffs. Defendant, having given the note to said plaintiff was under no obligation whatever to secure the same in any way, but, believing the representations made by said Herrick, and believing that the Herrick Hardware Company was in danger of being pressed to such an extremity as would operate to close its doors for business, said defendant suggested to said Herrick to ring up the Provident National Bank in Waco and see if he could not get said bank to extend the time a day or two longer, in order that this defendant might consider what security he could get up or offer to said Herrick to assist him in putting the note in such shape that he could handle same and get relief by means of it. Said Herrick thereupon told this defendant he would go to the telephone office and ring up the Provident National Bank of Waco and see if he could get said bank to wait for a day. About two hours after said Herrick returned to the office of this defendant, and made known to him that he had gotten in communication over phone with the Provident National Bank of Waco; and, while they were very impatient and very stern with him, it had consented to wait another day, but this was final, and no further or other delays would be tolerated or considered. Thereupon, and being influenced thereby, and with the purpose to help plaintiff, and at great inconvenience to defendant himself, this defendant executed the deed of trust referred to in plaintiff's petition in order to enable plaintiff to handle said note and assist said Herrick Hardware Company and prevent its doors being closed, plaintiff having its attention called by defendant to the fact that defendant had had no opportunity to examine said account or have the same audited, by reason of the fact that the account was handed to him in Houston, was very lengthy, and represented many business transactions, while all the papers, vouchers, data, etc., necessary to audit said account were at defendant's farm and ranch in Bosque county; that whatever difference there might be in defendant's favor would be adjusted by said hardware company; it being the understanding and the intention of both plaintiff and this defendant that this note was not binding or operative any further than as to the amount defendant actually and honestly owed said hardware company upon and after checking of the account and ascertaining the true amount." The answer set up a valid equitable defense to the claim, and the court erred in sustaining a general demurrer thereto.

While the cross-action of plaintiff in error may have been founded on an unliquidated demand, which could not have been pleaded as an offset to the promissory note, still there was in the matter herein copied an equitable defense to the demand of defendant in error, concerning which plaintiff in error should have been permitted to introduce evidence to sustain the allegations of a contemporaneous agreement that certain claims of the maker should be allowed in a settlement of the note. The evidence would not vary the terms of the contract embodied in the note. "A parol agreement, made at the time when a note was given, that a certain claim should be allowed as a credit, and be entered as such on the note, which was not done, is not liable to the objection that it was a contemporaneous understanding that would vary the terms of the written contract." Nalle v. Gates, 20 Tex. 315. It is the rule that, when parties reduce their contracts to writing, such writing is to be taken as embodying all previous negotiations and understandings about its terms, and they cannot be varied by parol; but the rule does not apply where it can be made to appear that the instrument was not intended to be a complete and final settlement of the whole transaction. It was held in a Pennsylvania case, and approved by the Court of Appeals of Texas in James v. King, 2 Willson, Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 544, as follows: "A verbal promise by one of the parties at the making of a written contract, if it was used to obtain the execution of the writing, may be given in evidence." Powelton Coal Co. v. McShain, 75 Pa. 238. In this case it was alleged that plaintiff in error was induced to execute the note by the promise that there should be an adjustment of the accounts between the parties, and credit allowed for what was due to plaintiff in error, and proof of those facts did not tend to vary the written contract, but rather to explain it, and place the parties on the plane upon which they contracted with each other. If it could be held that by the strict letter of the law plaintiff in error should not be allowed to offer proof entitling him to credits on the note, because the note was evidence of a full settlement, a court of equity would come to the relief of the maker of the note, and permit him to show that the note was not intended as a full settlement between the parties, but that it had been agreed that there should be a further settlement, in which the maker of the note should have the benefit of credits claimed by him. To hold otherwise would be to allow defendant in error to profit by an ironclad rule, and obtain from plaintiff in error something which is not justly due him. The note is still in the hands of the original payee; and, if it was executed under the circumstances alleged in the answer, proof of the indebtedness of the payee to the maker of the note should be allowed as a credit on the note. The note was not a final settlement between the parties, if they did not intend that it should be. The entire contract was not placed in writing, and under such circumstances the whole contract can be proved by parol testimony. Greenl. Ev. 284a. It follows that the general demurrer should not have been sustained to the answer, and that the continuance should have been granted in order to obtain evidence to sustain the allegations of the answer. It is probable that the questions raised as to the attorney's fees will not arise on another trial.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded.

ROBERTSON et al. v. HEFLEY.

(Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. April 21, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1051*)—REVIEW—HARMLESS ERROR—EVIDENCE.

Where it was admitted that a certain person was the common source of title, the admission in evidence of a deed to him was not error. [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4164; Dec. Dig. § 1031.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

2. TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE (§ 45*)—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

In trespass to try title, the exclusion of evidence that plaintiff's grantor attempted to get a third person to execute a deed of the land to him, which she refused, was not error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass to Try Title, Dec. Dig. § 45.*]

8. HOMESTEAD (§ 161*)—ABANDONMENT.

Where a husband and wife abandoned a homestead, whether before or after the conveyance thereof by the husband, and established a new homestead, the conveyance was valid without the wife joining therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Dec. Dig. § 161.*]

4. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 271*)—REMEDIES OF PARTIES—BURDEN OF PROOF.

Representatives of a grantor claiming that his deed to his wife was a simulated transaction not intended to be effective as a conveyance had the burden of so proving.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Cent. Dig. §§ 796-798, 821; Dec. Dig. § 271.*]

5. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 299*)—REMEDIES OF PARTIES—WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE.

Where a husband and wife lived together, the fact that he retained possession of land which he conveyed to her is of little force in determining whether the transaction was simulated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Cent. Dig. § 885; Dec. Dig. § 299.*]

6. DEEDS (§ 96*)—CONSIDERATION—RECITALS.

A recital in a deed as to the consideration is evidence, and should be deemed sufficient if it recites a fact sufficient to create either a good or a valid consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. § 260; Dec. Dig. § 96.*]

7. DEEDS (§ 17*)—CONSIDERATION—LOVE AND AFFECTION.

Love and affection is a sufficient consideration of a deed between husband and wife.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. § 29; Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

8. DEEDS (§ 15*)—CONSIDERATION—NECESSITY.

A consideration is not necessary to support a deed or conveyance that is fully executed and delivered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. § 23; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

9. DEEDS (§ 195*) — CONSIDERATION — EVIDENCE.

In determining the legal effect of an executed conveyance in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the law will imply a consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 584-586; Dec. Dig. § 195.*]

10. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 298*)—REMEDIES OF PARTIES—EVIDENCE.

Testimony of a grantor that he conveyed property to his wife to put it beyond the reach of a third person holding a claim against him is insufficient to show that as between the parties the transaction was simulated, or that the grantee should hold the legal title in trust for the vendor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Dec. Dig. § 298.*]

11. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 172*)—REMEDIES OF PARTIES.

When a debtor conveys property to defraud his creditors, the conveyance, though void-able as to the latter, is conclusive as between the parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Cent. Dig. §§ 523-529; Dec. Dig. § 172.*]

12. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (§ 216*)—REMEDIES OF CREDITORS.

One having a valid claim for unliquidated damages, as a right of action for slander, may be a creditor entitled to protection as against a fraudulent conveyance by the wrongdoer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, Cent. Dig. § 642; Dec. Dig. § 216.*]

Appeal from District Court, Milam County; J. C. Scott, Judge.

Action by J. D. Hefley against Mrs. Ida L. Robertson and others. From a judgment in favor of plaintiff, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Appellee, J. D. Hefley, instituted this suit in trespass to try title to recover the lands described in the plaintiff's petition against the defendants Mrs. Ida B. Robertson, Wilton Lee Robertson, Washington Prentiss Robertson, Charles David Robertson, Mrs. Desdemona Elizabeth Joslin, and Mrs. Georgia E. Robertson, all of whom answered by general denial and not guilty, except Mrs. Joslin, who did not answer, and against whom judgment final by default was entered. The court below instructed a verdict for plaintiff against the defendants, and upon which judgment was rendered in plaintiff's favor, and from which all of the defendants, except Mrs. Joslin, have perfected an appeal to this court.

The land in controversy was originally the community property of W. J. Robertson, now deceased, and his wife, Mrs. Malvina Robertson, and now Mrs. Hitt; she having married since the death of her first husband. Mrs. Joslin is the daughter of W. J. and Malvina Robertson, and Mrs. Ida Robertson and Mrs. Georgia Robertson are the daughters-in-law of W. J. and Malvina Robertson. Wilton Lee Robertson, Washington Robertson, and Charles Robertson are the children of the marriage of Ida Robertson and her deceased husband, a son of W. J. and Malvina Robertson. The husband of Mrs. Joslin and the husband of Mrs. Georgia Robertson, sons of W. J. and Malvina Robertson, are both dead. Appellants assert a claim to a part of the community interest of W. J. Robertson, deceased, to the land in controversy. Plaintiff contends that this interest was conveyed by Robertson to his wife, Malvina Robertson, and by her down to him. Upon this point the briefs of appellants contain this statement: "Plaintiffs claim title by mesne conveyances from W. J. Robertson, the ancestor of defendants, and defendants, claiming under the same source of title, contended that the conveyance by W. J. Robertson to his wife Malvina Robertson, through whom the plaintiff claims, was void, first, because the land was a part of the homestead, and dered, and it was never intended to change the status of the title to the land."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The entire evidence contained in the record is as follows:

"(1) The plaintiff offered in evidence the original warranty deed from W. T. Hefley to the plaintiff, J. D. Hefley, same bearing date January 25, 1907, and being for the land described in plaintiff's petition, said deed being duly acknowledged by the grantor and duly recorded in the deed records of Milam county, Tex., in volume 74, p. 396, the said deed reciting a cash consideration of $3,660 and four vendor's lien notes for $1,875 each, due one, two, three, and four years after date, with interest from date at 7 per cent. per annum, payable to the order of W. T. Hefley.

"(2) Plaintiff next offered in evidence an original warranty deed from Mrs. Malvina Hitt and her husband, W. N. Hitt, to W. T. Hefley for the land in controversy and described in plaintiff's petition, the same bearing date January 2, 1907, and duly acknowledged by both of the grantors in accordance with law, and duly recorded in the deed records of Milam county, Tex., in volume 73, pp. 562-565; the said deed reciting a cash consideration of $8,280, paid by W. T. Hefley.

"(3) Plaintiff next offered in evidence an original warranty deed from W. J. Robertson to M. E. Robertson to the land in controversy and described in the plaintiff's petition, the same bearing date of June 14, 1898, and being duly acknowledged for record and duly recorded in the deed records of Milam county, Tex., in volume 48, pp. 379-380, and the same reciting a consideration of $5 'and other valuable consideration' paid by the grantees.

"(4) The plaintiff next offered in evidence an original general warranty deed from T. C. Fowler and wife to W. J. Robertson to the land in controversy, bearing date March 18, 1885, and showing that it was filed in the office of the county clerk of Milam county, Tex., on the 7th day of August, 1885, and duly recorded in deed records of said county on the 19th day of August, 1885, in volume 14 on page 535 et seq.; the said deed reciting a cash consideration of $5,600.

"(5) The plaintiff next offered and read in evidence an original warranty deed from W. H. Fowler and wife to Mrs. Malvina Hitt to 2½ acres of land, being part of the land in controversy and described in plaintiff's petition, the said deed bearing date April 10, 1906, and duly acknowledged for record and duly recorded in volume 66, p. 346, of the deed records of Milam county, Tex.

"(6) The plaintiffs next offered and read in evidence an original general warranty deed from Mrs. Hattie Williams to M. M. Hitt and wife to 2½ acres of land, part of the land in controversy and described in plain-

Plaintiff next offered the testimony of the witness Mrs. Malvina Hitt, who, after being duly sworn on oath, testified as follows: 'My name is Mrs. Malvina Hitt, and I live in Cameron, Tex., at present. My husband's name is W. N. Hitt. I knew W. J. Robertson in his lifetime. He was my husband, and was commonly known as Bee Robertson. I remember the circumstances of Mr. Robertson buying the tract of land from T. C. Fowler and wife, described in the deed just read in evidence. He bought the land in 1885. I was married to W. J. Robertson February 22, 1869, and lived with him all his life as his wife up to his death, and the date of his death was May 11, 1900, having lived with him as his wife for a period of about 21 years continuously. I remember the circumstance of him buying the land from Fowler, and we moved on it and took possession of it after the purchase. After we bought the land, Mr. Robertson went down and took possession and made a crop on it, and I continued to live in Davilla for something over a year after that before I moved down with him on the place. No one ever disputed our right to the place or our possession of it from the time we bought it in 1885 until about the time of the institution of this suit. We lived upon the place and raised our family there, and made crops on it, and we claimed it and paid the taxes on it during the entire time until I sold it, and we lived there 12 or 13 years, and then Mr. Robertson bought a place known as the Hennington place, about three miles from this Fowler place, situated in a westwardly direction towards Davilla from our place. This Fowler tract of land is the same tract of land we sold to Mr. Hefley, and it is the same land involved in this suit, and we were in the exclusive possession of it all the time from the time of the purchase until that sale, and no one ever disputed our right or title to it, and, at the time of the sale to Mr. W. T. Hefley, we delivered possession of the same to him.' Cross-examined: 'The description of the land given in the deed is the land sold to Mr. Hefley, but I could not undertake to give the field notes. I was married to Bee Robertson in 1869, and lived with him continuously as his wife until his death, which occurred on May 11, 1900. At the time of Mr. Robertson's death, he was ailing for some time. He had been confined to his bed from the month of October preceding, and at times prior to the time he was taken to his bed he had suffered considerably. I think the trouble with him was a cancer. He did not have Bright's disease. For 19 months prior to his death he had been considerably under the weather as to his health. I think he had had catarrh of the head for about 10 years, but had gotten better of it, and it was not troubling him at the time of his death.

shortly after the purchase. At the time of his death, we were not living on the Fowler place. We had been away from the Fowler place about three years at the time of his death. Mr. Robertson had sustained an injury in a runaway in Davilla and gotten hurt, but had recovered from that, and I suppose it was about three months after that injury before he could turn his head, but after that he entirely recovered from that trouble. The place we bought and moved to from the Fowler place was known as the Hennington place, and consisted of 88 acres. I sold this place to Hennington after my husband's death, and my children that were then living joined with me in the deed. My husband continued to farm on the Fowler place after moving to the Hennington place, and we rented some of it out; that is, he himself sowed one small grain crop, and the balance of it he rented to tenants. Mr. Robertson and myself had three children. The oldest was a boy named Willis. The next was a boy named Charles. Both of these boys were married men at the time of their father's death. Willis was married two or three years before his father's death and had one child, and Willis married Ida Robertson. Charles married on the 8th day of November prior to his father's death in May, and his wife is one of the defendants in this suit, being Mrs. Etta Robertson. After Willis married, he lived in several different places, sometimes on the farm and sometimes in Davilla. He was living on the farm at the time of his father's death. That is the Fowler place, the one I sold to Mr. Hefley. Willis had three children, all boys. The oldest is named Wilton Lee, and he is 10 years old. The next one is named Washington Prentiss, and is about 8 years old, and the third is named Charles Galloway, and is now about 4 years old. Willis died on the 1st day of May, 1904, and Charles died the 4th day of October, 1900, about six or eight months after my husband's death. He died on the Hennington place. He was farming down on the Fowler place at the time of his death, but was living with me on the Hennington place, and also had some crop there. He left a widow surviving him, whose name is Etta Robertson, but left no children. One of my children was a girl, who is now Mrs. Joslin, one of the defendants in this case. She is a widow and had three children, and she and her children are now living with me in Cameron. When I made the trade with Mr. Hefley, part of the consideration was paid me in property here in town and part of it in money. I got two brick buildings from him in the trade. Mrs. Etta Robertson has been living with me ever since her marriage to my son. She has no children. My present husband's name is W. N. Hitt.

My name is J. C. Gibson, and I live two miles this side of Davilla. I lived in that community five or six years prior to 1900, then moved to Burnet county, and came back there two years ago. I was living in that community when Bee Robertson died, and had known about him about four or five years at the time of his death. I know the place he lived on near the river known as the Fowler place, and I also knew a man in that community by the name of Henry Cox. This man Henry Cox lived near Bee Robertson, and rented some land from him. I think he rented the land from Mr. Robertson in 1898, and this man Cox and Bee Robertson had some dispute or disagreement along in the spring before Mr. Robertson was taken sick and confined to his bed in the fall. He was sick along about the time he had the trouble with Cox, and could not cultivate his place, and rented some of it to Cox, and they had some trouble. Mr. Robertson came to me about the trouble he was having with Cox, and said that Cox was going to sue him for slander, and that he was going to kill Cox. I advised Robertson not to kill Cox, but to go and make a deed over to his son to prevent Cox from getting judgment against him for slander. Cox was threatening to sue Bee Robertson for slander because Robertson had called him a thief. Robertson came and told me that he thought he would get a gun and kill Cox, and I advised him not to do it, but to make a deed to his son to prevent Cox from getting anything, and Robertson said "I will do that," and came back and said to me that he had made it to Malvina, and that it will keep Cox from getting the slander out of him; that is, any of the property. He did not state to me right then what effect that would have on the property, but, after that, he said something about giving the children certain land, and went on and stated where the land was. He said he would give the place at the bridge to B. Joslin, Willis the old place, and Charles down in the field next to the creek. At the time he first called on me, he was excited. He sent me to Mr. Cox, and told me to give a cow and calf, and Cox told me to get out of his yard, and that he would not get any compromise. I went to see Cox and failed to get a compromise, and came back and reported it to Robertson, and I talked to Mr. Robertson about it after I returned. He was then at my house. At that time I told him that he could put his property out of the way by deeding it to Willis. I don't know whether it was that day or the next evening that he told me that he had deeded it to Malvina, but it was one or the other. He went to John Crunk at Davilla to make the deed.

ing the place. The time that I had that conversation with Mr. Cox and Robertson in reference to the matter was along in the latter part of May or some time in June, 1898, and it was about that time that he told me that he had deeded the property to Malvina.' Cross-examination: 'I was not Bee Robertson's lawyer. I was his neighbor, and the reason why I told him to convey his land to his oldest son so Cox could not get it was because I had seen something similar like that done. He had called Cox a thief, and my advice to him was to convey his land to his oldest son so Cox could not get it, and he told me that he would do it, but afterwards told me that he had conveyed it to his wife so Cox could not get it, and stated to me that that was his purpose to keep Cox from getting it because he had called Cox a thief, and that Cox was going to sue him for slander.'

"J. C. Hardy, witness for defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows: 'My name is J. C. Hardy. I live in Milam county, Tex., south of where Bee Robertson used to live, and I knew him in his lifetime, and I knew his son Willis, and I rented land from Willis one year; that is, in 1901. The land I rented from him was on the Bee Robertson homestead tract or the Fowler place. The part I rented from him was on the south end of the farm. It was on the south end of the field, the land nearest the house. It seems to me like about 20 acres I rented. I never went on it. He planted it for me, and he cut the oats and kept the rent himself.' Cross-examination: 'This was in 1901, after Bee Robertson's death. Mrs. Robertson was living on the place at the time. I did not go on the place. I never went on the place but one time, and that was after the oats came up. Willis was working for me for wages and worked the land himself, and I think it was about 20 acres, and all I know about the rent was that it was kept out when he cut the oats. Of my own knowledge I do not know who took the rent on it. All that I know about it is that he was hired to me and I rented the land from him, and he worked and planted the oats, and, when they were cut, he brought me part of them.'

"R. D. Alexander, a witness for defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows: 'I live near Baxter in Bell county, Tex., and I knew Bee Robertson in his lifetime and also his son Willis Robertson. I think I rented from Willis Robertson in the year 1904. The land I rented was in cultivation. I rented the land on the third and fourth—that is, $\frac{1}{2}$ of the cotton and $\frac{1}{4}$ of the corn—and rented it from Willis Robertson. I went to him to rent it and paid the rent to Mrs. Ida in that field. There was as much as 50 acres. I had 35 acres, but did not have all that was in the field. Judging from the looks of the field, I assumed there was three times as much in the field as I had. Mrs. Hitt was then living on the place. She was not Mrs. Hitt then, but Mrs. Bee Robertson. She married after I left the place.'

"Ida L. Robertson, one of the defendants, being duly sworn on oath, testified as follows: 'I am one of the defendants in this case, and I live four miles east of Davilla, and am now a widow. My husband's name was Willis K. Robertson. At the time of his death, he lived down on the farm near the river, and was the Fowler place and the one that Mrs. Hitt afterwards conveyed to Hefley. My husband and I lived there most of the time after we were married, and we married in 1896. When we first moved down there, Mr. Bee Robertson, my husband's father, and his family were living at the Hennington place. Mrs. Hitt and family were living on the Fowler place near us at the time of my husband's death. My husband and myself and family were living in one of the houses on the farm. At the time we moved on the farm, Bee Robertson gave my husband 25 acres of land below the ditch. There was a ditch running through the farm. After the death of Bee Robertson, there was an exchange made. Mrs. Hitt wanted to exchange land, and gave him 35 acres of land near the gate, and for it she wanted the 25 acres of land to go with the house next to the river, and he made the exchange of this 25 acres that Willis' father had gave him. He did not put any improvements on it, just worked it himself, and he continued in possession of it up to the time he died. In 1900 they made the exchange of the 25 acres for the 35 acres. He was in possession of the 35 acres afterwards continuously up to the time of his death. I remember about the time Mr. Bee Robertson is said to have made the deed to his wife. This was after Mr. Robertson had given the 25 acres to Willis. I did not know about the making of the deed at the time, but afterwards it was generally known. The deed was placed to record about the 17th day of June. Mr. Robertson came by our house to have it put of record. This is how I know about it. He told me and my husband that he was going to do so. He came to our house in his everyday clothes. He came to our house and then dressed up, and the reason he came to our house in his everyday clothes was to keep Mr. Cox from suspecting he was coming. He did not want Cox to know that, because Cox was going to sue him for slander. He stated that the reason he came in his everyday clothes was that he did not want Cox to know. He changed clothes at our house and left, and that evening he came back and changed his clothes again. After having changed his clothes, he told us he had been to Cameron. He stated that his object in making the deed was to keep Mr. Cox from getting his property. After he made this deed, he continued to manage the property, just like he always had, as far as I know, and at the time he came to our house and changed his clothes as before stated he was then living at the Hennington place, and this was about four miles west of where we were living on the Fowler place. He did not come by Cox's house and come to our house because Cox lived beyond him. He came down the big road, and, when he got to our house, it was early in the morning. After Bee Robertson's death, my husband farmed the land himself or rented it out. Part of it he worked and part of it he rented out. Mr. Bee Robertson died in 1900, and Mrs. Robertson married Mr. Hitt in 1905, and they made the trade with Mr. Hefley in January, 1907. I did not sign the deed. They did not ask me themselves to sign the deed. My husband and I had three children. Their names were Wilton Lee, Washington Prentiss, and Charles Galloway.' Cross-examination: 'The land that Willis worked was in cultivation. Willis did not pay any taxes on it that I know of. I have never paid any. I offered to, but Mrs. Hitt would not let me. This 35 acres that Willis cultivated was in the large field, and was never fenced off separately. There was never any house built on it, but Mrs. Hitt bought a house and gave it to Willis, but this house was not put on the 35 acres, but was up near the residence of Mrs. Hitt. I expect it was 300 yards from the land. Part of the time Willis lived in this house, and part of the time he lived at Davilla. When Willis rented the place out, he did not stay on it, and, when he rented it, he was not there. I expect this house was about a quarter of a mile from the 35-acre tract. I obtained a certified copy of the deed from Bee Robertson to Mrs. Hitt about two years ago, but it is not from that deed that I remember the date of Mr. Robertson's coming by our house and changing his clothes. At the time Willis and I moved on the Fowler place, Bee Robertson was living on the Hennington place. When Mr. Bee Robertson bought the Hennington place, he built a good house on it and dug a well and settled himself there, and put up a barn and walled up the well, and lived there on the Hennington place. Bee Robertson had another tract of 106 acres, and he gave that to Mrs. Joslin. Bee Robertson told me that he was coming down to Cameron to put that deed on record, and said that he was afraid that Cox would get a judgment against him. He said that Cox was going to sue him for calling him a thief. Bee Robertson did not keep his Sunday clothes at our house, but brought them along with him in a flour sack. When he came back from town, he took them off, and put them in the flour sack, and carried them home.'

John P. Looney and Henderson & Lockett, for appellants. Monta J. Moore, W. J. Hefley, and W. A. Morrison, for appellee.

FISHER, C. J. (after stating the facts as above). Appellants' brief contains four assignments of errors, which are as follows:

"(1) The court erred in admitting in evidence deed from T. C. and A. E. Fowler to W. J. Robertson, as shown by bill of exceptions No. 1.

"(2) The court erred in excluding the testimony of witness Mrs. Ida L. Robertson, as shown by defendant's bill of exception No. 3.

"(3) The court erred in giving peremptory instruction to find for the plaintiff, because it appears from the evidence that the property in controversy was the homestead of W. J. Robertson and his wife, Mrs. Malvina Robertson, and the pretended deed from W. J. Robertson to his wife through which plaintiff claims title was void, because the same was not executed by the husband and the wife with the formalities and requirements of the Constitution of the state, relating to conveyances of the homestead.

"(4) The court erred in peremptorily instructing the jury to find for the plaintiff, because it appears from the evidence that the deed by W. J. Robertson to his wife, Malvina Robertson, for the land in controversy, through which plaintiff claims title, was not intended, and did not, in fact, operate to convey the title to said land; but was merely a simulated transfer, and there was no change in the ownership, control, or possession of said land during the life of said W. J. Robertson, but same remained in his possession until his death, and he exercised all the rights of ownership over the same just as he had previously done, and the purpose of said conveyance was merely to pretend and not in fact to convey the title, and at the time of his death said property was the community property of said W. J. Robertson and his said wife, and one-half descended to his children through whom defendants claim and they are entitled to one-half thereof."

These assignments will be disposed of in the order named, and our conclusions of fact on the evidence will be indicated in disposing of them.

1. In view of the undisputed evidence in the record and the admission of the appellants made in their brief that J. W. Robertson was common source of title, there could be no error in the action of the court in admitting the deed from Fowler to Robertson, as complained of in the first assignment of error, although that deed was not properly acknowledged. If Robertson was common source of title, there was no necessity for either of the parties to go back of him, and there is a distinct admission in appellants' brief that such was the case.

2. There was no error in the action of the trial court in not admitting the testimony of Mrs. Ida Robertson. If it could be held that that evidence was admissible, it certainly could not have affected the result. If admissible at all, it would be merely upon the question that W. T. Hefley, the vendor of the plaintiffs, had notice or knowledge of the fact that Mrs. Ida L. Robertson was asserting some claim to the land. The proposed evidence is to the effect that it was expected to be proved by Mrs. Ida Robertson that Hefley endeavored to get Mrs. Robertson to execute a deed to the land, which she refused to do. While it is insisted by appellee that the plaintiff ought to be protected as an innocent purchaser, we in disposing of the case lay no stress upon that issue. It is true that he held the legal title, and it appears that he paid a valuable consideration for the property, and the defendants, asserting an equitable title, would rest under the burden of proving facts tending to show that the holder of the legal title acquired it with knowledge or notice of their rights. But, as said before, we have pretermitted this question, because it is not necessary to be decided, and for the further fact that there is some evidence in the record showing that some of the appellants were in possession of the land at the time that the Hefleys purchased. Consequently the question might arise whether such possession was not sufficient to charge the plaintiff and his vendor with notice of whatever right the appellants may be able to assert.

3. There is evidence both ways as to the question whether the property was occupied as a homestead when the deed from W. J. Robertson to his wife, Malvina, was executed in June, 1898. There is evidence to the effect that it was then so occupied and used. On the other hand, Mrs. Hitt, formerly Mrs. Robertson, testified, in effect, that she and her husband lived on the place 12 or 13 years after they bought it in 1885; and, again, that her husband died on May 11, 1900, and that at that time they had been away from the Fowler place, the one in controversy, three years, they in the meantime occupying as their homestead another farm, known as the Hennington place. Of course, if she is correct as to the time stated, the place in controversy was not the homestead when the deed to her was executed in 1898; and, if that was the case, the conveyance by the husband was sufficient to convey title without her joining in it. But, if we should conclude that it was homestead when the deed was executed, the result is the same, for it is clearly and beyond question shown by the evidence that she and her husband abandoned the premises in controversy, and established their homestead on another place, known as the Hennington place, and this was the condition of affairs when her husband died. She has not asserted since the abandonment of the premises a homestead right in it, and, so far as shown, she assented to the change. On the facts this case is stronger in favor of the conveyance than the one before the court in Marler v. Handy, 88 Tex. 422, 31 S. W. 636. That was a deed by the husband, Marler, to Handy of the homestead, which was community property. The wife refused to join in the deed, and always claimed her homestead right in the property, but shortly after the conveyance by the husband they moved from the premises and acquired a place elsewhere, and there the husband and wife established their homestead. The Supreme Court, after discussing a number of cases, said: "From these authorities and we believe upon sound principle the rule may be stated that the husband, acting in good faith, may select the homestead of the family; and that when he has acquired a new home, and his wife has removed with him to the newly acquired homestead, a deed made by him without her concurrence to the former homestead becomes operative as to the husband as an estoppel against his right to recover the property. The wife's right, being that of homestead only, ceases when a new homestead has been acquired, and she removes thereto. The deed made by Marler to Handy was not void under our Constitution; and, although inoperative so long as the property was occupied by him and his wife as a home, yet when he and his family removed therefrom to another homestead, he acting in good faith for the best interests of himself and his family, the deed became operative to vest title in Handy, and the property could not be recovered by the husband, because he would be estopped by the deed, and it could not be recovered by the wife because her homestead right ceased when her husband acquired, and she removed with him to another homestead." There is no question raised in this case but that the husband was acting in good faith in abandoning the old homestead and acquiring a new, and we can see no reason why the principle announced in Marler v. Handy should not apply in affording protection to a conveyance from the husband to the wife as it would from the husband to a stranger.

4. The deed in question from her husband vesting in Mrs. Malvina Robertson the legal title, and the evidence of the plaintiff throwing no suspicion upon the same, the burden was upon the appellants to introduce evidence of some probative force showing either that she held the legal title in trust or that it was a simulated transaction as between the parties to it, and that as between them it was not intended that it should be effective as a conveyance. If the evidence in the record is of no force in establishing these issues, the trial court properly instructed a verdict for the plaintiff. Appellants in their brief make no point that the deed from Robertson to his wife was not delivered; but, however, what evidence there is upon this subject tends to show a delivery. As having some bearing on the question that the purpose was not to convey title and that the transaction was simulated, appellants lay some stress upon the fact that, after the execution of the deed, Robertson, the grantor, remained in possession. Little, if any, force can be given to this fact, because the grantor and grantee were husband and wife, were living together as such, and in such a case their occupancy of the premises is entirely consistent with the rights of the wife, who is asserting title under a deed from the husband. There is no direct charge made in appellant's brief that the deed was not supported by a consideration, and there is nothing upon this subject except the inference that arises from the evidence offered by the appellants tending to show what they term a simulated transaction, and from what appears from a recital contained in the deed indicating a consideration which is: "In consideration of $5 and other valuable considerations paid by the grantee." As between the parties to a conveyance, the recital contained in it as to the consideration is evidence, and, when not explained or contradicted, should be given some effect; and in such a case, if a consideration could be held necessary to support an executed conveyance, the recital should be deemed sufficient if it recites a fact sufficient in law to create either a good or a valuable consideration. The deed we are considering was executed, and it appears from its face, as well as we are able to determine from the meager facts stated, to be based upon a valuable consideration. Besides, the consideration of love and affection as between husband and wife is sufficient. Furthermore, in determining the legal effect of an executed conveyance, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the law will imply a consideration; and this may be said to be the rule applied to all written contracts which have been executed and acted upon, and, when there is no issue of fact made by the evidence upon this question, the court construing the instrument should treat it as based upon a sufficient consideration. But, aside from all this, is a consideration necessary in order to support a deed or conveyance that is fully executed and delivered? The weight of authority answers this question in the negative, and it has been recently so held by this court, but at present I am not able to recall the decision that so decides; but in Baker v. Westcott, 73 Tex. 129, 11 S. W. 157, this principle is recognized. There it is said: "That a consideration is not necessary to the validity of a deed conveying land has been held in the courts of many states. Ruth v. Ford, 9 Kan. 17; Perry v. Price, 1 Mo. 553; Doe v. Hurd, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 510; Green v.

Thomas, 11 Me. 318; Marshall v. Fisk, 6 Mass. 24, 4 Am. Dec. 76. If the instrument in this case was a mere executory contract, the rule of equity would probably require proof of consideration in order to enforce it, although this is ordinarily presumed from the use of a seal. But we think this instrument in effect a deed which conveyed the legal title to Westcott. If it were competent at any time for the grantor or his heirs to avoid it for want of a consideration, this could only be done by affirmative proof of the fact that the conveyance was purely voluntary." The deed importing a consideration and vesting the apparent legal title in the vendee, the appellants, if they expected any benefit from the fact that no consideration existed, should have offered some evidence to that effect, which was not done, except, as before said, the mere inference that arises from the statement of the grantor that he conveyed the land to his wife in order to defeat the claim of Cox. Mrs. Robertson, the only other surviving party to this transaction, says nothing about it, although she testified as a witness in the case. This much is said upon this subject merely to anticipate a contention that a consideration was necessary, and we do not desire to be understood as holding that a want or absence of consideration could not be shown and considered in determining the main question whether the parties to the deed intended it as a simulated transaction, which question we will now dispose of.

All of the evidence upon this subject, reduced to a concise statement, is the fact that Robertson was advised to execute a conveyance in order to defeat the collection of a supposed claim of Cox for slander, and his statement to the effect that, with that purpose in view, he had conveyed by deed the land in controversy to his wife. Mrs. Robertson testified, but said nothing about the purpose and object of the deed and the consideration, but her evidence shows that she acted upon the deed as conveying title to her, and so treated it. If there was any agreement or understanding between the husband and wife to reconvey or upon her part to hold in trust or any recognition of the fact that the deed was a simulated transaction and was not to be given the effect that the law implies from the words of conveyance in which it is framed, it was not shown by the evidence. In all the cases upon this subject where the deed was avoided by the vendor some fact of this character was shown, and we have found no instance in which, between vendor and vendee, an executed conveyance has been canceled or voided, or the legal title thereby created has been charged with a trust merely upon the evidence of the grantor that he did not intend to convey. But the declarations of the grantor in this instance do not go this far, for he merely says that he had conveyed the property to his wife for the purpose of putting it beyond the the conveyance, as between them, should not take effect, or that the vendee should hold the legal title in trust for the vendor. While Robertson may have intended to defeat a collection of the claim of Cox, he may also have intended to convey title to his wife, which purpose would have comported with the legal effect of the deed and his act in having the same recorded, and the fact that during the remainder of his life he never indicated a purpose to recall the deed or question the full and complete title which by its terms it purports to convey to the wife. She was the natural object of his bounty, and, as between them, no suspicion is imposed upon the deed that it does not reveal the truth, and was not intended, as between them, to pass title, merely upon evidence that the vendor in executing it intended thereby to defeat a supposed claim of some third party. As between the parties to an executed conveyance, proof merely of this fact was not sufficient. The evidence should have gone further in establishing additional facts, which in this case were not shown. Such facts, for instance, as are indicated by the cases of Taylor v. Ferguson, 87 Tex. 2, 26 S. W. 46, and Rivera v. White, 94 Tex. 539, 63 S. W. 125. These cases and others of like kind upon the facts are in no wise similar to this case, for in all of them the evidence tended to show an agreement to reconvey or a holding by the vendee in trust or in recognition of a superior right in the vendor.

This discussion of this phase of the case is sufficient to indicate our views that the trial court was justified, under the evidence, in treating the deed as passing title, and the evidence assailing it was not sufficient to overcome it; but there is another view of the case which may have influenced the trial court in directing a verdict which can be based upon the facts of the case and the law as thereto applied as molded by the decisions. When the debtor conveys with the purpose of defrauding his creditors, the conveyance, though voidable as to the latter, is conclusive and binding between the former and his vendee. Rivera v. White, supra. One having a valid claim and demand for unliquidated damages may be a creditor entitled to such protection. 2 Bigelow on Frauds, p. 148; Holden v. McLaury, 60 Tex. 228; Cole v. Terrell, 71 Tex. 550, 9 S. W. 668. And of that class of creditors entitled to such protection are those having an action for slander is recognized by the cases of Clapp v. Leatherbee, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 131-138; Stevens v. Works, 81 Ind. 445; Shean v. Shay, 42 Ind. 375, 13 Am. Rep. 366; Cooke v. Cooke, 43 Md. 522, and others that might be mentioned. The conveyance before the was it shown that such a claim existed or that she was entitled thereto. The court held that it did not follow in a divorce proceeding that the wife was entitled to alimony as a matter of course, but that that right would depend upon the facts, and held that, as the statute intended only to protect creditors, they must be shown to exist, and the mere fear of the vendor that someone might assert a supposed demand would not be sufficient to show that the conveyance was in fraud of creditors, although his intent was to place the property beyond the reach of such supposed claims. In other words, that a mere intent to defeat an unreal or a fancied claim was not sufficient. But in our opinion there is a difference between the facts of that case and this. Here there is no question but that Cox had a cause of action against Robertson for slander, and all the evidence upon this point was introduced by the appellants, and the facts in evidence show a prima facie case against Robertson, and they offered and introduced no evidence to the contrary. They did not undertake to show that the charge made against Cox was true, or any other fact that would defeat his recovery. The words used by Robertson were actionable per se, and, if no defense was offered damages for some amount would follow as a matter of course. If in such a case evidence would be admissible to show that the plaintiff sustained no injury, which, by the way, the case of Belo v. Fuller, 84 Tex. 452, 19 S. W. 616, 31 Am. St. Rep. 75, holds to the contrary, it is sufficient answer to say that nothing of the kind was offered. Robertson had called Cox a thief, and he was threatening to sue him for damages. He prevailed upon his friend Gibson to see Cox with a view of settlement or compromise. He interviewed Cox, and was unsuccessful. Thereafter Robertson executed to his wife the deed in question with the expressed and avowed intention to defeat a collection of the claim of Cox, a demand which the evidence shows Robertson recognized existed, and which the evidence tends to show was asserted by Cox. The evidence is silent upon the question as to whether Cox instituted against Robertson an action of slander, but, if he failed to do so, such fact would not affect the nature and effect of the transaction resulting in the conveyance, if the purpose was to defeat a real and meritorious claim.

Therefore we think there was no error in treating the conveyance as executed by Robertson for the purpose of defrauding the creditors; and, such being the case, neither he, if living, nor his heirs who now assert under him, could attack it.

We find no error in the record, and the judgment is affirmed.

1. TAXATION (§ 689*)—SALE FOR TAXES—PROCEEDINGS ON — MOTION TO SET ASIDE — FINDINGS.

Though, in a tax suit on the hearing of a motion to set aside a sale of a lot for taxes on the ground that the sheriff failed to notify an attorney of the date of the sale as agreed, the court's direction to the sheriff to give no promise to notify attorneys in the future seems inconsistent with a finding that none had been given in the case in question, it was not equivalent to a direct finding that the sheriff promised to notify the attorney as was claimed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Dec. Dig. § 689.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1010*)—REVIEW—MOTION TO SET ASIDE EXECUTION SALE—WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE.

A motion to set aside an execution sale lies on the law side of a court, and the evidence taken at the hearing cannot be weighed on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3979-3982; Dec. Dig. § 1010.*]

3. EXECUTION (§ 247*)—SALES—GROUNDS FOR SETTING ASIDE IN GENERAL.

Execution sales may be set aside on motion for about the same reason as judicial sales in the strict meaning of the words may be.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 687-695; Dec. Dig. § 247.*]

4. TAXATION (§ 689*)—INADEQUACY OF PRICE — GROUND FOR SETTING ASIDE SALE FOR TAXES.

Though for inadequacy of price a sale on execution will not be set aside, gross inadequacy is a circumstance to be considered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Dec. Dig. § 689.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 4*)—"ACCIDENT OR SURPRISE."

Accident or surprise, as used in equity jurisprudence, embraces not only various forfeitures due to accidents in the popular sense, but such unforeseen events, misfortunes, losses, acts, or omissions as are not the result of negligence or misconduct of the party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 20; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

6. EQUITY (§ 4*)—"ACCIDENT."

Accident is an unforeseen and unexpected event, occurring external to the party affected by it and of which his own agency is not the proximate cause, whereby, contrary to his own intention and wish, he loses some legal right or becomes subjected to some legal liability, and another person acquires a corresponding legal right, which it would be a violation of good conscience for the latter person, under the circumstances, to retain.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 20; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 1, pp. 70-71.]

7. EQUITY (§ 4*)—"ACCIDENT"—"SURPRISE."

The word "surprise" is used interchangeably with "accident" to designate the emer-

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 8, pp. 6818, 6819.]

8. TAXATION (§ 689*)—SALE FOR TAXES — GROUNDS FOR SETTING ASIDE.

Where, owing to a misunderstanding, an attorney fully believed he was to be notified by the sheriff of a sale on execution for taxes of his client's lot, and was thereby led to make no further inquiry, or watch for advertisement of the sale made for an inadequate price, it should be set aside.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1381; Dec. Dig. § 689.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Greene County; Jas. T. Neville, Judge.

Tax suit by the State, on the relation of J. H. Hartley, against Belle Innes and others. From a judgment overruling a motion to set aside a sale of a lot under the judgment for delinquent taxes, defendants appeal. Reversed.

J. P. McCammon, for appellants. J. W. Goad, for respondent.

GOODE, J. Appeal from a judgment overruling a motion to set aside an execution sale of a lot in the city of Springfield under a judgment for the amount of the delinquent taxes on the lot for the year 1902, rendered against Rosina I. Kellett and 29 other defendants, as the heirs of Susan Ann Innes, deceased. The tax suit was permitted to correct a flaw in the title, and the attorney for Mrs. Kellett looked after the case, wrote the execution on the judgment, had it put in the hands of the sheriff to advertise and sell the property, and told said officer he (said attorney) wished to be present at the sale, which would occur during the September term of the circuit court, 1905. During the term the attorney for the heirs went to the sheriff's office and asked a deputy once or twice or the sheriff or both if a day had been fixed for execution sales for taxes, and was told no day had been fixed. According to the attorney, the deputy agreed to notify him when a sale day was fixed so he (the attorney) could be present and bid in the property for his client, and the attorney, relying on this promise, which was not kept, failed to attend the sale and the property was sold to other parties for $100, or less than one-fifth its conceded value. A motion was filed in the circuit court before the purchasers had paid their bid to set aside the sale, and was overruled after a hearing. The testimony of the deputy sheriff and that of the attorney for Mrs. Kellett agreed regarding inquiries by the attorney about when the sale would take place; but the deputy denied promising to notify the attorney of the day of the sale. On the sale day a man called the deputy's attention to the fact that Mrs. Kellett's attorney was interested in the sale, and the deputy said he did not speak to or telephone said attorney after being told this, because he supposed the latter would be present at the sale. The attorney testified he did not see the published advertisement of the sale, and knew nothing of notice having been given until after the property had been sold; that he was diligent in inquiring at the sheriff's office, but; after the deputy promised to notify him of the day of sale when it was fixed, he relied on the promise, and gave no further attention to the matter. When appellant's attorney testified to the promise by the deputy, the court said: "Mr. Sheriff, you must not hereafter make any promises to notify attorneys, nor notify them of the time of sale under execution. Let the notice that is published be the only notice given. It is the business of attorneys to look after the executions in which they are interested."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

Without conceding the sale should be set aside if the sheriff or his deputy promised to inform Mrs. Kellett's attorney the date it would occur, the attorney for the purchasers argues that, as the motion to set aside was overruled and the facts were not expressly found or declarations of law given, the court below must be presumed to have found the promise was not made. The court's direction to the sheriff to give no promise to notify attorneys of the dates of execution sales in the future seems rather inconsistent with a finding that none had been given in the present instance, and suggests the motion was determined against appellant for some other reason. But this remark was not equivalent to finding positively the attorney had been promised, and we must dispose of the appeal on the assumption the court below found he had not been. We do this in deference to the decision of the Supreme Court in Holden v. Vaughan, 64 Mo. 588, that a motion to set aside an execution sale lies on the law side of a court, and the evidence taken at the hearing of such a motion cannot be weighed on appeal. The extent of the contention for the purchasers upon this point is that the court below found the deputy gave no promise, and not that the attorney was without a belief or impression to the contrary. It is palpable if no promise was given, there was a misunderstanding between the deputy and the attorney, and that the latter fully believed he was to be notified, acted on the belief, and was thereby led to make no further inquiry or watch for an advertisement of the sale. The testimony is uniform that he inquired one or more times whether a day for execution sales had been fixed, and was known by the sheriff and his deputy to be interested in the sale of the premises. In the course of the conversations which occurred, if no definite promise was made by the deputy to let him know when the sale would occur, the attorney might have gathered the opposite impression without being so remiss in the discharge of duty as to deprive his client of the relief to which otherwise she would be entitled. We say this because careful men often misapprehend the substance and effect of conversations over business affairs, and it is manifest the attorney could have understood the deputy would notify him of the day of sale from statements made by the latter which were not meant as a promise. Such workings of two minds at cross-purposes are common, and would justify our ruling if there were no apposite precedents; whereas there are many, as will be seen infra.

The question for decision comes down to this: Considering all the facts we have stated, including the purpose of the tax suit, the sacrifice of the property at less than one-fifth of its value, the prompt move to set aside the sale before the purchase money had been paid or the sheriff's deed executed, and that it is possible to do so without causing loss to the purchasers, can a court grant relief consistently with settled legal doctrines? Execution sales may be set aside on motion for about the same reasons judicial sales in the strict meaning of the words may be. The reason of this rule is that on motion a court can control its own process to prevent injustice. Ray v. Stobbs, 28 Mo. 35; McKee v. Logan, 82 Mo. 524, 528; Bryant v. Russell, 127 Mo. 422, 30 S. W. 107; Rogers & Baldwin Hardware Co. v. Building Co., 132 Mo. 442, 34 S. W. 57, 31 L. R. A. 335, 53 Am. St. Rep. 494; 2 Freeman, Executions (3d Ed.) § 308. Though the rule prevails in this state that these motions must be heard and determined according to legal procedure, it is none the less true that equitable principles are applied to the facts to ascertain whether the sale should stand or be vacated, as is shown in the cases just cited and those to be cited. Gross inadequacy of price is a circumstance of weight; for, though the courts have professed on numberless occasions they would not vacate a sheriff's sale for this reason, the judgments actually pronounced by them show their bark is worse than their bite in these matters. When the inadequacy of the bid was very great, some circumstance of irregularity, mistake, fraud, or injustice was searched for diligently and usually found, which enabled the court to prevent confiscation. In Idw. Co. v. Building Co., 132 Mo., loc. cit. 462, 34 S. W. 57, 31 L. R. A. 335, 53 Am. St. Rep. 494, the dissenting opinion declared inadequacy of price was usually no ground for setting aside sheriff's sales which had become final, but that this was not more than a half truth as applied to the review of such a sale upon motion made before it had become a finality, and that remark expresses what is even more strongly the doctrine of the majority opinion. In Davis v. McCann, 143 Mo. 172, 44 S. W. 795, a proceeding in the nature of a suit in equity to set aside a sheriff's sale of land, and controlled by the same principles which ought to be applied to the present motion, the Supreme Court said inadequacy of price alone would not justify setting aside sales of lands under executions unless the price was so low as to shock the moral sense and outrage the conscience; but, if it was, the courts would interfere for justice. In Holdsworth v. Shannon, infra, it was said "inadequacy of price without more, unless so gross as to shock the moral sense," would not suffice as ground to set aside a foreclosure or execution sale. Notwithstanding those expressions, we consider that other decisions leave the question unsettled in this state. As additional facts are available for the ends of justice in the present matter, we will follow the fashion of other courts in similar cases, and refrain from resting our decision in favor of appellant on the single circumstance that the property was sacrificed. The element of accident or surprise is in the case in the meaning of those terms as used in equity jurisprudence, which embraces not only various forfeitures due to accidents in the popular sense, "but such unforeseen events, misfortunes, losses, acts or omissions as are not the result of any negligence or misconduct of the party." 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 78. According to the definition of another eminent writer, accident "is an unforeseen and unexpected event, occurring external to the party affected by it and of which his own agency is not the proximate cause, whereby, contrary to his own intention and wish, he loses some legal right or becomes subjected to some legal liability, and another person acquires a corresponding legal right, which it would be a violation of good conscience for the latter person, under the circumstances, to retain." 2 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. (3d Ed.) § 823. A standard illustration of "accident" in this sense is the payment by an executor of legacies under the mistaken belief there will be sufficient assets of the estate left to meet its obligations, when, unless negligence or bad faith can be imputed to him, he will be allowed to recover of the legatees. 2 Pomeroy, § 837, par. 5, and cases cited in the notes. The word "surprise" is used interchangeably with "accident" to designate such emergencies; both words signifying a detrimental condition or situation wherein a party is placed unexpectedly, and against which ordinary prudence would not have guarded. 1 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (2d Ed.) 278; McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225, 23 Pac. 312. This ground of relief has been utilized by courts in setting aside execution and judicial sales upon the motion or at the suit of parties who were prevented by some misunderstanding or mistake of theirs, or their agents or attorneys, from being present to protect their interests; and that, too, in cases where the misapprehension or other fortuity could not be laid at the door of either the officers conducting the sale or the purchasers, but was due to an erroneous belief or impression of the petitioner for relief or his attorney, for which no one was to blame. A reading of the opinions cited infra will demonstrate that the doctrine we have stated has been sanctioned by eminent masters of jurisprudence in judgments rendered on facts practically identical with those before us, the prices having been no more shocking or the fault of the complainant less, and wherein the decision was put squarely on the ground that the party moving against the sale had been prevented by surprise or accident from learning when or where it would occur. We refer particularly to the eight authorities first cited, which are from outside jurisdictions, and to Holdsworth v. Shannon, 113 Mo. 508, 21 S. W. 85, 35 Am. St. Rep. 719, wherein their doctrine was approved by our Supreme Court, as it ought to be if justice is to be preferred to opportunism in these controversies. Seaman v. Riggins, 2 N. J. Eq. 214, 34 Am. Dec. 200; Howell v. Hester, 4 N. J. Eq. 266; Wetzler v. Schaumann, 24 N. J. Eq. 60; Williamson v. Dale, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 290; Bixley v. Mead, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; Tripp v. Cook, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 143; Hoppock v. Conklin, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 532; Griffith v. Hadley, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 587; Hdw. Co. v. Build. Co., 132 Mo. 442, 34 S. W. 57, 31 L. R. A. 335, 53 Am. St. Rep. 404; McKee v. Logan, 82 Mo. 524; Am. Wine Co. v. Scholer, 13 Mo. App. 435, 85 Mo. 496; Grafham v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 180, 6 Sup. Ct. 636, 29 L. Ed. 839; Schroeder v. Young, 161 U. S. 334, 16 Sup. Ct. 512, 40 L. Ed. 721; Rorer, Judicial Sales (2d Ed.) § 1095.

We have examined the cases cited for the purchasers, chief of them being Meir v. Zelle, 31 Mo. 331, and Bailey v. Smock, 61 Mo. 213, and find nothing therein which stands in the way of relief to appellant. In the first named there appears to have been no evidence to prove the attorney of the land owner had been misled concerning the sale, and it was distinctly stated he had not been. The other case did not involve the point of law in hand, but was an action against an indorser for a balance left due on a promissory note after foreclosure of a mortgage given to secure it. The indorser set up the defense that the indorsee had agreed to notify him of the date the foreclosure sale would occur and had not done so, and the question was whether this averment constituted a defense.

The judgment is reversed and the cause remanded to be proceeded with in accordance with this opinion. All concur.

137 Mo. 4th. 347

KLIX et al. v. POLISH ROMAN CATHOLIC ST. STANISLAUS PARISH et al.

(St. Louis Court of Appeals. Missouri. April 6, 1909.)

1. RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES (§ 21*)—PROPERTY—DIVERSION.

Lots conveyed to a Roman Catholic archbishop in trust for the congregation of a certain church or parish could not be diverted from the purposes of the trust, and must be applied according to the terms of the settlement, and, either in their original or some converted form, devoted to the pious uses of the congregation, whether the title continued in the original trustee, or was conveyed by him to an incorporated society.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Religious Societies, Cent. Dig. §§ 144, 145; Dec. Dig. § 21.*]

2. RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES (§ 1*)—INCORPORATED SOCIETIES—STATUS—"CIVIL BODIES POLITICAL."

Incorporated religious societies are, in this country, "civil bodies politic," and are amenable to the ordinary courts of the state, and governed by the statutes under which they are organized, so far as statutory regulations are prescribed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Religious Societies, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

3. RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES (§ 4*)—INCORPORATION—COLLATERAL ATTACK.

While the establishment of religious corporations, except to hold title to such real estate as may be prescribed for church edifices, etc., is forbidden by Const. 1875, art. 2, § 8 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 131), the validity of the incorporation of a religious society cannot be questioned collaterally by a private suitor; the appropriate remedy being by quo warranto at the suit of the Attorney General, or perhaps a prosecuting attorney.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Religious Societies, Cent. Dig. § 10; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

4. CORPORATIONS (§ 56*)—BY-LAWS—BY WHOM ADOPTED.

The by-laws of a corporation must be adopted by the members of the corporate body, and cannot be by the directors unless the charter or fundamental law so provides.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 152; Dec. Dig. § 56.*]

5. CORPORATIONS (§ 281*)—DIRECTORS—HOW CHOSEN.

The directors of a corporation must be chosen by the members—that is, by the corporators—unless the latter have authorized some other mode of choice which the law will tolerate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1187; Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

6. RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES (§ 12*)—JUDICIAL SUPERVISION.

When a church has been incorporated, the regulations and customs of the communion to which it belongs regarding the disposition of secular business will be respected by the courts as far as possible; and, if the mode of government in force in the denomination at large is not by congregations, but by superior clerical personages, assemblies, synods, councils, or consistories, the authority of these will not be displaced, if it can be upheld consistently with the laws of the sovereignty.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Religious Societies, Cent. Dig. § 88; Dec. Dig. § 12.*]

7. RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES (§§ 12, 23*)—JUDICIAL SUPERVISION—PROPERTY—RIGHTS OF MEMBERS.

Where a schism occurs in a congregation over a tenet of faith, and two factions claim the church property, it will be awarded to the one adhering to the original doctrines of the church, and the decisions of the church judicatories as to what these doctrines are will be accepted by the civil courts, when such judicatories exist and have authority to decide; the civil courts being concerned with points of faith only when they must be ascertained in order to know where the property belongs.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Religious Societies, Cent. Dig. §§ 88, 147-153; Dec. Dig. §§ 12, 23.*]

8. RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES (§ 7*)—PROPERTY—RIGHTS OF MEMBERS.

Const. 1865, art. 1, § 12, provided that by a general law any religious society might become a body corporate for the purpose of acquiring land required for a house of worship, etc., "and contracting in relation to such land through a board of trustees selected by themselves." Const. 1875, art. 2, § 8 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 131), declaring that no religious corporation can be established in this state except those created under the general law for holding title to real estate for church edifices, etc., does not provide for management of the property of a religious society by a board selected by themselves. Rev. St. 1879, § 970 (Rev. St. 1899, § 1394 [Ann. St. 1906, p. 1103]), provides that any three or more persons may associate themselves, by written articles of agreement, as a society formed for religious, etc., purposes, and become a corporation. Section 1895, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1104), provides for the submission to the circuit court of the articles, with a petition for a pro forma decree, and declares that, as soon as the decree is granted, the Secretary of State must issue a certified copy of the articles, etc., and "thereupon the petitioners, their associates and successors shall be a body politic." Section 1397, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1105), enumerating the classes of associations which may be organized under the article, includes "any association, congregation or church organization formed for religious purposes." Section 1400, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1106), provides that corporations may be formed under the article to execute any trust whose purpose is within the purview of the article, and may take, by deed or devise, property for the uses of the trust, and execute the trust so created. Held that, in view of legislative history, and of the fact that in the Roman Catholic communion the title to church possessions is vested in the bishops, who manage them either directly or through the parish priest, without participation by the congregation, where property conveyed to an archbishop in trust for a congregation was by such trustee conveyed to a religious corporation organized by certain members of the congregation, the other members were neither members of the corporation, nor entitled to a decree conferring membership on them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Religious Societies, Cent. Dig. § 24; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

Appeal from St. Louis Circuit Court; Daniel G. Taylor, Judge.

Suit by Leon Klix and others against the Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish, a corporation, and others. From a judgment dismissing the bill, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Mackay & Mackay, for appellants. Daniel Dillon, for respondents.

GOODE, J. On February 29, 1883, an incorporated religious society, styled the "Franciscan Fathers of the State of Misouri," by a deed duly executed, conveyed to Peter Richard Kendrick, archbishop of the city of St. Louis, certain described tracts of land in said city "in trust for the congregation of St. Stanislaus of the city of St. Louis and assigns forever," the said Franciscan Fathers covenanted that they and their successors would warrant and defend the title to the premises unto the said party of the second part (Archbishop Kendrick) and unto his successors in trust and assigns forever. This deed recited a consideration of $12,000, but, according to the evidence, no consideration was paid. The cestui que trust, the congregation of St. Stanislaus, is composed of Polish communicants of the Roman Catholic Church, residing in St. Stanislaus parish in the city of St. Louis, and who are members of a certain church in said parish. The pastor or priest of the parish in 1885 was Rev. Urban Stanowski, and he has been the incumbent ever since. At the origin of the controversy which gave rise to this litigation the congregation was a large and wealthy one, we understand, consisting of nearly 2,000 members, owning property, including a church and a parochial school building, valued at about $300,000, and receiving and dispensing annual revenues amounting to $7,000 and upwards. The buildings were erected with contributions from the members, and the yearly income is collected in the same way. The congregation maintained a parochial school, and perhaps other auxiliary enterprises. In 1891 a new church house was to be erected, at a cost which made it necessary to borrow money, and it was deemed best to form a corporation to take and secure the loan. Rev. Urban Stanowski, the pastor, announced the purpose to do this to the congregation, and no one objected, though it is not in proof that a vote was taken on the question. Said Stanowski and five other members of the congregation, selected by him, to wit, Joseph Olszewski, John Grabowski, Josef Grabowski, Michal Werozynski, and Wlodyslaw Pilinski, signed a document styled "Articles of Agreement of the Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish," and declared in the preamble they had associated themselves for the purpose of forming a religious association, and had agreed on what followed in said articles as a constitution. The first article of the constitution merely said the name of the association should be the Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish. The second declared the purpose of the association should be to unite in a church congregation Polish Roman Catholics, maintain a Polish Roman Catholic Church, encourage attendance at Roman Catholic religious services, attendance at lectures of a religious, scientific, or educational character, and maintain a parochial school. The third article declared the business meetings of the association should be held at the residence of the priest of the parish at such times as might be determined by the by-laws to be adopted by the association. These three articles, which constituted the articles of agreement and also the constitution of the proposed society, were submitted to the circuit court with a petition praying for a pro forma decree of incorporation, and in due time a decree was entered. The articles of agreement, with the proper certificate from the clerk of the circuit court and the recorder of deeds, were filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and the latter issued a certified copy of the same as the charter of the corporation. This business was concluded May 2, 1891, and on May 8th Archbishop Kendrick, as trustee for the congregation of St. Stanislaus, executed a deed to the "Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Missouri," conveying to said corporation all the properties which had theretofore been conveyed to him by the Franciscan Fathers in trust for the said congregation. The deed to the corporation recited the former conveyance by the Franciscan Fathers in trust to Archbishop Kendrick, and that the corporation was "successor to the rights of the cestui que trust, the congregation of St. Stanislaus."

The six men who had petitioned for incorporation adopted certain regulations, part of which are styled "Charter" and part "By-laws," but all of them are at the most merely by-laws; for the statutes of the state and the articles of agreement constitute the charter of the society. It is enough to state concerning the adopted regulations that they provided for the government of the corporation by six directors, to be appointed by the archbishop of St. Louis; for the filling of vacancies in the board by him; the adoption of by-laws and the election of new members of the corporate body by the directors; and that all the powers of said board should be exercised in conformity to the discipline and usages of the Roman Catholic Church, and such regulations as might be established from time to time for the good of said church. Broad powers were vested in the priest of the parish as president of the board, and primarily he and the directors control the corporation, but ultimately the archbishop of the diocese, by virtue of his authority to appoint the directors. The members and officers of the body politic must be members of the St. Stanislaus congregation. These defendants, except one of them, have continued as directors of the corporation, managed its affairs, and dealt with its property as they deemed best, without interference from the members of the congregation. In truth the evidence shows Rev. Urban Stanowski, the pastor, has dominated directly the entire management of the temporal and spiritual affairs of the church, and through him the archbishop of the diocese of St. Louis. Once a year the pastor would read a statement of the receipts and disbursements to the congregation, but he did not hold himself responsible to them, nor bind himself to make a report. In 1904 many members of the parish became dissatisfied with the parish school, believing the teachers, who were members of a certain sisterhood, were inefficient. These teachers were removed, and others substituted in their places. Nevertheless dissatisfaction continued, and it was aggravated by the refusal, in that and the succeeding year, to allow the St. Stanislaus society to commemorate, as it theretofore had done, one of the Polish national anniversaries in the hall of the parish. Plaintiffs, and those who sided with them, held they were entitled to vote for directors, have a voice in the management of the affairs of the church, the disposition of its funds, and, in short, have the board of directors elected by, and represent, the wishes of the majority of the congregation. These matters the pastor refused to concede, and the outcome of the controversy was the institution of the present suit in equity, wherein the plaintiffs allege, inter alia, they have been unlawfully excluded from the meetings of, and their rights in, the corporation, and from holding an election of officers and trustees; further allege all the defendants, except Father Stanowski, are ignorant, incompetent, and unfit to act as trustees, have turned over to the pastor the entire management of the affairs of the church and have been unduly influenced by him in all matters; that the parish school was formerly flourishing, but is now in a ruinous condition, and they have been deprived of the use of the church and buildings for corporate purposes; that they are remediless at law, and relievably only in a court of equity, and pray that each and every paragraph of the charter and by-laws be declared null and void; the board of directors be enjoined from further enforcing the by-laws, and conducting the business of the corporation according to them; from further acting as directors and trustees; that the court order a meeting of the members of the congregation, to be held to adopt suitable by-laws and elect proper officers; and for other and proper relief. Plaintiffs say they prosecute this suit in behalf of many members of the congregation who have contributed to the expense of prosecuting it, and all other members who have like interests and have elected to share in the benefits of the suit; it being alleged the dissident members are too numerous to be joined as plaintiffs, and, indeed, that some 1,200 or 1,300 out of a total membership of more than 1,600 are in sympathy with the plaintiffs and their cause. No misuse of the funds of the church, either fraudulently or carelessly was proved, and the grievances complained of finally come down to this contention: Plaintiffs are entitled to be recognized as members of the corporation, have a voice in making its by-laws, choosing its directors, and generally in governing the church. At the conclusion of the evidence the court below held plaintiffs were not members of the corporation; that the charter of the society transcended the provisions of the Constitution of the state, and hence plaintiffs were not entitled to be declared members, because the court would not decree a man should enter a corporation created in violation of the Constitution. Thereupon the bill was dismissed, and plaintiffs appealed.

As will be perceived from the stated facts, this controversy did not grow out of a schism over questions of faith, but out of dissensions regarding the temporal affairs of the parish, including the use of the buildings and the conduct of the parochial school. These disagreements finally developed in plaintiffs a consciousness of the sole grievance they ask to have redressed, namely, that they are excluded from participation in the government of the incorporated society. The evidence introduced by the parties was not directed toward proving the church economy of the Roman Catholic communion, but nevertheless this was revealed in large measure, and in our judgment must have much to do with the disposition of the appeal. The evidence indicates that the Franciscan Fathers settled the lots conveyed to Archbishop Kendrick in trust for the congregation of St. Stanislaus; and, if this is true, they cannot be diverted from the purposes of the trust. We do not mean they can never be sold or otherwise disposed of in any exigency, and their proceeds devoted to the trust, but simply that, like all other properties settled to specific charitable uses, and for a designated class of beneficiaries, they were to be applied according to the terms of the settlement, and, either in their original or some converted form, consecrated to the pious uses of the congregation of St. Stanislaus, no matter whether the title continued in the original trustee, Archbishop Kendrick, and his successors in the St. Louis diocese, or, as happened, was conveyed to an incorporated society. Atty. Gen. v. Pearson, 3 Mer. 352; Gram v. Society, 36 N. Y. 162; Schnorr's Appeal, 67 Pa. 138, 5 Am. Rep. 415; Venable v. Coffin, 2 W. Va. 310; Gibson v. Armstrong, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 481; Kynett, Laws Relig. Corp. 88.

Unless the contention of these plaintiffs that they and the other members of the congregation should have a voice in the control of the property is to prevail, the courts could not interfere with the trust, except to prevent a diversion of the property to other uses, or mismanagement and waste. These things would be done upon the solicitation of the proper parties, and in a proper proceeding; but who might sue, or in what forum, is not for inquiry on the present appeal, because no abuses of management were proved. Yet the extent of the relief plaintiffs could have obtained if the title to the property had remained in the archbishop of St. Louis ought to be remembered. They might have invoked the appropriate civil court to check maladministration, but could not have been awarded participation in the administration; could not have been made, in effect, co-trustees, at least, unless the laws and usages of the Roman Catholic denomination entitled them to participate; and the evidence tends to prove they do not. Hence, if the successive archbishops had handled the property discreetly, and for the purposes for which it was donated or acquired, the members of St. Stanislaus parish would have suffered no wrong of either legal or equitable cognizance. Therefore the question confronting us is whether the rights of said members were enlarged by incorporating; whether passing the title to a body politic, which Archbishop Kendrick, in order to acquire corporate advantages, caused to be organized under our statutes for the incorporation of religious societies, conferred on the members of the congregation membership in the corporation, with the concomitant privileges to adopt by-laws, elect directors, and share in controlling the temporalities of the parish. The correct decision of this question depends entirely on a sound interpretation of the pertinent statutes. This is true because incorporated religious societies are, in this state and nation, civil bodies politic, and unlike the ecclesiastical corporations of England, which are composed only of clericals, such as archbishops, deans, monks, and abbots, and amenable only to spiritual courts. Incorporated societies like the Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish, being civil institutions, are amenable to the ordinary courts of the state, and governed by the statutes under which they are organized, so far as statutory regulations are prescribed. 1 Blackst. 470; Robertson v. Bullions, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 64, 87; Id., 11 N. Y. 243; Fadness v. Braunborg, 73 Wis. 257, 41 N. W. 84; West Koshkonong v. Ottesen, 80 Wis. 62, 49 N. W. 24; Holm v. Holm, 81 Wis. 374, 51 N. W. 579; Spiritual, etc., Temple v. Vincent, 127 Wis. 93, 105 N. W. 1026; Wilson v. Livingston, 90 Mich. 594, 58 N. W. 646; Calkins v. Cheney, 92 Ill. 463.

To clear the way for the decision of the point of law more directly at issue, we will state first some propositions of indirect relevancy. The establishment of religious corporations, except to hold title to such real estate as may be prescribed for church edifices, parsonages, and cemeteries, is forbidden by the Constitution of the state. Const. 1875, art. 2, § 8 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 131); Lilly v. Tobbein, 103 Mo. 477, 488, 15 S. W. 613, 23 Am. St. Rep. 887. But the validity of the incorporation of a religious society cannot be drawn into question by a private suitor in a collateral proceeding. The appropriate remedy is by writ of quo warranto at the suit of the Attorney General, or perhaps a prosecuting attorney. Catholic Church v. Tobbein, 82 Mo. 418; St. George Church Soc. v. Branch, 120 Mo. 226, 243, 25 S. W. 218; Reorganized Church, etc., v. Church (C. C.) 60 Fed. 937; Dubs v. Egil, 167 Ill. 514, 47 N. E. 766. The by-laws of a corporation must be adopted by the members of the corporate body, and cannot be by the directors unless the charter or fundamental law so provides. Carroll v. Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 249; Sav. Inst. v. Nixon-Jones Printing Co., 25 Mo. App. 642; Albers v. Merch. Exch., 39 Mo. App. 583; Watson v. Printing Co., 56 Mo. App. 145; Trust, etc., Co. v. Lumber Co., 118 Mo. 447, 24 S. W. 129. And the directors of a corporation must be chosen by the members—that is, by the corporators—unless the latter have authorized some other mode of choice which the law will tolerate. Angell & Ames, Corporations (11th Ed.) c. 9, § 277. Our statutes say every religious corporation shall make by-laws for its government and support, and the management of its property, and shall provide how new members are to be admitted, and prescribe their qualifications, unless the charter does so. Rev. St. 1899, § 1403 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1106). The by-laws of the incorporated body denominated "Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish" were adopted by the six persons who signed the articles of agreement, and these by-laws authorized the appointment of directors by the archbishop of St. Louis. As the statutes left the adoption of by-laws to the members, if the six men who subscribed the articles of agreement composed the entire membership of the corporate body, they had power to enact by-laws, and to say how directors should be elected, inasmuch as no statutory method is prescribed. On the contrary, if all the communicants of the congregation of St. Stanislaus became members of the corporation by force of the statutes, and simultaneously with the act of incorporating, those members had the right to frame by-laws and fix the method of choosing directors. In the latter contingency no office of director has been created; for such an office is provided for only in the by-laws, and these were a nullity if enacted by but a remnant of the membership. We incline to the opinion that members of an incorporated religious society who are deprived of their privileges by usurpers may invoke the writ of injunction to redress the wrong, and cases in support of this practice will be cited; but, as our decision of the present cause is to rest on another ground than the form of procedure, it is unnecessary for us to treat of the latter. 1 Thompson, Priv. Corp. §§ 906, 911.

From what has been said it will be apparent that the decision must turn on whether all the members of the congregation were members of the corporation, or none were members of the latter body except the six country, following the New York Court of Appeals in the cases cited supra, have held that when a corporation is formed for religious purposes, every one who belongs to the congregation becomes, by force of the statutes, a member of the corporation, even though a few individuals are named in the charter as trustees or directors, and that document is issued to them. The pioneer opinion on the subject, which was the one delivered in Robertson v. Bullions held the majority of a congregation could control the secular affairs of the church, and even retain possession and enjoyment of the temporalities after abjuring the creed of the sect, against a minority which adhered to the creed. Otherwise stated, the effect of said decision and others like it, is this: A church or congregation by incorporating is constituted a civil political institution composed of the members of the congregation, and the sovereignty of the body, so to speak, vests in, and remains with, the majority, regardless of whether they adhere to the orthodox faith of the sect and continue in fellowship with its synods, presbyteries, or other governing bodies, or become heretical and recusant. It is believed all the statutes on which the courts pronounced in those cases made the members of the congregation corporators either by express words or reasonable implication, thereby excluding, as was thought, any different construction. Manifestly, under such a doctrine, the bare act of organizing a legal body to take title to real property, and attend to such business affairs as the law intrusts to corporations, might operate disastrously on the enjoyment of the property by the orthodox members of a congregation, if a schism arose and the dissenters were the more numerous, and might radically alter the mode of conducting secular affairs if no doctrinal disagreement occurred, and every one preferred the denominational mode.

In view of the general spirit of religious tolerance prevailing in this nation likely the Legislatures of the states where the statutes in question were enacted never intended such consequences which came to pass from a careless use of language, or, perchance, an extreme construction of the acts, as was said in Isham v. Trustees, 63 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 465. At all events, the original statute of the state of New York worked so badly as to induce changes whereby various religious denominations, with diverse forms of church government, were enabled to incorporate their separate churches, without necessarily making the members of the congregations corporators, or conferring control on the majority of the congregation, and thus it became possible to incorporate a cited chapter, which authorizes a Roman Catholic church to incorporate by a certificate executed and acknowledged by the archbishop and vicargeneral of the diocese, the rector of the parish, and two laymen chosen by those officials, and says these trustees shall constitute a self-perpetuating body. Distinct statutes were enacted for incorporating churches of the Presbyterian, Episcopal, Dutch Reformed, and perhaps other communions; the purpose being to provide for the creation of organic bodies in the different sects, and at the same time permit the internal economy of the churches to continue according to the usual methods, instead of arbitrarily superseding it. By this means all legal and business benefits to be derived from organizing under the statutes are afforded a congregation, without forcing it to submit to a form of control alien to the essential character of the communion, and out of harmony with its general usages.

The later statutes of New York were enacted around the year 1875, and it is of some significance that, beginning at the same time, changes suggestive of a similar purpose were made in our laws on the subject of religious societies, as will be shown infra. In Isham v. Trustees, contrary to the doctrine of the earlier cases, the court declared the majority of a congregation could not divert the temporalities from the objects to which they were originally devoted, and that the trustees were bound to hold them for the benefit of, and according to the rules, discipline, and usages of, the denomination, and in truth the statutes so provided. The change of legislative policy was commented on in First Reformed Church v. Bowden, 10 Abb. New Cas. (N. Y.) 3, where it was said that, prior to the new statutes, the courts paid no attention to the faith or usages of a denomination, and would not enforce any ecclesiastical law or rule of church government; that in at least one particular such bodies did not have the ordinary rights of a business company; for the courts would interfere to prevent a diversion of business assets, but not ecclesiastical assets. Still further construing the later laws, the New York Court of Appeals, in People's Bank v. Catholic Church, 109 N. Y. 512, 17 N. E. 408, said that under them the members of a congregation became, in a sense, members of the corporation; but nevertheless in an incorporated Roman Catholic Church, the trustees were invested with exclusive power to manage and control the corporation, and were self-perpetuating and independent of the congregation. Sometimes it will be very useful for churches to incorporate in order to transact their secular them the Roman Catholic, are of world-wide extent and vast membership, with congregations, parishes, and established hierarchies and councils in every land. For ages they have observed a uniform polity, not only in spiritual matters, but in the transaction of secular business and the management of their properties. To force upon them an unaccustomed economy would introduce confusion and embarrassment; whereas to refuse them corporate capacity, except on the condition of renouncing their customs, would be illiberal treatment by the state. The record indicates that in the Roman Catholic communion, the titles to church possessions are vested in the bishops and archbishops, who manage them, either directly or through the parish priests, and without participation by the congregation. A statutory alteration of the form of church government may not constitute interference with matters of faith, yet, nevertheless, the right of every religious sect to preserve the peculiar economy it prefers, and perhaps has obeyed immemorably, touches closely, if it is not part of, that religious freedom which American Constitutions guarantee. Const. Mo. 1875, art. 2, §§ 5, 6, 7 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 130, 131).

This truth was admirably set forth in the opinion of the Court of Appeals of South Carolina in the cognate case of Harmon v. Dreher, Speer's Eq. 87, 123, wherein, in answer to the argument that the congregation should govern, the court said, if it was the case of a Congregational church, this might be true, because, if the congregation had been so incorporated, it would be according to the very terms of the association that the majority should govern. "But if the incorporation of the church as a Lutheran church imports what has been stated in evidence, it would be a breach of all liberty, as well as of faith, that the majority should impose a new contract upon the minority. Suppose a majority should next year spring up in favor of the Roman Catholic or Mohammedan religion, and introduce auricular confession and indulgences, or the Koran, into this congregation, would not these defendants, however small a minority they might form, see and feel that their liberties were trampled on, by so gross a violation of the contract of association contained in their charter? The truth is that liberty is violated wherever contracts are infringed, as much where the infringement consists in the provision of a charter as where a majority of mercantile copartners choose to make their will, and not their articles, the rule of their conduct; as much where the charter is to a religious body as where it is to a civil corporation." It would be tyrannical to such a course is required in order to safeguard some paramount policy of the state; and we do not see that the weal of the public in this commonwealth would be threatened by tolerating different kinds of church government any more than it is by tolerating different creeds and devotional rites. Moreover, the property conveyed by the Franciscan Fathers was granted by an order of the Roman Catholic Church to a high prelate of said church, in trust for one of its congregations, and, as we may reasonably presume, in the expectation it would be held and administered according to Roman Catholic usages. The evidence proves there is a graded hierarchy in the Catholic Church, extending from the priests of parishes through bishops and archbishops, to the Roman See; and, as said, the higher clericals, and not the congregation, hold title to and manage temporalities.

The courts of the country have been called on often to adjudicate property rights in consequence of divisions in churches and sects, and have expounded the principles of law which ought to govern these rights with learning, wisdom, and serious concern to promote perfect freedom, not only of conscience and creed, but of denominational usages. We cannot review the judgments of eminent tribunals in cases cited infra where these questions were considered, but will state what we think is the principle pertinent to the point in present controversy, and deducible from them, looking with more care into the two or three decisions which are most germane. The principle is this: When a church has been incorporated, the regulations and customs of the communion to which it belongs regarding the disposition of secular business will be respected by the courts as far as possible; and, if the mode of government in force in the denomination at large is not by congregations, but by superior clerical personages, assemblies, synods, councils, or consistories, the authority of these will not be displaced if it can be upheld consistently with the laws of the sovereignty. In Prickett v. Wells, 117 Mo. 502, 505, 24 S. W. 52, 53, our Supreme Court said: "The people of that society (Christian Church) in the exercise of their religious liberty, had the undoubted right to adopt rules for their own church government, if not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the land. In adjusting their respective claims to the use of the church property, as between themselves, the civil courts will give effect to those rules, subject to the qualification just adverted to." That language was copied with approval in Russle v. Brazzell, 128 Mo. 93, 112, 30 S. W. 526, 49 Am. St. Rep. 542, and both cases were controversies over church property. In passing on a similar controversy in an incorporated Presbyterian church, a sect governed by graded assemblies, and not by congregations, the Supreme Court of the United States decided the property was held by the trustees according to the constitution, usages, and laws of the Presbyterian communion. Watson v. Jones, 80 U. S. 679, 720, 20 L. Ed. 668. It will be seen, in the report of the decision of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in the same case (2 Bush [Ky.] 382), that land had been conveyed to three persons and their successors, to be chosen by the congregation, in trust for the Third Presbyterian Church of Louisville. The congregation split into two factions over the question of slavery, and the General Assembly of the denomination ordered an election by the congregation of four additional trustees, plainly to give control of the property to the faction favored by the General Assembly. Said faction elected the new trustees, and the question was whether they were entitled to act. The judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States in their favor was contrary to the judgment of the state Court of Appeals, and its ultimate effect was to award control of the property of the church to the General Assembly, instead of leaving it with the congregation, on the ground that the former body was supreme by the laws of the denomination. The same principle was applied in passing on nearly the identical point, by our Supreme Court in State ex rel. v. Farris, 45 Mo. 183. That controversy was over the right of certain persons to act as trustees of Lindenwood College. Those persons had been elected trustees by the St. Louis Presbytery, and this was according to the charter of the college granted by the Legislature. But prior to their election the St. Louis Presbytery had been cut off from the denomination by a resolution of its General Assembly. The Supreme Court held this fact invalidated the election, because under the usages and laws of the denomination the Assembly possessed "the unlimited control of superintending the concerns of the whole church and of suppressing schismatical contentions and disputations." The general rule is in accordance with those decisions, and is followed most frequently under these circumstances: A schism occurs in some congregation over a tenet of faith, and two factions claim the church property, whereupon it will be awarded to the one which adheres to the original doctrines of the church; and the decisions of the church judicatories as to what these doctrines are will be accepted by the civil courts, when such judicatories exist and have authority to decide. The civil courts are concerned with points of faith only when they must be ascertained in order to know where the property belongs.

In Harmon v. Dreher, supra, the controversy was over the power of a dissident

Lutheran congregation, which had been incorporated, to employ a certain pastor and control the property of the church as against the decree of the synod, and the claim of the congregation was rejected. In Gibson v. Armstrong, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 481, 491, there was a factional struggle over a church house of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, the government of which is by a General Conference, and the court said: "It is, in fact, the local society worshipping at the place that is entitled to the use, and individuals are entitled only as members of, and in subordination to the society, to which in its organized form and in subjection to the rules and discipline and general legislation of the church of which itself is a part belong the immediate use and control of the local premises. Any dispute between individuals and the society in regard to the fact of membership, or the rights pertaining to that relation, must present an ecclesiastical question, of which the decision by the tribunals of the church would, in general, be regarded as final by the civil power." Other cases which accept the proposition we have quoted are Shannon v. Frost, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 263; Den v. Bolton, 12 N. J. Law, 206; Den v. Pilling, 24 N. J. Law, 653, 657; German Refd. Church v. Seibert, 3 Pa. 291; Pulis v. Iserman, 71 N. J. Law, 408, 58 Atl. 554; Duessel v. Proch, 78 Conn. 343, 62 Atl. 152, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 854; Ferraria v. Vasconcellos, 31 Ill. 25; Schradi v. Dornfeld, 52 Minn. 465, 55 N. W. 49; Andrews v. Andrews, 110 Ill. 223; Christian Church v. Church of Christ, 219 Ill. 503, 76 N. E. 703. Our present interest in those opinions has no relation to schismatical dissensions, but is with the underlying principle of the judgments that deference will be accorded, when possible, to the established tribunals and settled usages of a denomination, not only in matters of doctrine, but of church government; and certainly the principle ought to apply in a case like this, where there has been no attempt to deprive any member of the congregation of the enjoyment of its property, and the question goes only to who shall administer the trust. Hence Watson v. Garvin, 54 Mo. 353, whatever was the exact point therein decided, is not apposite.

The foregoing examination of the adjudged cases, and reflections upon them, have been indulged rather because they suggest the spirit in which we should approach the interpretation of our statutes for the incorporation of religious bodies, which is the main task before us, than because they make manifest what the true interpretation is. We should adopt, if we can, such a view of the law as will permit religious bodies to be incorporated, and yet preserve their original form of church government, instead of revolutionizing it from a hierarchial or synodical into a congregational form; and we ask whether our statutes can be so construed without doing violence to their language and intention. At this point the course of constitutional and legislative enactments on the subject becomes important, as pointing to an alteration in the policy of the state. The Constitution of 1865 declared no religious corporation could be established in this state, except that by a general and uniform law any religious society might become a body corporate for the sole purpose of acquiring, holding, using, and disposing of such land as might be required for a house of public worship, chapel, etc., "and contracting in relation to such land and the buildings thereon through a board of trustees selected by themselves." Article 1, § 12. The Constitution of 1875 declared: "No religious corporation can be established in this state except such as may be created under the general law for the purpose of holding title to real estate for church edifices," etc. Article 2, § 8 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 131). This Constitution, unlike that of 1865, says nothing about the management of the properties of an incorporated religious society by a board of trustees "selected by themselves." Hence, whereas the former required the board of trustees to be selected by members of the society or congregation, the second required nothing of the kind, but left the matter open to legislative regulation; and, if no statutory rule was imposed, then presumably to the laws and usages of the denomination. Turning to the legislation under the Constitution of 1865, we find the first statute enacted did not, in express terms, empower religious societies to organize under it, but allowed any association of persons desirous of becoming incorporated for benevolent or charitable purposes to present to the circuit court, or judge in vacation, a copy of the articles of agreement of the association, and a list of all their members, together with a petition for a certificate of incorporation. 1 Wag. St. c. 37, art. 8, § 2. Whether a church might have organized under that article was never determined; for the first case which occurred regarding a church corporation and who composed it fell under the amending act of 1872 (Laws 1871-72, p. 16), which provided specifically for the formation of religious bodies politic, and empowered any number of persons not less than three to become an incorporated church, religious society, or congregation, by complying with the provisions of said article 8, save that it declared, if the petition was signed by all the persons making the application, this would be sufficient, and that "when so incorporated such persons and their associates and successors" should be known by the name specified in the certificate, and be entitled to all the privileges and powers conferred by the Constitution of the state on such bodies. 1 Wag. St. p. 340, c. 37, art. 8, § 5; Sess. Acts 1871-72, p. 16. The amendment related only to religious societies, and involved two noticeable variations from the prior provisions of the article regarding the organization of such associations as were previously either enumerated or implied by its language. The variations were that no list of members of the congregation was required in connection with the petition for incorporation, and the persons who applied for the charter, and their associates and successors, were to constitute the body politic. It is unlikely the article was passed because it was deemed impossible for religious societies to incorporate under the article as it stood; for said article, as well as the amendatory act of March 5, 1868 (Laws 1868, p. 28), and chapter 70 of the General Statutes of 1865, all purported in their captions to relate to the incorporation of "Benevolent, Religious and Educational Associations," thus fairly implying that a religious association might organize under the provisions. More probably the purpose was to evade the necessity of appending a list of members of a congregation to the petition for a certificate, and especially to evade taking them into the incorporated body. Whether the act was passed from this motive or not, it certainly attempted to dispense with those requirements, and the reason for the attempt is clear. It must be inconvenient, if not mischievous, to include all the communicants of a congregation in an organic body.

We have dwelt on the injustice of requiring a change of church polity as the condition of corporate existence, and it is to be considered that religious assemblies, unlike most nonmercenary associations, usually contain children who are unfit to share in the government of a corporation, far more so than they are to sign the petition for a certificate, and their incapacity to do this was remarked in North St. Louis, etc., Church v. McGowan, 62 Mo. 279, 287. Nevertheless, the Supreme Court in said case frustrated the purpose of the amendment by construing it in connection with section 2 of the act of 1868 (1 Wag. St. c. 37, art. 8, § 1), and holding that, by force of the latter section, the law continued to confer membership in the corporation on every member of the congregation. The statutes thus construed must have worked unsatisfactorily; for in the Revision of 1879, and after the announcement of the decision in North St. Louis, etc., Church v. McGowan, radical alterations were made in the law, and we note the omission to require a list of the members of the association out of which the corporation arises. The present statutes say "any number of persons, not less than three, who shall have associated themselves by articles of agreement in writing, as a society, company, association or organization formed for benevolent, religious, scientific, fraternal-beneficial or educational purposes, may be consolidated and united into a corporation. Such articles of agreement may be organic regulations, or a constitution, or other form of association." Rev. St. 1879, § 970 (Rev. St. 1899, § 1394, art. 11, c. 12 [Ann. St. 1906, p. 1103]). The next section provides the method of incorporating, which is for the president, secretary, and treasurer, or other chief officers, to submit articles of agreement with a petition praying for a pro forma decree. As soon as the decree is granted, the Secretary of State must issue a certified copy of the articles of agreement and the appended certificates, and "thereupon the petitioners, their associates and successors shall be created and be a body politic." From that language we understand the constituents of the corporation are the petitioners, such persons as they shall associate with them, and their successors. In section 1397 of the present Revised Statutes of 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1105), the classes of associations which may be organized under the article are enumerated, and include "any association, congregation, society or church organization formed for religious purposes." This section would permit an entire congregation to incorporate, but does not require it to do so, though we think, if the form of church government was congregational, the law would compel the reception of every communicant, or at least every one of adult years, into the corporate body organized to control the policy and property of the church to which they belonged. Section 1400 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1106) says a body politic may be formed under the article to execute a trust, the purpose of which is within its purview, and to take title to any property, real or personal, for the purposes of such trust. By virtue of this section corporations may be formed, as the one under examination was, to execute trusts of property settled to the uses of churches and benevolent societies; and it looks improbable that the Legislature contemplated the necessity of admitting children to share in such a responsibility. The more reasonable view is that no inflexible methods of constituting membership and regulating the economy of the several species of corporations authorized by the article were prescribed, but the intention was for these matters to depend largely on the various purposes of the organized bodies, the duties they were to perform, and the character of the voluntary associations out of which they would spring. Sometimes it will be proper or necessary for all the members of such assemblies to be united in the organic body, and sometimes this will be unnecessary, or, perhaps, impossible. The language employed in the several sections of the article is nowhere definite regarding who shall compose said body; but, so far as this is implied, the implication seems to be that the subscribers to the articles of agreement, and such persons as they may associate with them, shall be the incorporators. It is certain no enumeration of the members of the congregation or other voluntary assembly is required, nor do we find any words which signify they shall be constituents of the corporation; and it was such a requirement that induced the Supreme Court, in construing the act of 1872, to hold the entire congregation composed the corporation. The constitutional and statutory alterations we have pointed out were not accidental, but purposive, and were made to give effect to a different policy from what had formerly prevailed. In our opinion the object was to endow religious societies and churches with corporate franchises and powers without sacrificing their established polity. We so conclude, mainly for two reasons: The act of 1872, which initiated the departure in legislation, referred only to those associations, plainly sought to eliminate the necessity of submitting to majority rule in every instance, and, when this purpose miscarried, other alterations in the law were made to realize it.

We hold the plaintiffs were neither members of the incorporated body known as "Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish," nor entitled to a decree to confer membership on them. Hence the judgment will be affirmed. All concur.

CRAMER v. BARMON.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 3, 1909.)

1. MALICIOUS PROSECUTION (§ 64*)—WANT OF PROBABLE CAUSE—EVIDENCE.

In an action for malicious prosecution, it is not necessary to show by direct testimony that defendant did not believe plaintiff guilty of the crime charged, or that false testimony was sought and procured, but it is sufficient to establish the facts by indirect evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. § 151; Dec. Dig. § 64.*]

2. MALICIOUS PROSECUTION (§ 67*)—DAMAGES—MENTAL SUFFERING.

One suing for malicious prosecution may recover for the mental distress suffered during the continuance of the criminal case obtained at his request to enable him to prepare his defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. § 155; Dec. Dig. § 67.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Jackson County; John G. Park, Judge.

Action by Jacob Cramer against William Barmon. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

See, also, 126 Mo. App. 54, 103 S. W. 1086.

Ringolsky & White, for appellant. Leon Block and Frank P. Sebree, for respondent.

ELLISON, J. This action is for malicious prosecution on a charge of receiving stolen goods, in which plaintiff recovered judgment in the trial court. It appears that the parties each owned a clothing store in the north part of Kansas City, Mo.; that they were formerly friends of the same nationality. This is the second appeal of the case. The first is reported in 126 Mo. App. 54, 103 S.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

W. 1086, to which we refer for a full history of the matters leading up to the institution of the action and upon which it is founded. The second trial, as did the first, resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff. The principal objections urged against the judgment in a general way amount to an attack upon the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict.

Objections are particularized in criticism of an instruction given by the court of its own motion, submitting the hypothesis of defendant having prosecuted plaintiff without believing him to be guilty, or by false and fraudulent evidence. It is claimed that there is no evidence that defendant did not believe him guilty, or that false testimony was sought and procured. This claim is argued as though there should be direct or affirmative testimony which in express terms showed those things. It is, of course, not necessary that such should be the character of the evidence. It is sufficient if the evidence be of such nature that reasonable inference would lead to a conclusion that those things were true; and of this character of proof there was an abundance. Defendant was an active prosecutor of the charge against plaintiff from the beginning, and many circumstances and incidents developed in the evidence which justified giving the instruction. Among other circumstances it was shown, and since the verdict was for plaintiff we must assume was truly shown, that defendant offered to settle the matter if plaintiff would pay him $500, and that he stated he did not wish to prosecute the man who stole the goods, but merely to hold him as a menace to plaintiff.

On July 10, 1899, plaintiff appeared in the criminal court, and that court of its own motion continued the case to the October term "for want of time to try the same." At the October term the state appeared by the prosecuting attorney, and the plaintiff (defendant there) applied for and obtained a continuance (cause not stated in the record) until the January term following, when the case was dismissed. At the trial of the case at bar plaintiff was asked, over defendant's objection, the following question: "Were you worried about this case?" He answered: "I am pretty near played out all my life since the first time in the beginning when they took me to jail." The objection was that as the state was ready for trial, and the continuance, at least from October to January, was at plaintiff's request, he should not be allowed damage for his mental distress, etc., during that period. The objection is not well taken. It would be unjust and unreasonable to permit one to escape a part of his liability from the fact that his unlawful and malicious conduct extended over a space of time it would not have covered had the party wrongfully accused not procured a continuance. Presumably a continuance granted at his request was that he might become prepared to resist the false accusation. The damage accruing during such period would certainly be the proximate result of the wrongdoer's conduct.

In our opinion there is no sufficient cause for disturbing the judgment; and it is affirmed. All concur.

WILLIAMS v. CITY OF ST. JOSEPH.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.

May 3, 1900.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 222*)—RESERVATION OF GROUNDS OF REVIEW—EXCEPTIONS TO RULINGS ON MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

Where a motion for new trial is overruled, and no objections taken or exceptions saved, the appellate court cannot pass upon matters of exception during the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 1333; Dec. Dig. § 222.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Buchanan County; W. D. Rusk, Special Judge.

Action by Anna M. Williams against the City of St. Joseph. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

W. B. Norris and O. E. Shultz, for appellant. James W. Boyd, for respondent.

ELLISON, J. This action was brought against the defendant city for damages alleged to have been caused to plaintiff's property. The judgment in the trial court was for the plaintiff in the sum of $200, and defendant appealed.

The defendant's motion for new trial was overruled, and it acquiesced therein, since it did not object and except. In such circumstances we cannot pass upon the matters of exception during the trial; and, as there does not appear to be any error in the record proper, the judgment will be affirmed. All concur.

JONES v. WHITNEY et al.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.

May 3, 1900.)

PLEADING (§ 248*)—AMENDMENT OF COMPLAINT—DIFFERENT CAUSE OF ACTION.

Rev. St. 1890, § 3431 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1969), makes a stakeholder liable to every party placing money in his hands, provided a demand is made for the return previous to the expiration of the time agreed on for the determination of the wager; and section 3432 provides that actions for the recovery of money placed in the hands of a stakeholder shall be brought within three months from the time the right of action accrues. A petition in an action to recover money wagered on a foot race based the right to recover on the ground that defendants conspired together to steal plaintiff's money, and was brought against the stakeholder and others, and, after the expiration of the time for bringing the action had elapsed under section 3432, plaintiff by an amended petition sought to recover on the ground that he lost his money on covery under such amended petition against the stakeholder and the other defendants.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Dec. Dig. § 248.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Buchanan County; Henry M. Ramey, Judge.

Action by John C. Jones against J. M. Whitney and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed and remanded.

Mytton & Parkinson, for appellants. Duncan & Utz, for respondent.

BROADDUS, P. J. The plaintiff sues to recover money wagered on a foot race. On the 23d day of July, 1908, the plaintiff laid a wager with defendant Scott on the result of a foot race to be made between Ray Leach and A. Sportsman. There were articles of agreement for the race by defendant Scott and by plaintiff under the name of J. Smith, as principals, and A. Sportsman and Ray Leach under the name of Lew Woodruff, as the runners. Altogether $1,840 was wagered, as follows: $920 by defendant Scott, and $920 by plaintiff, $200 of which plaintiff obtained from defendant S. Q. Brown, who was the stakeholder. A 100 yards' distance was measured off, and at the report of a pistol the race started. From this time on there is a great deal of conflict in the evidence. On the part of plaintiff the evidence tends to show that, before the race was finished, defendant Scott drew a pistol, and, when near the finish, thrust it in the face of Sportsman, who was in the lead, and threatened to kill him, which caused Sportsman to dodge and fall, and in so doing he tripped and threw the other runner; that Scott met Brown some distance back from the place of finish, and immediately demanded the money, at the same time threatening and flourishing his pistol; that plaintiff objected to the money being given to him, on the ground that there was no decision of the judges as yet, and that the race was unfair; that defendant Brown appeared to be intimidated and delivered the money to Scott and all three defendants went away together; that afterwards on the same day the three were arrested while eating their dinner together and taken to the police department of the city of St. Joseph, where, upon being searched, it was found that Scott had upon his person $1,094.35, Whitney $204.20, and Brown $420.05, making a total of $1,808.60, or less in amount $31.40 than the amount wagered. The defendants' evidence, on the contrary, is radically different. It tends to show that, when the runners had got within about 10 or 12 feet from the finish, Sportsman fell down, and came across the line," which he proceeded to do. And the evidence was also conflicting whether or not the judges had decided the race when plaintiff called the race off and demanded his money. But there was no dispute that all three defendants left the place together, and that they were arrested while still in company. The next day plaintiff commenced suit and sued out a writ of attachment. Before the case was submitted to the jury, the plaintiff filed an amended petition as follows: "Plaintiff, for cause of action, says that on or about the 23d day of July, 1908, in Buchanan county, Mo., he entered into a wager with defendant Doc Scott and deposited the sum of $720 in the hands of defendant S. Q. Brown, who was to act as stakeholder, and delivered said money with certain other money to said Brown, which said Brown was to hold pursuant to a wager upon the outcome of a foot race between Albert Sportsman and Ray Leach; that, previous to the time of the posting of said money, defendants entered into a conspiracy whereby they were to get plaintiff's money into the hands of said defendant Brown and abscond with it; that plaintiff was wagering upon the success of Sportsman and defendant Doc Scott upon the success of Ray Leach; that, while said race was in progress and said Sportsman within a few feet of the goal, and leading, defendant Doc Scott drew a revolver and presented it in the face of said Sportsman, causing him to stop under threat of being killed; that at the same time said Scott presented his revolver at defendant Brown, the stakeholder, and demanded that said Brown turn over the stake money to said Scott, which said Brown then and there did, and before any decision by the judges as to the termination of said race, and over plaintiff's protest, and then in accordance with their previous understanding all of the defendants divided plaintiff's money among themselves, and by means of said wager deprived plaintiff of the said sum of $720." The judgment was for the plaintiff, from which defendants appealed.

The court tried the case upon the theory that the action was based upon section 3431, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1969), which reads as follows: "Every stakeholder who shall knowingly receive any money or property, staked upon any betting declared gaming by the foregoing provisions, shall be liable to the party who placed such money or property in his hands, both before and after the determination of such bet; and the delivery of the money or property to the winner shall be no defense to any action brought by the losing party for the recovery

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

vious to the expiration of the time agreed upon by the parties for the determination of the bet or wager." Section 3432, Id., provides that actions of this character shall be brought within three months from the time the right of action accrued. The amended petition was not filed within the time provided by the statute, and defendants contend that, as the amended petition states an entirely different cause of action from that stated in the original petition, the plaintiff's cause of action was barred. Consequently he was not entitled to recover on his amended petition. The defendants objected to the amendment at the time for the reason that it was the substitution of a new cause of action, and, as such, was barred by the statute. The objection was overruled. The defendant by way of instruction which was refused raised the question of the right of the plaintiff to recover on his amended petition for the same reasons.

If the amended petition was a substitution of a new cause of action, the court erred in permitting a recovery on that ground. The plaintiff in his original petition bases his right to recover on the ground that defendants conspired together to steal his money, whereas the amended petition seeks a recovery upon the ground that plaintiff lost his money on a wager on the result of a foot race, and that he demanded his money from the stakeholder before the expiration of the time agreed upon by the parties for the determination of the bet or wager; and the recovery was not only against the stakeholder, Brown, but also against defendants Scott and Whitney. The original petition states a common-law action for conspiracy; the amended petition a cause of action provided by the statute. It was an entire departure from, or the substitution of, one cause of action for another, which is not permissible. The plaintiff, as stated, recovered, not only against the stakeholder as provided by the statute, but also against the other defendant, thus recovering under the allegations of both the original and amended petition. This was a glaring error.

The cause is reversed and remanded. All concur.

CLINKSCALES v. CLARK.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 8, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 17, 1909.)

1. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 79*)—FRAUD OF AGENT.

In an action against an alleged agent for damages through deceit in the sale of land, plaintiff held entitled to go to the jury on the questions of the existence of a confidential rela-

2. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 71*)—FRAUD OF AGENT—DEFENSES.

Where defendant, plaintiff's agent for the purchase of land, fraudulently induced plaintiff to pay a certain price therefor, defendant receiving an increased commission from the vendor, that the land was worth all plaintiff paid for it was no defense to an action for the deceit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Dec. Dig. § 71.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Carroll County; John P. Butler, Judge.

Action by F. W. Clinkscales against L. G. Clark. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

J. S. Crawford, Busby & Busby, and Jones & Conkling, for appellant. Lozier, Morris & Atwood, for respondent.

JOHNSON, J. This is a suit for damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff from the fraud and deceit of defendant practiced during the existence of a confidential relation between the parties. Defendant denies in his answer that he acted with reference to the subject of the controversy as the fiduciary of plaintiff, and alleges that the money obtained, which plaintiff now seeks to recover, was paid him as a commission for services he rendered as agent for the owner of land purchased by plaintiff; in other words, that he was the agent of the vendor of the land, not the agent of plaintiff, the vendee. Trial to a jury resulted in a verdict and judgment for plaintiff in the amount demanded, and defendant appealed.

The most important question for our solution (raised by the demurrer to the evidence) is whether or not the evidence most favorable to plaintiff tends to show that defendant, while acting as the fiduciary of plaintiff, abused his trust to his own advantage and to the damage of plaintiff. Material facts adduced by plaintiff are as follows: The parties both lived in Carrollton, and had been acquainted intimately for about 15 years. Plaintiff was a clerk in a bank and had some money. Defendant was a merchant. In the latter part of the year 1905 defendant made several trips to Texas, and bought three sections of land there. He was contemplating another visit to that state when he met plaintiff and engaged in conversation with him, the substance of which is thus stated by plaintiff: "I met Mr. Clark in the courthouse down in the basement here one day, and he got to talking about his Texas lands down there, and I asked him about them. He had been buying some lands, and I asked him about the country, what he thought about it. He was telling what a good country it was, and what a good soil it had there, and what he thought about the chance of investment, and he remarked to me at the time that he would like for me to go down there with him some time, and I asked him when he was going down. He said he would go down on the next excursion, he thought, and would like for me to go with him. At that time I wasn't in the bank, and I could arrange to go very well, and I told him I thought I would go with him, and he told me he would give me any benefit or judgment he had on the land, quality and so on, and that he knew about the valuation of it and he would practically know just about what I was paying, what the land was worth, and he would give me the benefit of that knowledge that he had." Pursuant to this conversation, plaintiff and defendant made a trip to Texas in February, 1906, to purchase land. Defendant knew of four sections containing 2,500 acres which a man named Webb owned and had placed in the hands of a firm of Texas real estate agents for sale, agreeing to give them a commission of 5 per cent. of the proceeds of a sale effected by them. The agents were instructed to sell the land in a body for \$8.50 per acre, and in their negotiations with defendant agreed to give him half of their commission if he effected a sale for them. Defendant communicated this offer to plaintiff, and agreed to give plaintiff one-half of the commission paid to him if plaintiff would join him in the purchase of the four sections. He proposed that plaintiff take three of the sections, that he would take the one remaining, and that plaintiff might make his own selection. One of the sections, known as the "home place," was better improved and more valuable than any of the others. Its position in the tract was such that it had to be included in the three selected by plaintiff if he would have all the land selected by him in one body. Accordingly, when he accepted the proposal of defendant, he included the "home place" in his selection. At first, plaintiff was informed that the price of all the land was \$8.50 per acre, but before the sale was closed defendant had an interview with Webb in which he suggested that the home section be priced at \$9.50 per acre—an advance of \$640 for the section—that the price on the three remaining sections remain at \$8.50 per acre, and that the advance on the home section be paid to defendant as an additional commission. Webb and his agents accepted this proposition, and the inference that they agreed to keep the arrangement secret from plaintiff is supported by facts and circumstances in the record. When the parties met to close the sale, plaintiff stated that he understood the price was \$8.50 per acre for the entire tract. Defendant told him he was mistaken, that the price on the home section was \$9.50 per acre, and appealed to Webb to confirm the statement. Webb did confirm it, but in somewhat ambiguous language. In the course of the conversation plaintiff expressed his confidence in the honesty of defendant and his reliance on him, and, satisfied that he was being fairly treated by his friend, entered into a written contract with Webb for the purchase of three sections, including the home place at the price above stated. At the same time defendant contracted with Webb for the other section at \$8.50 per acre. Afterward plaintiff carried out the terms of the contract, paid for the land as agreed, and received a deed from Webb. Defendant likewise performed his contract with Webb and received his deed. When Webb settled with his Texas agents, he paid as commission \$1,088, which was 5 per cent. of the proceeds of all the land at \$8.50 per acre. He would not pay commission on the \$640, the amount of the rise in price on the home section. Defendant was at Carrollton when he received his half of this commission. The draft sent him was \$560, which represented $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the proceeds of the sale, figuring the price of the home section at \$9.50 per acre. He exhibited this draft to plaintiff, and divided its proceeds with him. Defendant also received at Carrollton a draft for \$600, the amount due him from Webb on account of his secret commission. He explains that the other \$40 of this commission had been paid to him previously. He took pains to conceal from plaintiff knowledge of the fact that he had received the last-mentioned draft. A railroad agent at Carrollton cashed it for him, and, at his request, refrained from "putting it through" any bank in Carrollton. The man to whom the railroad agent gave the draft endeavored unsuccessfully to cash it at Kansas City, and finally succeeded in cashing it at Bosworth. When plaintiff learned that defendant had received a secret commission of \$640, and that he (plaintiff) had paid it in the guise of a fictitious rise in the price of the home section, he demanded of defendant the restoration of the money, and, the demand being refused, brought this suit to recover the money.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes.

The above is a condensed statement of the facts most favorable to the cause of action asserted. Defendant admits receiving a commission of $640 in addition to that paid him by the Texas agents, and admits that Webb did raise the price on the home section that amount. He denies that he caused the advance to be made by Webb, but we venture the assertion that no one can read his testimony without becoming convinced that the advance was made solely for the purpose of giving him a secret profit of $640 to be paid by plaintiff. Though with apparent fairness and generosity he offered plaintiff the option of selecting any three of the four sections, he anticipated that plaintiff would take the home section. Two potent reasons support this conclusion. No reasonable person in plaintiff's situation would have his land in two separate tracts when he could have it in one compact body, and defendant would derive no advantage from a secret commission and escape liability on the following grounds: First. He says that he was not in a position that charged him with the performance of any fiduciary duty to plaintiff; that he was the agent of Webb, the vendor; that this fact was known to plaintiff, and therefore that plaintiff knew and acted as though he knew that he must deal at arm's length with defendant as well as with Webb, the vendor. Consequently defendant assumes that he had a right to contract with his principal for an additional commission to be paid out of an advance in the price of the land bought by plaintiff and to keep knowledge of that fact from plaintiff, since the amount of his compensation and the manner of its payment concerned only him and his principal, and were none of plaintiff's business. Second. He contends that the home section was actually worth more than plaintiff paid for it, and that, as plaintiff sustained no actual damage, he has no cause of action, though it be found that he was deceived by false statements of defendant into paying more for that section than the owner was willing to accept for it.

In this connection, complaint is made of the refusal of the trial court to permit defendant to introduce evidence to show that the value of the home section equaled, and, in fact, exceeded, the price plaintiff paid. We shall dispose of these propositions in the order of their statement. That defendant placed himself in a fiduciary relation to plaintiff is a fair and reasonable inference from all of the facts and circumstances in evidence in the voluminous record before us, many of which we have deemed it unnecessary to state. The parties were neighbors and close friends. Defendant had bought Texas lands and was familiar with their quality and values. Plaintiff had no knowledge of the subject. Certainly defendant took pains to impress plaintiff with the conviction that he would give plaintiff the full benefit of his knowledge, judgment, and friendship if plaintiff would join him in the purchase of a tract of land which was too large for him to purchase alone. He assured plaintiff, in effect, that he would make no profit at plaintiff's expense, and his offer to divide with plaintiff what he expected to receive from the Texas agents is a strong indication of such assurance. The fact that defendant was to receive a part of the agent's commission by no means conclusively supports his contention that he was Webb's, and not plaintiff's, agent. It is compatible with the belief which obviously defendant sought to inculcate in the mind of plaintiff that he stood in the relation to Webb of a prospective buyer of the land, and that the proposal by Webb's agents to divide their commission was made to induce a sale to defendant and plaintiff, land defendant was the agent of plaintiff, and, as such, had no right to make a secret profit out of the transaction. His clever attempts to conceal important facts from the knowledge of plaintiff were most self-incriminatory, and demonstrate that he knew he was violating a duty he owed his associate. If this were not so, what was the necessity for having the Texas agents send him a draft for $560 as his half of their commission when his half amounted only to $544? Obviously, he did not want plaintiff to know that his commission on the home section had been figured and paid on the basis of $8.50 per acre, and not $9.50, the price paid by plaintiff. To carry out this deception, defendant was willing to pay plaintiff $8 more on this account than plaintiff was entitled to receive. Again, if defendant thought it was none of plaintiff's concern that he was paid an extra commission, why go to such elaborate pains to have the draft received in payment of that commission cashed outside of Carrollton? Consciousness of wrongdoing must have been the impelling motive, since ordinarily men do not exhibit such excessive secretiveness in the absence of a real cause for concealment. Plaintiff was entitled to go to the jury on the questions of the existence of a confidential relation between him and defendant and of the fraudulent breach by defendant of one of the duties of that relation.

What we have said answers defendant's second proposition. We are not dealing here with a question of deceit practiced by a vendor on a vendee, as was the case in Thompson v. Newell, 118 Mo. App. 405, 94 S. W. 557, greatly relied on by defendant, but with a question of deceit practiced by an agent on his principal. It is immaterial that the land bought by plaintiff was worth all he paid for it. He was entitled to fair treatment at the hands of his agent and a full disclosure of all the terms of the agreement made for his benefit. It is elementary that an agent has no right to derive any secret profit or advantage at the expense of his principal, but must give his principal the full benefit of the bargain he makes. The demurrer to the evidence was properly overruled, and it was not error for the court to reject evidence of the actual value of the land.

Objections to the instructions have been sufficiently considered in what we have said. On the whole, we find the instructions placed a heavier burden on plaintiff than he was compelled by the law of the case to bear, but they are free from error prejudicial to defendant. As far as defendant is concerned, the case was fairly tried, and manifestly the judgment is for the right party.

Accordingly it is affirmed. All concur.

that the judgment was sufficient to show eviction, but that it still remained for "plaintiff to show that the title under which he was ousted was paramount to that of his grantor"; but such would not be the rule where suit was instituted at the instigation of the defendant, wherein he is as much bound by the judgment as if he were the nominal party, he being in fact the real party to the proceedings. Koontz v. Kaufman, 81 Mo. App. 397. The suit was to test his right and paramount title to the land. The finding and judgment therefore were, in effect, that the title of the defendants in that proceeding was paramount to that of the defendant herein.

There was some confusion in the manner in which the evidence was introduced as to the value of the land in question, which can be avoided at another trial, as the cause will have to be reversed for an error in an instruction given for plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs' instruction No. 1 reads as follows: "The court instructs the jury that, if you find for the plaintiffs, you will find for such part of the purchase price of the whole tract in question as the value of the part lost by plaintiffs bears to the whole tract, taking into consideration the value of the whole tract, the value of the part lost, and the value of the part retained by plaintiffs without the part lost, together with 6 per cent. interest on the sum found from the date of the payment of the purchase price, and for the court costs," etc. The chief objection to the instruction is that it does not limit values to the time of the date of the deed in question, and the instruction should also be confined to the market value.

We believe that instruction No. 2 given for plaintiffs worked no prejudice to defendant, but it should have been limited in its recitals to the language of the petition, viz., that said ejectment suit was instituted "at the instance and suggestion of defendant," or similar language. The defect consisted in calling the attention of the jury to evidence going to show that the suit was so instituted.

Reversed and remanded. All concur.

STATE v. VAUGHAN.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 8, 1909.)

1. WITNESSES (§ 52*)—COMPETENCY—HUSBAND AND WIFE.

At common law, a husband or wife is an incompetent witness in a case, civil or criminal, in which the other is a party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 124; Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

2. WITNESSES (§ 61*)—COMPETENCY—HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Where violence has been committed on the person of the wife by the husband, she is competent to prove such violence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 174; Dec. Dig. § 61.*]

3. WITNESSES (§ 61*)—HUSBAND AND WIFE.

In a prosecution of a husband for disturbance of the peace of his wife, the wife was not competent as a witness, though her testimony might have been admissible in a prosecution of defendant for an assault.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 174; Dec. Dig. § 61.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Cooper County; Wm. H. Martin, Judge.

George Vaughan was convicted of an offense, and appeals. Reversed, and defendant discharged.

W. V. Draffen, for appellant. W. F. Johnson, for the State.

BROADDUS, P. J. The defendant was convicted in the circuit court upon an information charging him with disturbance of the peace of his wife. The prosecution was begun in a justice's court, where defendant was found guilty. He appealed to the circuit court, where he was again tried and found guilty, and from judgment of his conviction he has appealed to this court.

The prosecution was instituted upon the complaint of his wife. She refused to voluntarily testify against her husband, but was compelled by the court to do so. There were other witnesses whose testimony tended to prove defendant's guilt. The wife testified that defendant came home drunk one night, cursed and abused her, jerked her up and down the bed, and threw her out and hurt her arm, and that he called her a "damn bitch and whore." The only question raised on the appeal is the error of the court in compelling the wife to testify against defendant. It has been the general understanding among the legal profession that a wife is not a competent witness against her husband in a criminal prosecution, except where the offense with which he is charged is in the nature of a wrong committed against her person. The state has undertaken to show that there are exceptions to the rule, and that the facts of this case bring it within the latter class. The common-law rule is that a wife or husband is an incompetent witness in a case, civil or criminal, in which the other is a party. 1 Greenleaf on Evidence, §§ 334, 335. The same author states that the rule of necessity has created exceptions to the general rule, which are allowed "partly for the protection of the wife in her life and liberty, and partly for the sake of public justice. But the necessity which calls for this exception for the wife's security is described to mean 'not a general necessity, as where no other witness can be had, but a particular necessity, as where, for instance, the wife would otherwise be exposed, without remedy, to personal injury.'" Id. § 343.

In a case where the husband was charged with an assault upon the wife with intent to murder, the wife was compelled to testify against the husband. The testimony discloses ed that in a quarrel between them defendant discharged a pistol, remarking at the time that they both had better be dead. The court held that the wife was a competent witness against her husband. Bramlette v. State, 21 Tex. App. 611, 2 S. W. 765, 57 Am. Rep. 622. Turner v. State, 60 Miss. 351, 45 Am. Rep. 412, was a case of assault and battery committed upon the person of the wife. The wife was compelled to testify. Where violence has been committed upon the person of a wife by the husband, she is competent to prove such violence. Wharton's Criminal Evidence, § 393. In Johnson v. State, 94 Ala. 53, 10 South. 427, on a prosecution of a husband for an assault committed on his wife, the wife was not only not held to be incompetent to testify to the assault, but might be compelled to so testify. In State v. Bean, 104 Mo. App. 255, 78 S. W. 640, the husband was charged with the abandonment of his wife. It was held that she was a competent witness on the ground that she was the "particular individual directly injured by the crime committed by her husband, and the facts were peculiarly within her knowledge, and impossible or difficult of proof by any witness other than the wife." In Maget v. Maget, 85 Mo. App. 6, a civil proceeding, this court said: "A wife is excluded as a witness from motives of public policy; but, when necessity for her testimony overbalances public policy she is competent." In State v. Pennington, 124 Mo. 388, 27 S. W. 1106, the wife is held to be a competent witness as to the injury threatened and attempted to her person by the husband.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

All the foregoing authorities have been called to our attention by the state to sustain the proposition that the wife was a competent witness, and was rightfully compelled to testify against her husband. All the authorities mentioned only go to the extent of showing that the exceptions to the common-law rule allowing the wife to testify against her husband are confined to instances where an injury has been threatened or inflicted upon the person of the wife, except Maget v. Maget, where necessity, it was said, overbalanced public policy—and that case does not by any means sustain the state's contention. Public policy, in our opinion, is to be reckoned against the admission of the wife's testimony in cases like this. There is no telling, if a wife under such circumstances should be permitted to testify, to where such a course would lead. To permit the mere quarrels between husband and wife to be used as a basis for a prosecution, under the pretense that the peace of the wife had thereby been disturbed, would, in our opinion, be against public policy, and unnecessary for the protection of the wife.

The argument of the state that, as the evidence showed defendant also committed an assault at the same time on his wife, her evidence would be admissible under the theory of the foregoing authorities is not good in this proceeding, notwithstanding it would be admissible in a prosecution against defendant for an assault. The two offenses are distinct, and the punishment is different.

The cause will be reversed, and defendant discharged. All concur.

STATE v. SIMPSON.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri. May 3, 1909.)

1. LIBEL AND SLANDER (§ 159*)—CRIMINAL SLANDER—INSTRUCTIONS.

Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2262 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1426), providing that in prosecutions for libel or slander the truth shall constitute a complete defense, and that the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact, it was error, in a trial for criminal slander, to instruct that certain words alleged to have been spoken by accused constituted a charge of fornication, and that if the jury believed they were spoken by accused they should convict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Libel and Slander, Cent. Dig. § 444; Dec. Dig. § 159.*]

2. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION (§ 52*)—AFFIDAVIT—SUFFICIENCY.

An affidavit, that the facts stated in an information are according to the best "knowledge, information, and belief" of affiant, is insufficient as a basis for the information.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indictment and Information, Cent. Dig. § 163; Dec. Dig. § 52.*]

3. WORDS AND PHRASES—"INFORMATION."

"Information" implies lack of knowledge. As, for instance, where one says he is informed of a thing, he knows he is informed of it, but he does not know it exists—he does not know his information is true, but he impliedly affirms that he does not know.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 4, pp. 3585-3589.]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Vernon County; B. G. Thurman, Judge.

James Simpson was convicted of criminal slander, and appeals. Reversed and remanded.

A. J. King, for appellant. Lee B. Ewing, Pros. Atty., and M. T. January, for the State.

ELLISON, J. Defendant was tried and convicted on a charge of criminal slander prohibited by section 2253, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1424). The charge was by information filed in the circuit court. The charge was that defendant said to the prosecuting witness that, "I have been told that you caught a bad disease from her," meaning a certain-named woman. The statute (section 2262, Rev. St. 1899 [Ann. St. 1906, p. 1426]) is that: "In all prosecutions for libel or slander, the truth thereof may be given in evidence to the jury, and shall constitute a complete defense; and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the fact."

The court instructed the jury that the words quoted above constituted a charge of fornication, and that, if they believed they were spoken by defendant, they should convict him. This was error. The foregoing statute leaves to the jury the question whether a certain charge is slander, and whether they will convict. State v. Armstrong, 106 Mo. 395, 16 S. W. 604, 13 L. R. A. 419, 27 Am. St. Rep. 361; Arnold v. Jewett, 125 Mo. 241, 28 S. W. 614; Heller v. Pulitzer Pub. Co., 153 Mo. 205, 54 S. W. 457; State v. Powell, 86 Mo. App. 598. We considered the subject in Sands v. Marquardt, 113 Mo. App. 490, 87 S. W. 1011, and Grimes v. Thorp, 113 Mo. App. 652, 88 S. W. 638. In the latter case we stated that in criminal prosecutions for either libel or slander the jury determine the law and the fact, and that they could not be peremptorily directed to find a verdict of guilty if certain evidence was believed. The court should instruct in an advisory, but not peremptory, way that certain words would, in the opinion of the court, sustain a verdict of guilty if found by the jury, at the same time informing them that the court's opinion was merely advisory and not binding on them, and that they were the sole judges of whether the words constituted libel or slander, and as to whether the accused should be found guilty. It is said in State v. Armstrong, supra: "That while the judge may assist and inform them what the law is, and it is his duty to do so, still they are, by virtue of organic law, the final judges in a prosecution for criminal libel."

The information in this case is on the affidavit of the woman charged to have been slandered. The wording of her affidavit is that "the facts in the above and foregoing information are true according to her best knowledge, information, and belief." In State v. Bennett, 102 Mo. 356, 14 S. W. 865, 10 L. R. A. 717, affirmed without comment in State v. Armstrong, supra, it was ruled that an affidavit by a private person on "best knowledge and belief" was sufficient. As will be seen by the opinion in the Bennett Case, it was not without a struggle that the court came to the conclusion it did. It was determined that the word "belief" did not qualify the other word, "knowledge." While we readily concede the soundness of the position there taken, yet it did not involve an affidavit like the one before us. In that case knowledge and belief were reasoned out to amount to the same thing as applied to the affidavit; but in this case we are asked to go a step further and approve of a pleading based, partly at least, upon information. "Information" implies lack of knowledge. One may say "I believe" a thing because he knows it. When one says he is informed of a thing, he knows he is informed of it; but he does not know it exists. He does not know his information is true. He impliedly affirms that he does not know. So in State v. Hayward, 88 Mo. 299, an affidavit "to the best of his information and belief" was held to be bad. That ruling is approved in the Bennett Case. We therefore conclude that the affidavit in this case does not fall within the limit of the Bennett Case, and is more nearly controlled by the Hayward Case, and should be declared not sufficient ground upon which to base an information by the prosecuting attorney. While we are now passing upon the affidavit as it appears on its face, yet it may be well to state that matters developed after the motion to quash had been overruled showed clearly why the word "information" was put in the affidavit. It appeared in evidence that the affiant knew nothing of the matter whatever of her own knowledge, and merely made the affidavit on the word of another. Thus appears the wisdom of the ruling in the Hayward Case.

We will state in this connection that the statute, as applied to the matters here considered, is the same as it was when the Hayward and Bennett Cases were decided, and that the court in deciding the Hayward Case was aware of the statute prescribing a form of affidavit on "information and belief." That statute is now known as sections 2478 and 2479, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1490). Those sections, however, relate to the institution of a prosecution by an affidavit apart from the information. Such affidavit is not a verification of the information, nor an affidavit filed with it, as contemplated by section 2477 (page 1487), for it is a paper made and filed before the information comes into existence. It is the foundation for the information.

Counsel for the state insist that the record here is not sufficient to show a bill of exceptions, or that exceptions were taken. We have examined the transcript, including the certificate of the clerk to the different parts of the record, including a bill of exceptions, and we find it sufficient.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded. All concur.

STATE ex rel. BURNS et al. v. ROMJUE
(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 3, 1909.)

1. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 19*)—
APPOINTMENT—RENUNCIATION OF RIGHT.

Under Rev. St. 1899, § 7 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 341), requiring letters of administration to be granted first to the wife and next to one or more of those entitled to distribution, as the court believes will best manage the estate, and section 8, permitting letters to be granted to any person or persons deemed suitable if the persons entitled to preference file their renunciation in writing, the right to administer is personal and cannot be delegated to another, so that a renunciation by heirs of their right to administer cannot be made conditionally upon the appointment of one of their selection, and, when once made, cannot be recalled.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Dec. Dig. § 19.*]

2. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 20*) — APPOINTMENT — PROCEEDINGS FOR APPOINTMENT—REVIEW.

Where the appointment of an administrator by the probate court, upon the renunciation by heirs of their right to administer, was made in the exercise of sound judgment, and not an arbitrary abuse of power, it will not be disturbed by the appellate court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. § 102; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Macon County; Nat M. Shelton, Judge.

Mandamus by the State, on the relation of Waller Burns and another, against M. A. Romjue. From a judgment for respondent, relators appeal. Affirmed.

Higbee & Mills, C. G. Buster, and Guthrie & Franklin, for appellants. John T. Barker, for respondent.

JOHNSON, J. This is a mandamus suit brought by relators in the circuit court of Macon county to compel the respondent, the probate judge of that county, to revoke letters of administration improvidently issued and to issue letters to relators. An alternative writ was issued, appropriate pleadings were filed by the respective parties, and the issues were tried and determined in favor of respondent. Relators bring the cause here by appeal.

Nathaniel Broyles died intestate in Macon county, February 1, 1908. He left neither widow nor issue, and of his heirs three were residents of this state, namely: Martha J. Neet, of Sullivan county, a sister; relator Simeon A. Broyles, of Harrison county, a half-brother; and relator Waller Burns, of Macon county, a nephew. The estate was quite large and consisted of both real and personal property. Letters of administration were issued March 21, 1908, by respondent to Roscoe E. Goodding and John W. Gross, both residents of that county and both strangers to the estate. Goodding was cashier of the Bank of La Plata, of which decedent had been president, and Gross was the public administrator of Macon county. They duly qualified as administrators and proceeded to administer the estate. The revocation of their letters is one of the principal objects of the present suit, and the question of whether they were issued improvidently is the main issue before us for solution. Facts material to this issue are as follows: Relator Simeon Broyles, who was one of the resident heirs, is an old man engaged in farming in Harrison county. His wife was over 71 years old and was in such ill health that she required the constant attention of her husband. He did not wish to be burdened with the cares of the estate, and so expressed himself. February 13, 1908, he filed with respondent the following "waiver": "I hereby waive my right to administer on the estate of Nathaniel Broyles, deceased, and request you to appoint Jas. Neet and John Burns as administrators of said estate." Relator Burns likewise expressed a strong disinclination to serve as administrator, and on February 15, 1908, filed with respondent his renunciation in writing, as follows: "We, Waller Burns and N. J. Bunce, hereby waive our rights to administer on the estate of the late Nathaniel Broyles, deceased, being heirs of the deceased, living in Missouri, and entitled to administer thereon, and we request and waive in behalf of John S. Burns and James Neet and no others, and request the probate court to appoint them to act as said administrators." The remaining resident heir, Martha J. Neet, was an aged widow, in very poor health. She did not wish to be appointed administratrix and renounced her right on February 17, 1908, in the following written instrument filed with respondent: "I hereby waive my right to administer upon the estate of N. Broyles, deceased, said right being conferred upon me by right of being an unmarried sister of deceased, and respectfully ask the court to appoint Roscoe E. Goodding of La Plata, Macon county, Missouri, as administrator of such estate, believing as I do that such appointment will be to the best interest of all concerned."

James Neet and John Burns, whose appointment was requested by relators, were strangers to the estate. Neet was the son of Martha J. Neet, who expressed to respondent her disapprobation of her son's application. She claimed that his unfitness for the place had been demonstrated by his conduct in past business affairs. A majority of the heirs favored the appointment of Neet and Burns; but, without reflecting on the moral character of either, we think the evidence as a whole supports the conclusion of respondent that neither was as well qualified for the administration of a large estate as Goodding and Gross. From the view point of the welfare of the estate, the choice of respondent appears to have been the result of sound judgment. That it was made in good faith is indisputable. Whether respondent had the right to make the choice among strangers is another question that calls for reference to other facts in the record. The immediate effect of the filing by the resident heirs of their renunciations was to raise a multitude of candidates for the office, most of whom pressed their claims with great assiduity. Lawyers were employed by various contestants, and much feeling was engendered among the factions. Evidently respondent, who was trying to perform his duties properly, endeavored by proceeding slowly

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

Goodding and Gross. On March 3d relators, actuated by the fear that their candidates might lose in the race, filed with respondent the following instrument in writing: "Now come Simeon Broyles and Waller Burns and show to the court that they have heretofore waived their rights to administer as distributees in the estate of Nathaniel Broyles, deceased, in favor of John Burns and James Neet and them alone, and, if the court should deem it best not to appoint the said John Burns and James Neet, these distributees assert their rights as distributees to administer on the estate of the said Nathaniel Broyles, deceased, since the said Simeon Broyles is a half-brother of the said deceased, and the said Waller Burns is a nephew of the said deceased, whose mother, ——— Burns, is dead, and she was a sister of deceased, Nathaniel Broyles. These applicants would say that they are all residents of the state of Missouri and that the said Waller Burns lives in Macon county and the said Simeon Broyles in Harrison county in said state of Missouri, and they are fully qualified in all regards to administer in said estate." On the same day, March 3, 1908, respondent issued and caused to be served on relators and Martha J. Neet citations all similar in form to that served on relator Waller Burns, which was as follows: "Whereas, I am informed that Nathaniel Broyles has departed this life intestate, and you as his nephew and an heir are by the statutes of the state of Missouri given some priority in the right to administer his said estate, you are therefore cited to appear before the undersigned judge of the probate court at my office in the city of Macon, state of Missouri, and apply for letters of administration on said estate, within five days after the receipt of this notice; or in default thereof letters will be granted to such person as the court or judge thereof shall consider most suitable." On March 10th relators, in response to these citations, filed a written application for letters. Before appointing Goodding and Gross, respondent heard the claims of the respective candidates argued by counsel. On that occasion relators made it plain, as they had done before, that they did not desire the appointment for themselves, that they were still in favor of the candidacy of Neet and Burns, and that their own application was merely a strategical move designed to force their candidates on respondent. In effect, they said to respondent: "Appoint Neet and Burns; but, if you are resolved not to appoint them, then our application as resident heirs stands in the way of the appointment of any other stranger." Relators did not file a written revocation of their renunciations. They argue that the necessity for such action was obviated: First, by the cita-ly to the contention of relators, are these: First, may a resident heir entitled by law to letters of administration renounce his priority conditionally? Second, when the right is once renounced, may it be recalled?

Letters of administration cannot be granted to a nonresident of the state. Section 10, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 341). The statutes provide that letters shall be granted: First, to the husband or wife; second, "to those who are entitled to distribution of the estate or one or more of them, as the court or judge or clerk in vacation shall believe will best manage and preserve the estate." Section 7, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 340). "If no such person apply for letters within thirty days after the death of the deceased, the court * * * may issue citations to him or them * * * to appear and qualify for administration, giving at least five days' time for that purpose and if the person or persons so cited fail to administer within the time appointed letters may be granted to any person whom the court * * * may deem most suitable." Section 8. "Letters testamentary and of administration may at any time be granted to any person deemed suitable if the person or persons entitled to preference file their renunciation thereof in writing," etc. Section 9. Since the decedent left no widow nor issue, relators and Martha J. Neet, being the only resident heirs, were possessed of the first right to administer, and, had they refrained from renouncing that right and made application for letters in response to the citation issued by respondent, it would have been the duty of respondent to select an administrator from among them; but all of the members of this privileged class renounced their right in writing within the time prescribed by statute for the exercise thereof. The right was purely a personal privilege and could not be delegated to another. In re Cresse's Case, 28 N. J. Eq. 236; In re Scott's Estate, 76 Neb. 28, 106 N. W. 1003, 107 N. W. 1004; In re Estate of Sargent, 62 Wis. 130, 22 N. W. 131. Our statute does not extend the scope of the right to include the privilege of nominating an administrator. If the members of the privileged class renounce their right or lose it by failing to exercise it within the time prescribed by statute, then the duty devolves on the probate court of selecting an administrator. In the performance of such duty, the court is not compelled to accede to the demands of the resident heirs or other interested parties, though he should give due consideration and weight to their recommendations. The court should exercise a sound discretion and appoint the person who, in his judgment, is best qualified to give an honest and efficient administration of the estate. Since the right an administrator, we think it should follow logically that a renunciation cannot be coupled with a condition that in effect is but an attempt to dictate to the court whom it shall appoint. This view is contrary to that expressed by some of the authorities to which our attention has been directed, but we think it is supported by the weight of authority and reason. The law intends to put the resident heirs to the choice of administering the estate, or of permitting the probate court to appoint a stranger. It does not intend that the privilege shall be used to coerce the court into appointing a person it may deem unsuitable.

We regard the renunciations filed by relators as unconditional, and pass to the question of whether relators could retract them at any time before the appointment of an administrator. In our opinion the better doctrine is that, when the privilege once is renounced or waived, it is lost forever and cannot be recalled. Two very potent reasons may be given in support of this doctrine: First, as a general rule, the estates of deceased persons demand speedy attention, and injury would result from delays that might be caused if resident heirs could renounce and recall their privilege at will; and, second, the right of revocation, if it existed, might be used, as was attempted in the present case, not in good faith for the purpose of enjoying the privilege, but as a club to hold over the probate court to compel it to appoint, not the persons whom the court in the exercise of its judgment found were best qualified to administer, but those whom the resident heirs favored. The doctrine just announced is abundantly, though not unanimously, sustained by the authorities. We refer to the briefs of counsel, where the authorities for and against it are collated.

We conclude that respondent acted within the scope of his right and duty in refusing to acknowledge the right of relators to recall their renunciations, and as the appointment made by him appears to have been the result of the exercise of sound judgment, and not of an arbitrary abuse of power, we find no occasion to interfere.

Accordingly, the judgment is affirmed. All concur.

DAVIS v. FOSTER.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri. May 3, 1909.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 671*)—ABSTRACT OF RECORD—QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW.

Where the abstract of the record proper consists merely of the pleadings and the filing that they are shown in the abstract of the bill of exceptions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2872; Dec. Dig. § 671.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 590*)—SUPPLEMENTAL ABSTRACT—RIGHT TO FILE.

Where a respondent on appeal points out in his brief that appellant's abstract of record is insufficient in not showing that a motion for new trial was filed or an order showing time given for filing bill of exceptions, appellant may not correct the error by filing an amended or supplemental abstract without leave of court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2613; Dec. Dig. § 590.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Holt County; W. C. Ellison, Judge.

Action by W. F. Davis against John J. Foster. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

John W. Stokes and R. B. Bridgeman, for appellant. T. C. Dungan and H. M. Dungan, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. This action was for rent, with an attachment in aid. There was a trial on both the plea in abatement and merits. The judgment in each was for the plaintiff.

The abstract of the record proper presented by appellant consists merely of the pleadings and the filing of the bill of exceptions. There is nothing to show that a motion for new trial was filed or an order showing time given for filing bill of exceptions. These things are shown in the abstract of the bill of exceptions, but it has been ruled time and again, in each of the appellate courts, that that will not do. They must appear in the record proper. Clay v. Union Publishing Co., 200 Mo. 665, 98 S. W. 575; Stark v. Zehnder, 204 Mo. 442, 102 S. W. 992; Harding v. Bedoll, 202 Mo. 630, 100 S. W. 638; Pennowsky v. Coerver, 205 Mo. 135, 103 S. W. 542; Thompson v. Ruddick, 213 Mo. 561, 111 S. W. 1131; Stark Bros. v. Martin, 126 Mo. App. 575, 105 S. W. 33; City of Macon v. Jaeger (Mo. App.) 113 S. W. 1138. By reference to these authorities it will be seen that the abstract should distinguish between the record proper and the bill of exceptions, so that it may be seen which one of these contains the matters abstracted, and not leave it in such confusion that it cannot be told whether the recital is taken from the record proper or the bill of exceptions. An amended or supplemental abstract was filed by appellant without leave of court after respondent had complained in his brief of the defects above noted. This cannot be done. Everett v. Butler, 192 Mo. 564, 91 S. W. 890; Harding v. Bedoll, supra. In the latter case it is said that in such instance leave should not be given.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

CHITWOOD v. HATFIELD et al.
(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 8, 1909.)

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 28*)—LIABILITY ON NOTE—OBLIGATION OF SURETIES.

Where the payee of a negotiable note never promised to loan any money to the maker, or authorized the party who cashed it for the maker to make the loan, the latter, after procuring the payee to indorse the same to him without recourse, cannot recover against the sureties, as their undertaking was with the payee to whom the note was not delivered and accepted for a consideration so as to make him a party to the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Dec. Dig. § 26.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Jasper County; Hugh Dabbs, Judge.

Action by H. R. Chitwood against C. E. Hatfield and others. From a judgment in favor of M. L. Long and other defendants, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Thomas Dolan, for appellant. Cole, Burnett & Williams, for respondents.

JOHNSON, J. This is an action on a negotiable promissory note brought by plaintiff against defendants Hatfield, Long, Rozelle, and Lortz. Hatfield was the principal maker. The other defendants signed the note as sureties. Among other defenses the sureties alleged that the note was without a consideration, that it was not delivered to the payee, and that it was not indorsed by the payee to plaintiff "for value received." The cause was tried to the court without the aid of a jury. No declarations of law were asked or given. Judgment was rendered for plaintiff against Hatfield, but in favor of defendant sureties. Plaintiff appealed.

There is no substantial controversy over the facts of the case. Plaintiff was a banker at Carl Junction, a town about nine miles from Joplin. Hatfield was a customer of plaintiff, and was indebted to him on a note and overdraft. He applied to plaintiff for an additional loan of $700, and was referred to T. W. Cunningham, a banker at Joplin, with whom plaintiff kept an account. He went to Cunningham's bank, obtained a blank note, filled it out, signed it, and procured the signatures of defendants Long and Rozelle, and of three other sureties, viz., H. S. Bowman, J. W. Jameson, and Joseph Story. Afterward he presented the note to Cunningham, who refused to accept it on the ground that the security was insufficient. A day or two later Hatfield saw plaintiff at Carl Junction, and told him of the refusal of Cunningham to take the note. Plaintiff advised Hatfield to procure defendant Lortz as a surety, and come due six months after its date. At no time did Cunningham promise to lend any money to Hatfield nor had he authorized plaintiff to make such loan. A few days after obtaining the note, plaintiff took it to Cunningham, who indorsed it without recourse at plaintiff's request. It is a general as well as a statutory rule of law that "every contract on a negotiable instrument is incomplete and revocable until delivery of the instrument for the purpose of giving effect thereto." Section 16, p. 245, Laws 1905 (Ann. St. 1906, § 463-16). By the terms of the note the sureties undertook to enter into contractual relations with Cunningham, the payee named therein. They did not propose to contract with plaintiff, and it would seem to be too clear for serious discussion that they could become bound only in the event of a delivery of the note to Cunningham and his acceptance thereof. Until he should bring himself into a contractual relation with them and their principal, the contract necessarily remained incomplete, and in fact and law was no contract at all. Plaintiff, who did not act as the agent of Cunningham, did not make him a party to the contract by voluntarily cashing the note, nor could he make himself an original party without the consent of the sureties. We think he could not give life to the contract by subsequently obtaining the indorsement of Cunningham without recourse. Already he had voluntarily parted with his money on his own responsibility. At no time did Cunningham assume any contractual obligations to the makers of the note. There was no delivery of the instrument to him, no acceptance thereof by him, and no consideration from him to the makers. Since he never became a party to the contract, his indorsement without recourse which imposed no obligation on him did not constitute him a party, and was ineffective for any purpose. Authorities in point may be found in the briefs of counsel.

We conclude that the learned trial judge was right in discharging the sureties. Accordingly the judgment is affirmed. All concur.

STATE v. NICKELSON.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 8, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 17, 1909.)

SUNDAY (§ 28*)—VIOLATION OF SUNDAY LAW — PROSECUTION — INDICTMENT — ALLEGATIONS BY INTENDMENT — APPLICATION OF RULE.

In a prosecution for violation of Rev. St. 1899, § 2240 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1446), prohibiting the doing of certain work on Sunday, an allegation that accused "on the 18th day of August, A. D. 1907, did on the first day of the week commonly called Sunday, keep open a barber shop," etc., is a direct statement that the date mentioned was Sunday.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sunday, Cent. Dig. § 69; Dec. Dig. § 29.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Ray County; Francis H. Trimble, Judge.

Tyd Nickelson was convicted of Sabbath breaking, in violation of Rev. St. 1899, § 2240 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1446), and he appeals. Affirmed.

J. L. Farris, Jr., and M. G. Roberts, for appellant. W. G. Roberts, for the State.

JOHNSON, J. Defendant, a barber doing business at Richmond, was prosecuted and convicted for an offense against the provisions of section 2240, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1446). The information under which he was tried is as follows: "Now on this day comes George W. Jenkins, prosecuting attorney within and for the county of Ray and state of Missouri, leave of court having been first had and obtained, and for his second amended information informs the court that Tyd Nickelson, in the county of Ray and state of Missouri, on the 18th day of August, A. D. 1907, did, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, keep open a barber shop located in the county of Ray and state of Missouri, and did wilfully and unlawfully perform certain labor, then and there shaving the face and cutting the hair of one Robert Bates, and performing the labor and services of a barber on divers and sundry other persons to this affiant unknown in the said barber shop, and said shaving and cutting hair and other labor then and there performed not being the household offices of daily necessity, and not being then and there work of necessity, or of charity, contrary to the form of the statute in such cases made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state."

A demurrer to this information was overruled. Defendant argues that it should have been sustained on the ground that the information fails to aver that the 18th day of August, 1907, was the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday. The objection is without merit. The allegation that defendant "on the 18th day of August, A. D. 1907, did on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, keep open a barber shop * * * and did * * * perform certain labor, then and there shaving the face and cutting the hair of one Robert Bates," etc., contains a direct statement of the fact that the date mentioned was Sunday. The rule that material allegations in criminal proceedings may not be made by intendment (State v. Clinkenbeard [Mo. App.] 115 S. W. 1069, and cases cited), no matter how strictly it may be construed, can have no application here, since the language employed does not require a resort to inference.

Finding no error in the record, the judgment is affirmed.

BROADDUS, P. J., concurs. He is of opinion that the business of a barber performed on Sunday is a work of necessity; but, as the Supreme Court has held otherwise, he does not feel at liberty to dissent from the opinion of JOHNSON, J. ELLISON, J., concurs.

PACIFIC MUT. LIFE INS. CO. OF CALIFORNIA v. MANSUR.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri. May 8, 1909. Rehearing Denied May 17, 1909.)

1. PROCESS (§ 1*)—"SUMMONS"—OFFICE.

The office of a summons is to bring the defendant to whom it is directed into court to answer plaintiff's petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 7, pp. 6787, 6788; vol. 8, p. 7810.]

2. PROCESS (§ 45*)—"ALIAS SUMMONS"—OFFICE.

An alias summons is issued when the original summons has not produced its effect because defective in form or manner of service, and, when issued and served, the second writ supersedes the first, and defects in the first cannot be pleaded in abatement of the second.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. § 42; Dec. Dig. § 45.*]

3. PROCESS (§ 45*)—"ALIAS SUMMONS"—EFFECT OF ORDER FOR ISSUE.

An order of record that an alias summons be issued constitutes an abandonment of the original writ, though the alias summons be not issued or served; and hence where, after original summons was issued and served, defendant did not appear, and the court made an order of record that an alias summons issue and the cause be continued, and no alias summons was issued nor the order set aside, the court had no jurisdiction to hear the case at the next term of court on the original service.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Dec. Dig. § 45.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Livingston County; Francis H. Trimble, Judge.

Action by William H. Mansur against the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company of California. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

J. C. Rosenberger, Clyde Taylor, and Kersey Coates Reed, for plaintiff in error. Scott J. Miller, for defendant in error.

JOHNSON, J. Defendant in error brought this suit in the circuit court of Livingston county against plaintiff in error, a nonresident life insurance company, and caused summons to be issued returnable to the May term, 1908, the first day of which fell on May 4th. The summons was served and returned in the manner prescribed by law, and no point is made of its sufficiency to command the appearance of the defendant (plaintiff in error here) at the May term to answer the petition. Defendant did not answer, and on the eleventh day of the term the court, at the request of plaintiff (defendant in error here), made the following order of record: "Ordered by the court that alias summons be issued for defendant the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, directed to the sheriff of Cole county, Missouri, and cause continued." No alias summons was issued in obedience to this order, nor was the order set aside. The defendant did not appear at the following term, but the court heard evidence introduced by the plaintiff, and rendered judgment against the defendant as prayed in the petition. Afterward defendant brought the case here by writ of error.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

We think the court had no jurisdiction over the person of the defendant in that suit at the time the judgment was rendered. The office of a summons is to bring the defendant to whom it is directed into court to answer the petition of the plaintiff. The original summons, being regularly issued and properly served and returned, performed its mission, and the defendant was bound to appear at the May term and answer the petition in the time prescribed by law, or suffer the consequences of having judgment rendered against it by default. An alias summons is issued when the original summons has not produced its effect. 1 Rap. & L. Law Dict. 44. It is employed in cases where the original summons is defective in form or manner of service, and cannot be held to have performed its function. An order of record that an alias summons be issued necessarily must constitute an abandonment of the original service. 20 A. & E. Encyc. Pl. & Pr. 1180; Finley v. Richards, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 487. When issued and served, the second writ supersedes the first and defects in the first cannot be pleaded in abatement of the second. Goodlett v. Hansel, 56 Ala. 346. No alias writ was issued and served in the case in hand, but nevertheless the order of record that one be issued was an abandonment of the original writ for the following reason: Constructively the defendant was present in court in obedience to the original summons, heard the plaintiff ask for the alias order, witnessed the pronouncement of the order by the court, and saw it entered of record. In effect, plaintiff there confessed and the court ruled that the summons was insufficient, and the defendant was told by the court to depart with the assurance that it need not reappear to answer the petition until commanded so to do by the service upon it of the alias summons. To hold that the failure to follow up the order had the effect to restore the original service would be to say that a defendant dismissed from court to await further commands of the court still is bound to remain in court and proceed with his defense as though no such order of dismissal had been made. We conclude that plaintiff in error did not have his day in court, and therefore that the judgment should not be allowed to stand.

Point is made by the plaintiff in error that the petition is fatally defective. We think the petition is deficient, but that its defects may be cured by amendment.

The judgment is reversed and the cause remanded. All concur.

RAGLAND et al. v. CONQUEROR ZINC COS.
(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 3, 1909.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*)—CONTRACT FOR SUBLEASE—RECOVERY FOR BREACH.

Where defendants unconditionally contracted with plaintiffs to sublease land to them for 10 years if they should develop paying ore, the fact that defendants, at the date of contract, have a good and subsisting lease of the land, which plaintiffs knew was subject to forfeiture for failure of defendants to do work required, would not preclude plaintiffs from recovery for defendants' failure to comply with the contract caused by the subsequent forfeiture of their lease.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

2. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*)—CONTRACT FOR SUBLEASE—COVENANT FOR QUIET ENJOYMENT.

A covenant for quiet enjoyment may be inferred from a contract to sublease, whereby the sublessees were to enter on the leased land and prospect for ore, which, if found in paying quantities, was to be followed by the sublease.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

3. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*)—CONTRACT TO SUBLEASE—RECOVERY FOR BREACH.

For breach of a contract to sublease land for mining on the contingency that sublessees found paying ores, they may recover for their expenditures in endeavoring to find the same, though their prospective profits would be too uncertain and speculative as a basis for recovery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

4. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*)—CONTRACT FOR SUBLEASE—ACTION FOR BREACH—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

In an action for breach of a contract to sublease land for mining on the contingency that plaintiffs found paying ores, the court properly instructed that the measure of damages was the actual expense incurred by plaintiffs in their work.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Jasper County; Hugh Dabbs, Judge.

Action by C. E. Ragland and others against the Conqueror Zinc Companies and others. From a judgment for plaintiffs, the Conqueror Zinc Companies appeal. Affirmed.

Thomas Dolan, for appellants. Curry, Owen & Farris, for respondents.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

BROADDUS, P. J. This is a suit for damages. The petition, in substance, alleges: That in August, 1906, the defendant Houk for himself and the other defendants represented to plaintiff Ragland that the defendants had a valid and subsisting lease for 10 years on certain mining property in Jasper county, and that defendants had the right and power to sublease said property; and that defendants, so representing to plaintiff, entered into a contract with plaintiff, whereby he was to enter upon the said leased land to prospect and mine for lead and zinc ore, and if the said Ragland or his assigns should strike and develop ore sufficient to warrant the erecting of a mining plant or to pay the expense of handling and cleaning of ore by hand jigs, then the defendants were to furnish plaintiffs with a written lease or license to mine said land for 10 years under a royalty of 20 per cent. The petition sets forth that, after said contract was made, Ragland assigned to each of his coplaintiffs one-fourth interest in the lease. It is alleged that, after plaintiffs entered upon the performance of said contract, they were notified that defendants had no lease upon the land, and thereupon were about to cease work, when defendant Houk for himself and defendant corporations guaranteed and assured the plaintiffs that they had full right upon said land under the said lease, and agreed to protect plaintiffs and assure them their full rights under the contract aforesaid. And plaintiffs say that, by reason of the aforesaid contract, representations, and assurance, they continued to mine and carry on mining operations, and expended in the performance thereof in mining said land the sum of $600. Plaintiffs further allege that thereafter, by a judgment of the circuit court of the county against defendants, it was adjudged that defendants had no right upon said land and no right to sublease the same. They allege that, if the contract for a lease had been performed, it would have been worth $5,000. They claim that they are damaged in the sum of $2,500 in addition to said sum of $600, for all of which they asked judgment. The defendants by their answer set up that they had a lease on the land in question, dated November 9, 1904, for a term of 15 years, and which was duly recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds for the county, and that it was in force at the time of the contract made with plaintiff Ragland, and subject to the usual conditions of a mining lease, but that no work was being done on the land on the said 17th day of August and for a short time prior thereto, all of which plaintiffs well knew, and that plaintiffs had notice of the terms of the lease to defendants, and also had notice of the manner in which said lease had been complied with in regard to the mining on said ground. The plaintiffs' reply put in issue the matters set out in the answer.

The plaintiffs introduced the contract as set out in their petition and evidence tending to show the value of the work and expenditures in prospecting for ores, but failed to prove the allegation that defendants guaranteed and assured plaintiffs, after they had received notice that defendants' lease had been forfeited, that they had full right upon said land under their lease, and agreed to protect plaintiffs and assure them their full rights under the said contract. Some of the conditions of defendants' lease from the owner of the land were that mining should commence immediately and be carried on in good faith and continuously. The provision for a forfeiture is as follows: "Any failure to comply with and perform the requirements of this lease in good faith at any time shall end and determine the same, and the said party of the first part may declare an ouster and re-enter upon and hold said demised premises. Subject to these conditions, this lease shall remain in full force for the term of 15 years from the date thereof." The judgment of the circuit court against plaintiffs and defendants rendered in favor of the original lessor was introduced in evidence. The plaintiffs recovered judgment for $285.50, from which defendants appealed.

The contention of defendants is that plaintiffs under the evidence were not entitled to recover. We think defendants' argument does not sustain their theory of the case, which is to the effect that at the time of the making of the contract they had a good and subsisting lease from the lessor; it not at that time having been forfeited. It may be assumed that the provision for a forfeiture was a condition subsequent, which right if not exercised a forfeiture would not result. It is said: "The title to land conveyed upon a condition subsequent vests in the grantee, and his failure to perform the condition does not divest the title. The title is divested only upon the entry of the grantor or his heirs for the condition broken or by a suit for the recovery of possession," etc. Jones' Law of Real Property & Conveyancing, vol. 1, § 708. The lessor may waive the right of forfeiture. Garnhart v. Finney, 40 Mo. 449, 93 Am. Dec. 303. These authorities go to show that defendants did in fact have a subsisting lease at the date of the contract, subject, however, to the right of defendants' lessor to declare a forfeiture for a failure to perform its conditions. Such being the case, we cannot see how plaintiffs' knowledge that the lease was subject to a forfeiture, because its conditions had not been complied with, can be a basis for defendants' argument that plaintiffs cannot recover. There was a subject-matter for the contract, and, so far as knowledge of the conditions was concerned, the plaintiffs and defendants stood upon an equal footing. There being a subject-matter and a sufficient consideration, it was a valid contract, and the undertaking by plaintiffs to comply with its terms imposed a like duty upon defendants.

The plaintiffs were prevented by the action of the defendants' lessor in forfeiting the lease from complying in full with their contract with defendants. The defendants' contract was to furnish plaintiffs with a lease on the land for a period of 10 years if they should develop paying ore. There is no reservation whatever or no condition that would exonerate defendants from making such lease upon plaintiffs' compliance with the contract and the finding of paying ores. The defendants contracted without reference to the contingency that the lease was liable to be forfeited. The defendants' undertaking, in effect, was that there would be no forfeiture of the lease. However, the defendants insist that there was no covenant for quiet enjoyment of the premises. There are no express words to that effect; but from the very nature of the duties imposed upon plaintiffs by the contract they could not be performed unless plaintiffs had peaceable possession, from which it follows that quiet enjoyment may be reasonably inferred. Taylor's Landlord & Tenant, vol. 1, § 251.

As plaintiffs were to have a lease on the contingency that they found paying ores, it is argued that their expenditures in the enterprise were their own loss. That which plaintiffs lost was the right to continue the mining venture, which, if continued, might or might not result in reimbursing them. It is true that the profits which plaintiffs might have realized from a continuance of their mining contract would be too uncertain and speculative as a basis for recovery; but it does not necessarily follow that their expenditures in their endeavor to perform the contract are not proper subjects for which they might recover. The defendants by their contract invited plaintiffs to prospect for ores, which, if found in paying quantities, would have been of value to them as well as to defendants, who were to receive a certain royalty from the product. Plaintiffs did a part of the work, and incurred expense, and were prevented by no fault of their own, but by that of defendants, in prosecuting the enterprise to a conclusion. In certain regions in Jasper county, where rich ores of lead and zinc are found in great quantities, the right to mine may be considered as a property right, and it was so considered by the parties to the contract in controversy. It is true there may be in some instances a failure to realize any profits from such mining, but it ought not to be said for that reason a contract of such character should be viewed differently in the eye of the law from a contract giving the right to cultivate a farm for vegetable products. The only difference is that in the latter contract there would probably be greater certainty of profitable results.

The defendants contend that the measure of damages on account of a disturbance of possession is the difference between the rent reserved and the value of the lease. The court instructed the jury that the measure of plaintiffs' damages was the actual expense incurred by them in their work. The instruction was correct. This is not a suit to recover damages for ouster of the premises held under a lease. Therefore the rule that defendants invoke has no application.

Finding no error, the cause is affirmed. All concur.

BRAECKEL et al. v. SHADE et al.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals, Missouri.
May 8, 1909. Rehearing Denied
May 17, 1909.)

1. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 5*) — STATUTES — CONSTRUCTION.

The rule calling for a strict construction of statutes in derogation of the common law does not apply to mechanic's lien statutes. Such statutes, being remedial in nature, should receive a liberal construction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 5; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

2. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 124*) — NOTICE TO OWNER—MISTAKE IN NAME.

Rev. St. 1899, § 4207 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2290), requires the statement of a mechanic's lien to contain the name of the owner if known. Section 4221 (page 2311) requires the claimant to serve notice of his purpose to file a lien on the owner or agent of the property. Held, that a lien is not lost by a mistake, through misinformation by an abstract clerk, in the first name of the owner in the notice of lien, where the owner was not misled by the error, and no rights of third persons had intervened.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 165; Dec. Dig. § 124.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Jasper County; Hugh Dabbs, Judge.

Action by Frank H. Braeckel and another against D. E. Shade and another. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appeal. Reversed.

H. S. Miller, for appellants. J. H. Spurgeon, for respondents.

JOHNSON, J. Plaintiffs, who are partners doing business in the name of the Joplin Sash & Door Works, brought this suit before a justice of the peace to enforce a mechanic's lien for materials furnished under contract with defendant Shade (the contractor) for a building erected on premises owned by defendant James. Shade, though duly served with summons, failed to appear in the circuit court, where the cause was taken by appeal, and personal judgment was rendered against him for the amount of plaintiff's demand. James appeared and contested the lien. A jury was waived, and judgment was entered in favor of James. Plaintiffs appealed.

The last item of the account is for material

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

furnished October 1, 1907. The notice that plaintiffs intended to file a lien was served on defendant James January 15, 1908. The lien paper was filed with the circuit clerk January 27, 1908. Notice that suit would be brought in the justice's court was filed February 6, 1908, and on the following day the action was begun, as stated in the notice. In these notices and in the lien statement, the name of the owner of the premises was given as James D. James; but the notices and the summons were served on defendant whose name is John D. James. The mistake was discovered by plaintiffs after the suit was brought, and they were given leave by the justice to amend the petition and statement "by changing the name of the defendant James D. James to John D. James; John D. James having been personally served with summons." It appears from the evidence of plaintiffs that they did not know who was the owner of the premises. The lawyer employed by them inquired at the office of an abstractor and was informed by the person in charge of the office that the books showed the owner of the premises to be James D. James. The lawyer acted on this information in preparing the notices, lien statement, and petition. The fact that plaintiffs and their attorney acted in good faith is not disputed and is established by evidence. The question of the effect of the mistake is the only issue considered by the trial court and argued here.

The rule that calls for a strict construction of statutes in derogation of the common law is not applicable to the mechanic's lien statutes. "The better doctrine now is that these statutes are highly remedial in their nature and should receive a liberal construction to advance the just and beneficial objects had in view in their passage." De Witt v. Smith, 63 Mo. 268; Hicks v. Scofield, 121 Mo. 381, 25 S. W. 755; Sawyer v. Clark, 172 Mo., loc. cit. 598, 73 S. W. 187. Section 4207, Rev. St. 1899 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2290), requires the lien statement to contain "the name of the owner or contractor or both if known to the person filing the lien." Section 4221 (page 2311) requires the claimant to serve notice of his purpose to file a lien on "the owner, owners or agent," of the property. Under the doctrine stated, a proper construction of these statutes imposes on the claimant the duty of giving the true name of the owner in the lien statement and notices and of serving the notices on the owner, provided the name of the owner is known to the claimant; but the statutes contemplate that subcontractors, materialmen, and mechanics may not know who is the owner of the premises, and the intent is manifest that the lien of such claimant and his right to enforce it shall not be lost by his failure to ascertain the name of the true owner, and the consequent failure to state it in the lien paper and notices. Where, as here, it appears that the mistake was honest, that the defendant owner was not misled, and that no rights of third persons have intervened, a liberal construction of the statutes prompts us to hold that the right to enforce the lien was unaffected by the mistake. Gorman v. Dierkes, 37 Mo. 576; Miller v. Faulk, 47 Mo. 262; Lumber Co. v. Clark, 172 Mo., loc. cit. 598, 73 S. W. 187; Steinmann v. Strimple, 29 Mo. App. 478; Madden v. Realty Co., 75 Mo. App. 363; Dwyer Brick Works v. Flanagan Bros., 87 Mo. App. 340; Darlington v. Tozer, 88 Mo. App. 525; Baltis v. Friend, 90 Mo. App. 408; Kneisley Lumber Co. v. Stoddard Co., 113 Mo. App. 308, 88 S. W. 774; Crane Co. v. Construction & Real Estate Co., 121 Mo. App., loc. cit. 225, 98 S. W. 796; Boisot on Mechanic's Liens (1897 Ed.) §§ 382, 383; New Cyc. 27, p. 167; Getchell v. Moran, 124 Mass. 404; McPhee v. Litchfield, 145 Mass. 565, 14 N. E. 923, 1 Am. St. Rep. 482; Pavement Co. v. Lyons, 183 Cal. 114, 65 Pac. 329; Hopkins v. Mill Co., 11 Wash. 308, 39 Pac. 815; Hays v. Tryon, 2 Miles (Pa.) 208.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded. All concur.

STATE v. BIESEMEYER.

(Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri.
May 8, 1909.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1083*)—APPEAL—JURISDICTION.

After an appeal is granted, the jurisdiction of the case is with the appellate court, although the record may be corrected by the trial court, and the order granting the appeal cannot be set aside without notice to the appellant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2732; Dec. Dig. § 1083.*]

2. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION (§ 15*) — SUCCESSIVE INDICTMENTS.

It is a sufficient defense in a criminal prosecution that an appeal from a conviction under a prior information is pending.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indictment and Information, Cent. Dig. §§ 83, 84; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Osage County; Wm. A. Davidson, Judge.

L. F. Biesemeyer was convicted of practicing dentistry without a license, and appeals. Reversed, and defendant discharged.

Pope & Vaughan, Monroe & Zevely, and J. W. Voshell, for appellant. John P. Peters, Pros. Atty., and W. E. Owen, for the State.

ELLISON, J. On information by the prosecuting attorney of Osage county the defendant was convicted in the circuit court for practicing dentistry without procuring a license, as required by Laws 1905, p. 217 (Ann. St. 1906, § 8534). In due time he filed a motion for new trial and in arrest of judgment. These motions were overruled, and days afterwards, but during the same term, it seems the trial court discovered that defendant had not been arraigned, and thereupon, without any notice to him, set aside the order granting him his appeal, and set the case down to be tried on June 18th, a day of the same term. On that day the prosecuting attorney entered a nolle prosequi, and then filed a new information for the same offense. Defendant was again put upon trial and again convicted. He made due plea of his former conviction and appeal. These were overruled. Again he appealed to this court; the latter being the appeal before us.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. & Am. Digs. 1907 to date, & Reporter Indexes

The law seems well settled that, while a record may be corrected by the trial court after an appeal has been granted, yet the appeal itself is pending in the appellate court from the time of its being granted, and the jurisdiction of the case is with the appellate court. Ladd v. Couzins, 35 Mo., loc. cit. 515; De Kalb Co. v. Hixon, 44 Mo., loc. cit. 342; Ross v. Railway Co., 141 Mo. 397, 38 S. W. 928, 42 S. W. 957; Sublette v. Railway Co., 66 Mo. App., loc. cit. 334. The St. Louis Court of Appeals in Werckmann v. Taylor, 112 Mo. App. 365, 87 S. W. 44, decided that, while the appeal vested jurisdiction of the case in the appellate court, yet that was only true so long as the order granting the appeal remained in force, and that the trial court had authority during the term to set aside the order and thus annul the appeal. But it seems to us that question is not for decision in this case from the fact that the order here made was made without notice to defendant. When he was granted his appeal and had given his bond and was discharged, he had a right to assume that no further steps would be taken in the case without notice to him. It was not a matter in which he had no part or interest or right to be heard. An appeal may be from a trial in which the defendant may have the right to demand a judgment that he is not guilty, or that he is not liable to the action, if a civil suit. The mere mention will suggest the many things in a record which are of such vital interest to a party as that they will entitle him to an absolute discharge. If, then, the court or appellee and then by amendment, or, as here, by a new proceeding, again bring him to trial, they can grant a new trial or nonsuit in a manner altogether new. If such practice can be indulged, an appellee who finds a record upon which the appellant is properly entitled to a final acquittance at the direction of the appellate court can have the order of appeal set aside and a new trial granted, or a new action instituted, so that he may by different procedure, or by additional evidence, make another attempt to develop a case. It seems to us the practice would be revolution of the established order of procedure.

When one has taken his appeal from the judgment against him, whether for murder or for debt, he cannot be deprived of the rights to which the record shows he is entitled. It may be that the order of appeal can be set aside and the appellant be then given whatever judgment the record shows he should have had on that record, whether that be merely a new trial for error or a final discharge. But all this shows the absolute necessity of notice to the appellant, so that he may protect himself in these vital particulars. "It is a cardinal principle that whenever a party's rights are to be affected by a summary proceeding, or motion in court, that party should be notified, in order that he may appear for his own protection." George v. Middough, 62 Mo. 549; Rich Hill Mining Co. v. Neptune, 19 Mo. App. 438; Wickham v. Page, 49 Mo. 526, 529; Laughlin v. Fairbanks, 8 Mo. 367. It is true that during the progress of a case after a party has been duly arrested or summoned he is presumed to be in court, and only such notice of different steps is necessary as the rules of court may prescribe. But, as is said in the case last cited: "No such presumption can arise after the case is disposed of. * * * In every case, therefore, of a special motion, unless there has been an express or implied waiver of notice, the want of such notice would of itself be sufficient to vitiate the proceedings."

We think the defendant's objections to the second trial should have been sustained, and the judgment will be reversed, and he will be discharged. All concur.

MEMORANDUM DECISIONS.

HARROD v. HAMMOND PACKING CO. (Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri. May 8, 1909.) Appeal from Circuit Court, Buchanan County; C. A. Mosman, Judge. Action by Sam Harrod, by his next friend, against the Hammond Packing Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed. Vinton Pike, for appellant. Mytton & Parkinson and C. C. Crow, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. This case was here on a former appeal (125 Mo. App. 357, 102 S. W. 637), and was reversed and remanded for an error in an instruction given in behalf of the plaintiff. As the case was tried upon practically the same facts and in accordance with the opinion rendered, it is affirmed.

UMBARGER v. SUPREME COUNCIL OF THE ROYAL LEAGUE. (Kansas City Court of Appeals. Missouri. March 29, 1909.) Appeal from Circuit Court, Jackson County. Action by Emma B. Umbarger against the Supreme Council of the Royal League. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed. R. P. & C. B. Williams, for appellant. Reed, Yates, Mastin & Harvey, for respondent.

JOHNSON, J. This case is similar in all material respects to that of Small v. Court of Honor, decided by this court March 10, 1909, and reported in 117 S. W. 116. For the reasons stated in the opinion filed in that case, the judgment before us must be affirmed. It is so ordered. All concur.

COMMONWEALTH v. TURNER. (Court of Appeals of Kentucky. May 12, 1909.) Appeal from Circuit Court, Mercer County. "Not to be officially reported." Thomas Turner was arrested for bringing liquor into a town in violation of an ordinance. From a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the warrant, the Commonwealth appeals. Affirmed. See, also, 117 S. W. 888. Jas. Breathitt, Atty. Gen., Tom B. McGregor, Asst. Atty. Gen., Chas. H. Morris, and R. W. Keenon, for the Commonwealth. J. F. Manarsdale, for appellee.

LASSING, J. This is an appeal from a judgment of the Mercer circuit court sustaining a demurrer to a warrant of arrest, in which the appellee, Thomas Turner, is charged with the offense of having violated the provisions of an ordinance of the town of Harrodsburg, by bringing into said town a certain quantity of whiskey in excess of one gallon. The ordinance under which the warrant of arrest was drawn is in effect the same as that which was fully considered and passed upon by this court in the recent case of Commonwealth v. Campbell, 117 S. W. 383, in which case the ordinance was declared to be unconstitutional and void. For the reasons given in that opinion, and on the authority thereof, the judgment of the lower court is affirmed.

GULF, C. & S. F. RY. CO. v. PEASLEE et al. (Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 17, 1909. Rehearing Denied April 28, 1909.) Appeal from Williamson County Court; T. J. Lawhon, Judge. Action by Otis Peaslee and others against the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Affirmed. S. R. Fisher, J. H. Tallichet, S. W. Fisher, and Terry Cavin & Mills, for appellant. Nunn & Hudson and Wilcox & Graves, for appellees.

FISHER, C. J. The cases of Turner v. Brooks, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 451, 21 S. W. 404, and Leahy v. Ortiz (Tex. Civ. App.) 85 S. W. 824, cited in the conclusions of law of the trial court, sustain the conclusions of the trial court in disposing of the plea in abatement. We have examined all the questions raised in the assignments of error. Finding no error in the record, the judgment is affirmed.

HOGA v. COLEMAN COUNTY. (Court of Civil Appeals of Texas. March 10, 1909. Rehearing Denied April 21, 1909.) Appeal from Coleman County Court; F. M. Bowen, Judge. Action between W. S. Hoga and Coleman County. From the judgment, said Hoga appeals. Affirmed. Woodward & Baker, for appellant. W. C. Woodward and Snodgrass & Dibrell, for appellee.

FISHER, C. J. We find no error in the record, and the judgment is affirmed.

END OF CASES IN VOL. 118.

*

ABANDONMENT.

Of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 145, 161-181.

ABATEMENT.

Of purchase price of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 176.

Pleas in abatement, see Pleading, § 106.

ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL.

Judgment as bar to another action, see Judgment, §§ 570-622.

Pleas in abatement, see Pleading, § 106.

Substitution of parties, see Parties, § 52.

I. OBJECTIONS TO JURISDICTION.

§ 8. A defect of jurisdiction over the person or subject-matter appearing on the face of the record proper must be raised by demurrer.—Kingman-St. Louis Implement Co. v. Bantley Bros. Hardware Co. (Mo. App.) 500.

II. ANOTHER ACTION PENDING.

§ 14. Refusal to abate a suit to determine title to land claimed by plaintiffs under a will and codicil, on the ground of the pendency of a suit to contest the codicil, held proper.—McMahon v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

V. DEATH OF PARTY AND REVIVAL OF ACTION.

(A) ABATEMENT OR SURVIVAL OF ACTION.

§ 58. Where an amended petition stated a new cause of action, and additional process had issued thereon, the abatement of the original cause of action was no ground for abating that raised by the amendment.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Herndon's Adm'r (Ky.) 347.

ABDUCTION.

See Seduction.

ABSTRACTS.

Of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 585, 590.

ABUTTING OWNERS.

Assessments for expenses of public improvements, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 414-519.

Compensation for taking of or injury to lands or easements for public use, see Eminent Domain, § 84.

Rights in streets in cities, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 665-671.

ACCEPTANCE.

Of dedication, see Dedication, §§ 1-45.

Of goods sold in general, see Sales, §§ 150-181.

ACCIDENT.

Cause of death, see Death, §§ 9-31.

Cause of personal injuries, see Negligence, §§ 2-15.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE.

See Insurance, §§ 183, 460, 539.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

See Compromise and Settlement; Payment; Release.

ACCOUNT.

Accounting by particular classes of persons.

See Executors and Administrators, § 496.

Guardian of infant, see Guardian and Ward, §§ 137-163.

Partners, see Partnership, §§ 322, 325.

Accounting incidental to particular actions or proceedings.

To restrain consolidation of insurance associations, see Insurance, § 684.

II. PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.

Transfer of case involving complicated account to equity side of docket, see Trial, § 11.

ACCRUAL.

Of right of action, see Limitation of Actions, § 55.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Operation and effect of admissions as evidence, see Criminal Law, §§ 412, 419; Evidence, §§ 213-253.

Operation and effect of admissions as ground of estoppel, see Estoppel, § 75.

I. NATURE AND NECESSITY.

Necessity to transfer of lease of school lands, see Public Lands, § 178.

§ 6. A deed of land executed by a husband and wife, sufficiently acknowledged as to the husband, but defectively acknowledged as to the wife, held properly received in evidence.—Colville v. Colville (Tex. Civ. App.) 870.

III. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

§ 53. An unacknowledged assignment of conveyance of standing timber, held not entitled to registration.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 53. Omission of certain words from certificate of acknowledgment held fatal to registration of instrument.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

ACTION.

Abatement, see Abatement and Revival.

Accrual, see Limitation of Actions, § 55.

Bar by former adjudication, see Judgment, §§ 570-622.

For cases in Dec. Dig. & Amer. Digs. 1907 to date & Indexes see same topic & section (B) NUMBER

118 S.W.—76

(1201)

tions.
 Malicious actions, see Malicious Prosecution.
 Pendency of action, see Abatement and Revival, § 14.
 Restraining action at law, see Injunction, §§ 7, 28.
 Survival, see Abatement and Revival, § 58.
 Actions between parties in particular relations.
 See Master and Servant, §§ 256-296; Partnership, §§ 322, 325.
 Co-tenants, see Partition, §§ 13-95.
 Actions by or against particular classes of persons.
 See Brokers, § 80; Carriers, §§ 51-193, 223-230, 246-384; Corporations, § 508; Counties, § 208; Infants, §§ 80, 89; Innkeepers, § 11; Municipal Corporations, §§ 818-822; Partnership, §§ 199, 216; Principal and Agent, § 195.
 Connecting carriers, see Carriers, § 185.
 Members of insurance association, see Insurance, § 694.
 Stockholders, see Corporations, § 206.
 Trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, §§ 283-303.

Particular causes or grounds of action.

See Assault and Battery, §§ 26-43; Bills and Notes, §§ 452-534; Death, §§ 9-99; False Imprisonment, § 20; Forcible Entry and Detainer, §§ 5, 32; Insurance, §§ 628-668; Judgment, § 944; Libel and Slander, §§ 93-123; Malicious Prosecution, §§ 64-71; Money Received; Negligence, §§ 121-139; Torts; Trespass; Trover and Conversion, §§ 13-40; Work and Labor.
 Bond of husband as administrator of community, see Husband and Wife, § 276.
 Breach of contract, see Contract, §§ 338-353; Sales, §§ 369, 413; Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 342-352.
 Breach of contract of carriage, see Carriers, § 276.
 Breach of covenant, see Covenants, §§ 121, 122.
 Delay in transportation or delivery of goods shipped, see Carriers, § 104.
 Ejection of passenger or intruder, see Carriers, §§ 380-384.
 Failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, §§ 65-71.
 For compensation of broker, see Brokers, § 80.
 Foreign judgment, see Judgment, § 944.
 For loss of or injury to shipment, see Carriers, §§ 131-137.
 Fraud of agent, see Principal and Agent, § 79.
 Injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 282, 344-351, 396-401.
 Injuries caused by operation of street railroad, see Street Railroads, §§ 111-118.
 Injuries from fires caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 481-485.
 Injuries to animals caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 443-446.
 Injuries to passenger, see Carriers, §§ 314-321.
 Injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 256-296.
 Injuries to traveler on city street, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 818-822.
 Loss of or injury to shipment of live stock, see Carriers, §§ 223-230.
 Price of goods, see Sales, §§ 348-366.
 Recovery of land sold by vendor, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 284, 298.
 Recovery of tax paid, see Taxation, § 643.
 Rent, see Landlord and Tenant, §§ 229-233.
 Services, see Work and Labor.
 Wrongful attachment, see Attachment, §§ 375, 377.
 Wrongful execution, see Execution, §§ 465, 472.
 Wrongful injunction, see Injunction, § 261.

See Creditors' Suit; Divorce; Injunction; Partition, §§ 13-95; Performance; Quieting Title. Admeasurement or assignment of dower, see Dower, § 59.
 Cancellation of written instrument, see Cancellation of Instruments.
 Construction of will, see Wills, § 707.
 Determination of adverse claims to real property, see Quieting Title.
 Dissolution of corporation, see Corporations, §§ 592½, 596.
 Dissolution of partnership, see Partnership, §§ 322, 325.
 Establishment and enforcement of right of exemption, see Exemptions, §§ 141, 147.
 Establishment and enforcement of right of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 191-201.
 Establishment of boundaries, see Boundaries, §§ 40, 55.
 Establishment of will, see Wills, §§ 300-354.
 Foreclosure of mortgage, see Mortgages, §§ 420-534.
 Removal of cloud on title, see Quieting Title.
 Restraining consolidation of insurance associations, see Insurance, § 694.
 Setting aside fraudulent conveyance, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 216-301.

Particular proceedings in actions.

See Appearance; Costs; Damages; Depositions; Dismissal and Nonsuit; Evidence; Execution; Judgment; Judicial Sales; Jury; Parties; Pleading; Process; Reference; Removal of Causes; Stipulations; Trial; Venue.
 Default, see Judgment, §§ 118-170.
 Notice of action, see Process, § 87.
 Verdict, see Trial, § 352.

Particular remedies in or incident to actions.

See Attachment; Garnishment; Injunction; Sequestration; Tender.
 Counterclaim, see Set-Off and Counterclaim.

Proceedings in exercise of special or limited jurisdictions.

Criminal prosecution, see Criminal Law.
 Suits in equity, see Equity.
 Suits in justices' courts, see Justices of the Peace, §§ 73-135.

Review of proceedings.

See Appeal and Error; Exceptions, Bill of; Judgment, §§ 336-382; Justices of the Peace, §§ 141, 174; New Trial.

II. NATURE AND FORM.

Action to recover penalty for usury, see Usury, § 142.
 To recover penalty for usury, see Usury, § 142.

III. JOINDER, SPLITTING, CONSOLIDATION, AND SEVERANCE.

Misjoinder, review of objections as dependent on presentation in lower court, see Appeal and Error, § 258.

§ 48. Two causes of action held to arise under the same transaction so as to be properly joined under Rev. St. 1899, § 593 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 619).—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

IV. COMMENCEMENT, PROSECUTION, AND TERMINATION.

Stay of action against bankrupt, see Bankruptcy, § 391.

ACTION ON THE CASE.

See Trespass, §§ 44-52.

Of courts in general, see Courts, §§ 89-116.
Operation and effect of former adjudication, see Judgment, §§ 570-622, 651-739.

ADMEASUREMENT.

Of dower, see Dower, § 59.

ADMINISTRATION.

Of estate of decedent, see Executors and Administrators.

Of estate of ward, see Guardian and Ward, §§ 54, 58.

Of trust property, see Trusts, § 198.

ADMISSIONS.

As evidence in civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 213-253.

As evidence in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 412, 419.

In pleading, see Pleading, § 121.

To prevent continuance, see Continuance, § 600.

ADVERSE CLAIM.

To real property, see Quieting Title.

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

See Limitation of Actions.

Coverture affecting, see Husband and Wife, § 69½.

Of mining rights, see Mines and Minerals, § 49.

Sufficiency of title by to sustain action by abutting owner to compel removal of obstruction in street, see Municipal Corporations, § 671.

I. NATURE AND REQUISITES.

(A) ACQUISITION OF RIGHTS BY PRESCRIPTION IN GENERAL.

§ 8. The statute of limitation operates against the right of way of a railroad which is held adversely.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ruttan (Ark.) 705.

§ 13. The adverse possession of vacant lands, believing them to be state lands, held not affected by the fact that it was private property.—Hoencke v. Lomax (Tex. Civ. App.) 817.

(C) VISIBLE AND NOTORIOUS POSSESSION.

§ 31. Railroad held to have notice of hostile claim of portion of right of way.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ruttan (Ark.) 705.

(E) DURATION AND CONTINUITY OF POSSESSION.

§ 51. Defense of adverse possession held defeated by the execution of a writ of possession against defendants within the statutory period.—Riley v. Roach (Ky.) 321.

(F) HOSTILE CHARACTER OF POSSESSION.

§ 63. A purchaser, taking possession of land under a contract of sale, cannot, without repudiation of the title of his grantor, hold adversely against him.—Tipton v. Tipton (Tex. Civ. App.) 842.

§ 68. Where, before the statutory period had run, one in possession of land disclaimed title, his possession thereafter was not adverse or under color of title.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

85. Acts by a person who has acquired title to land by occupancy and payment of taxes for seven years under color of title, in recognition of the claim of the original owner, would only be important as a circumstance tending to show the character of the possession, whether adverse or not.—Price v. Greer (Ark.) 1009.

(G) PAYMENT OF TAXES.

§ 92. Payment of taxes by one who has never been in possession will not avail under the statute of limitations of five years.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

II. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

(A) EXTENT OF POSSESSION.

§ 97. An entry on a parcel of land embraced within a patent boundary claimed by another, who is in actual possession of the whole, does not oust him from the possession thereof, except to the extent of the actual inclosures made by the person making such entry, unless he has a superior title.—Meade v. Ratliff (Ky.) 271.

§ 100. In view of Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3344, 4597, 4600, held that persons' possession of a part of land for 10 years did not constitute possession of another part which would bar an action against them by limitation.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

III. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, TRIAL, AND REVIEW.

§ 114. Evidence held to show title in defendant by adverse possession.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

§ 114. In trespass to try title to land, evidence held to sustain a finding that the grantors of plaintiff held title by adverse possession, both under the five and ten year statute of limitations.—Hoencke v. Lomax (Tex. Civ. App.) 817.

§ 116. Evidence held to raise the issue of adverse possession, justifying instruction thereon.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

§ 116. Instruction held not erroneous as requiring a general finding for plaintiff.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Publication of process, see Process, § 87.

ADVICE OF COUNSEL.

As defense to action for wrongful attachment, see Attachment, § 377.

AFFIDAVITS.

See Depositions.

Particular proceedings or purposes.

See Injunction, § 145.

Continuance in criminal prosecutions, see Continuance, § 603.

Verification of pleading, see Pleading, § 291.

AFTER-ACQUIRED TITLE.

Estoppel to assert, see Estoppel, §§ 38, 47.

AGENCY.

See Principal and Agent.

AGGRAVATION.

Of damages, see Damages, §§ 62, 64.

AGREEMENT.

See Contracts.

AIDER BY VERDICT.

In civil actions, see Pleading, § 433.

ALIAS WRITS.

See Process, § 45.

ALLOTMENT.

Of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 200, 201.

ALTERATION.

Of geographical or political divisions, see Municipal Corporations, § 35; Schools and School Districts, §§ 24-42.

ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

§ 29. Evidence held to show that an alteration in a deed was made and executed by the grantee therein in fraud of the creditors of the grantor authorizing the setting aside of the same.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

AMENDMENT.

Of court records, see Courts, § 116.
Of pleading, effect on limitations, see Limitation of Actions, § 127.

In particular remedies or special jurisdictions.
See Trial, § 412.

Of particular acts, instruments, or proceedings.
See Indictment and Information, § 162; Judgment, § 334; Pleading, §§ 243-279; Statutes, § 188.

Petition for divorce, see Divorce, § 104.
Record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 635-655.
Return in attachment, see Attachment, § 324.

AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY.

Jurisdictional amount, see Appeal and Error, §§ 61, 64.

ANIMALS.

Carriage of live stock, see Carriers, §§ 207-230.
Injuries caused by animals frightened by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 305.
Injuries from operation of railroads, see Railroads, §§ 411-446.
Larceny of, see Larceny, § 3.
Liability of carrier for injuries from infectious disease, see Carriers, §§ 215, 217, 228.

ANNEXATION.

Of territory to municipal corporation, see Municipal Corporations, § 35.

ANSWER.

In pleading, see Pleading, §§ 79-121.

ANTI-PASS LAW.

See Carriers, §§ 23, 35.

ANTI-TRUST LAW.

Fees of prosecuting attorneys in actions under, see District and Prosecuting Attorneys, § 5.

APPEAL AND ERROR.

See Exceptions, Bill of; New Trial.
Appellate jurisdiction of particular courts, see Courts, §§ 223, 231.
Costs, see Costs, §§ 232-238.
Review in actions for accounting by guardian, see Guardian and Ward, § 161.
Review in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 1020-1177; Homicide, § 340.
Review in habeas corpus, see Habeas Corpus, § 113.
Review of proceedings of assessors of taxes, see Taxation, § 453.
Review of proceedings of justice of the peace, see Justices of the Peace, §§ 141, 174.

II. NATURE AND GROUNDS OF APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

§ 19. Where defendant, whose lumber was attached under writs issued by a justice, sold it, before trial of the case on appeal to the circuit court, without obtaining an order releasing it, the issue as to the attachment became a moot question, which would not be considered by the Supreme Court on appeal.—Booker v. Blythe (Ark.) 401.

§ 20. The circuit court on appeal from the county court acquires only such jurisdiction as the county court had, and can render only such judgment as the county court should have rendered.—Price v. Madison County Bank (Ark.) 706.

III. DECISIONS REVIEWABLE.(C) AMOUNT OR VALUE IN CONTROVERSY.

§ 61. Supreme Court held to have jurisdiction of appeals in actions brought by subscribers to stock to have their subscriptions canceled.—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Peterson (Ky.) 384; Same v. Beaven, Id.; Same v. Mahon, Id.

§ 61. Where two actions, though tried together, were separate, and separate judgments were rendered, jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals would depend upon the amount involved in each, so that, under Civ. Code Prac. § 734, that court would not have jurisdiction of an appeal in one of the actions in which less than $200 was involved.—Sealey v. Combs (Ky.) 972.

§ 64. The amount which was necessary to make a judgment exceed $100 held not "interest" within Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 998, subd. 3, so that the judgment appealed from was for more than $100, exclusive of interest, giving the Court of Civil Appeals jurisdiction.—Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Faulkner (Tex. Civ. App.) 747.

(D) FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.

§ 78. A ruling sustaining a demurrer to a petition for a writ of mandamus and dismissing the action before the making of a motion for the writ is a final order from which an appeal lies, though no notice of motion for the writ was given, as provided by Civ. Code Prac. § 474.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

§ 78. An order overruling plaintiff's motion to have an amended petition treated as a petition, and directing the abatement of the action, held appealable.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Herndon's Adm'r (Ky.) 347.

§ 82. A judgment on a motion to vacate a judgment in lieu of the common-law writ of error coram nobis is a final judgment and appealable.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 82. An order overruling a motion to vacate a judgment of dismissal and for costs is a special order after final judgment, and appealable under Rev. St. 1899, § 806 (Ann. St. 1903, p. 769).—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

(E) NATURE, SCOPE, AND EFFECT OF DECISION.

§ 115. An appeal lies from an order confirming a judicial sale.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

IV. RIGHT OF REVIEW.

In drainage proceedings, see Drains, § 36.

V. PRESENTATION AND RESERVATION IN LOWER COURT OF GROUNDS OF REVIEW.(A) ISSUES AND QUESTIONS IN LOWER COURT.

§ 169. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2989, as amended by Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 208, c. 107, §§ 2, 8, error not brought to the attention of the court granting the injunction will not be reviewed unless it is fundamental.—Forty-Acre Spring Live Stock Co. v. West Texas Bank & Trust Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 790.

§ 171. Where an action was tried as if based on a statute, plaintiff will not be allowed on review to base the action on the common law.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

§ 173. Where the case was tried below on the theory that defendant conceded its negligence, which all of the instructions assumed, and defendant did not deny its negligence in its brief, it cannot deny its negligence for the first time on appeal.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

(B) OBJECTIONS AND MOTIONS, AND RULINGS THEREON.

§ 193. Where the record does not show that an exception to the petition, that it appeared that the cause of action was barred by limitations, was presented below, an assignment of error as to sustaining the exception cannot be considered.—Schneider v. Schneider (Tex. Civ. App.) 789.

§ 194. Where it was pleaded that the cause of action accrued more than 13 years before suit, its sufficiency cannot be called in question for the first time on a writ of error.—Schneider v. Schneider (Tex. Civ. App.) 789.

§ 197. If there is but a variance at the trial in plaintiff's proof, defendant is bound to proceed in the statutory mode by filing an affidavit of surprise.—Avery v. Tucker (Mo. App.) 672.

§ 204. An assignment that the court erred in admitting certain testimony will be overruled, where no objection was made at the trial.—Van Cleave v. St. Louis, M. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 116.

§ 216. Where a party made no request for submission of a question to the jury, he cannot complain that the court failed to instruct on the point.—Price v. Greer (Ark.) 1009.

§ 216. A party failing to request an instruction on a particular point cannot complain of the failure of the court to instruct.—Allen v. Fleck (Tex. Civ. App.) 176.

§ 219. A finding of fact of the trial court, not complained of, is conclusive on appeal.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 222. Where a motion for new trial is overruled, and no objections taken or exceptions saved, the appellate court cannot pass upon matters of exception during the trial.—Williams v. City of St. Joseph (Mo. App.) 1180.

§ 230. Improper remarks of counsel held not reviewable in the absence of objection thereto at the time.—American Freehold Land Mort- gage Co. of London v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 1106.

§ 237. A party held estopped to complain on appeal that the court did not of its own motion transfer the case to equity.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

(C) EXCEPTIONS.

§ 253. A misjoinder of actions should be excepted to in the lower court; and, if it is not, it cannot be objected to on appeal.—Knox v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1142.

§ 265. The failure of the court to make special findings of fact requested will not be considered on appeal, where no exception was taken thereto.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Shawnee Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 776.

§ 285. It is not necessary to take exceptions to findings of law and fact, when there is a statement of facts in the record, in order to review them on appeal.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 286. One who has neither appealed nor saved exceptions to the refusal of the court to disregard exceptions to the report of the referee cannot urge in the appellate court that the trial court erred in failing to disregard the exceptions to the report.—Snyder v. Crutcher (Mo. App.) 489.

VII. REQUISITES AND PROCEEDINGS FOR TRANSFER OF CAUSE.(A) TIME OF TAKING PROCEEDINGS.

§ 339. Appeal from judgment more than two years after rendition held too late.—Nickell v. Nickell (Ky.) 963.

(C) PAYMENT OF FEES OR COSTS, AND BONDS OR OTHER SECURITIES.

§ 373. A county may not prosecute an appeal without first giving an appeal bond.—Midland County v. Slaughter (Tex. Civ. App.) 762.

§ 387. Where parties fail to execute a bond within the time required by Rev. St. 1895, art. 1387, they are not entitled to the benefits of the statute authorizing the Court of Civil Appeals to permit a party to file a new bond in lieu of a defective one.—Estes v. Estes (Tex. Civ. App.) 174.

§ 387. On motion to affirm a judgment on certificate, transcript held not to show that the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals had attached under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1387.—Carney v. Menefee (Tex. Civ. App.) 1083.

§ 389. An affidavit in lieu of an appeal bond made before an officer authorized to take the affidavit held sufficient if approved by the county judge.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

§ 389. The statute authorizing an affidavit in lieu of an appeal bond to be made before the county judge of the county where appellant resides does not comprehend county judges of other states.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

§ 392. Effect of defects in an affidavit in lieu of an appeal bond stated.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

§ 392. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 7, subd. 2, defects in an affidavit in lieu of an appeal bond held not to vitiate it, and to have been waived.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

(D) WRIT OF ERROR, CITATION, OR NOTICE.

§ 401. The Court of Civil Appeals does not acquire jurisdiction of a writ of error until service of the writ.—Carney v. Menefee (Tex. Civ. App.) 1083.

§ 499. An assignment of error complaining of the admission of evidence will be overruled when no objection or exception appears in the record.—Hogsett v. Northern Texas Traction Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 807.

§ 500. An assignment complaining of the overruling of a motion to bring in a new party cannot be considered when the record fails to show that it was presented to the court or was overruled.—Dayton Lumber Co. v. Stockdale (Tex. Civ. App.) 805.

§ 501. To preserve exceptions to rulings on motion for leave to file a reply and to strike out the reply, exceptions must be preserved in the bill of exceptions to the overruling of the motion for new trial.—Tarr v. Crump (Mo. App.) 488.

§ 501. Rulings as to the admission of evidence will not be reviewed, where the record fails to show that the rulings were excepted to, or any bill of exceptions taken.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

§ 510. Deeds and tax receipts which are made exhibits to the complaint are a part of the record on review, though they bear no file marks.—McMillan v. Morgan (Ark.) 407.

§ 512. Appeal from the county court, in a case brought in justice court, dismissed.—Roberson v. First State Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 173.

(C) NECESSITY OF BILL OF EXCEPTIONS, CASE, OR STATEMENT OF FACTS.

§ 544. Where there is no bill of exceptions filed by authority of the court, only the record proper is open to review.—Goodhart, Hartman Co. v. Kinney (Mo. App.) 679.

§ 544. If the record contains no statement of facts, alleged errors in instructions, admission of testimony, and the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict cannot be considered on appeal, unless there is error so apparent, when considered in connection with the pleading and verdict, as to show that the verdict was rendered by improper instructions, or upon an issue not made by the pleadings.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

§ 547. A party moving for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence as shown by affidavits must show by the bill of exceptions or statement of facts that the affidavits were brought to the attention of the court.—Colville v. Colville (Tex. Civ. App.) 870.

§ 548. Where a judgment appealed from is one that the court could have rendered on uncontroverted findings, it will be sustained, in the absence of a statement of the facts.—McLean v. Gulf & I. Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 578.

§ 549. The bill of exceptions must show that exceptions were taken to the denial of motions for new trial and in arrest, to require the court to review the ruling.—Tarr v. Crump (Mo. App.) 488.

(D) CONTENTS, MAKING, AND SETTLEMENT OF CASE OR STATEMENT OF FACTS.

§ 564. Rule governing reservation in the statement of facts of an exception to the admission of testimony, stated.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 564. Under Act May 25, 1907, §§ 5, 14 (Acts 30th Leg. 1907, pp. 510, 512, c. 24), held

(E) ABSTRACTS OF RECORD.

§ 585. Where the answer shown by the abstract was a general denial, and appellee filed no counter or additional abstract, she cannot contend that the trial answer contained a plea of contributory negligence.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 590. An appellant held not entitled to file a supplemental abstract of record without leave of court.—Davis v. Foster (Mo. App.) 1191.

(F) MAKING, FORM, AND REQUISITES OF TRANSCRIPT OR RETURN.

§ 597. Photographs filed as exhibits should be filed with the transcript in the circuit court and certified by the circuit court clerk with the transcript.—Southern Ry. Co. in Kentucky v. Schmidt (Ky.) 324.

§ 601. Under Act May 25, 1907 (Acts 31st Leg. 1907, pp. 509-513, c. 24), held that, on an appeal from the county court to the Court of Civil Appeals, the original statement of facts should be sent up.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Wall (Tex.) 131.

§ 601. Under Act May 25, 1907 (Laws 1907, p. 509, c. 24), the original statement of facts must be sent up on appeal.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

(H) TRANSMISSION, FILING, PRINTING, AND SERVICE OF COPIES.

§ 622. The transcript on writ of error need not be filed in the Court of Civil Appeals until after service of the writ.—Carney v. Menefee (Tex. Civ. App.) 1083.

(I) DEFECTS, OBJECTIONS, AMENDMENT, AND CORRECTION.

§ 635. Where appellant failed to comply with Supreme Court rule 9, requiring instructions given and refused to be set out in the abstract, the judgment will be affirmed.—Karatsfasky v. Fybus Bros. (Ark.) 1008.

§ 638. A statement of facts, not bearing the file mark of the trial clerk, will not be considered.—Belt v. Cetti (Tex. Civ. App.) 241.

§ 640. Appellant may file a new transcript of the record, where the first one is defective.—Nail v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

§ 641. Appellant cannot complain where appellee furnishes for his use the entire record of the case, nor can appellee object to the record he has himself filed.—Southern Ry. Co. in Kentucky v. Schmidt (Ky.) 324.

§ 644. Copying the statement of facts into the record on appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals, instead of sending up the original statement, as required by Gen. Laws 1907, p. 509, c. 24, is an irregularity which is waived, unless proper objection is made, and appellee held not to have objected within the time required by Court of Civil Appeals rule 8 (67 S. W. xiv), so that his objection to considering the record on that ground was waived.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

§ 649. Refusal of court to consider appellant's motion to correct the court's statement of facts held error.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

§ 654. Where a statement of facts does not show filing in the trial court, appellant should be permitted to correct the record.—Belt v. Cetti (Tex. Civ. App.) 241.

(J) CONCLUSIVENESS AND EFFECT, IMPEACHING AND CONTRADICTING.

§ 664. An agreed statement of facts will control, in case of a variance between the statement of facts and the bill of exceptions.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

(K) QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW.

§ 671. An abstract of record, not showing that a motion for new trial was filed, held to present nothing for review except the record proper.—Davis v. Foster (Mo. App.) 1191.

§ 679. The sufficiency of pleadings to support a judgment will not be reviewed on appeal, where neither the pleadings nor a statement of their substance is contained in the abstract.—Goodhart, Hartman Co. v. Kinney (Mo. App.) 679.

§ 692. A ruling excluding a question put to a witness will not be reviewed in the absence of an avowal as to what the answer would have been.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

§ 692. Before error can be predicated on the refusal to permit a witness to testify, it must appear from the bill of exceptions what the testimony would have been and that the testimony would have been beneficial to the party complaining.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 699. An instruction not incorporated in the bill of exceptions cannot be considered on appeal.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 709. An assignment that the court erred in refusing to hear evidence in support of a motion to tax the costs, failing to set out the evidence, is insufficient.—Unknown Owner v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 803.

(L) MATTERS NOT APPARENT OF RECORD.

§ 712. The record held to show affirmatively, as it must, error in exclusion of impeaching evidence.—Biggins v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Tex.) 125.

§ 713. Under District and County Court Rule 53 (20 S. W. xv), held, that the ruling on special exceptions to the petition are improperly shown by bills of exception.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 238.

XI. ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

Waiver of rules of court as to, see Courts, § 82.

§ 731. An assignment of error complaining of the verdict on the ground that it is contrary to the evidence is too general to require consideration on appeal.—Goodwin & McFarland v. Burton (Tex. Civ. App.) 587.

§ 739. A single assignment of error complaining of the refusal to give special charges not germane to each other, but presenting distinct propositions of law, will not be considered.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 742. The Court of Civil Appeals will consider an assignment of error complaining of an instruction, though the point is not presented in the brief by such proposition as is contemplated by the rules.—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.

quired by Court of Civil Appeals Rules, it need not be considered.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 742. Assignments of error cannot be considered, where they are grouped in appellants' brief, and propositions are made under two or more of them raising distinct questions of law.—Lowrance v. Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 551.

§ 742. An assignment of error not followed by a statement from the record will not be considered.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

§ 742. Assignments of error not submitted as propositions and not followed by propositions cannot be considered.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

§ 742. An assignment that the court erred in giving a charge because of the absence of evidence on which to base it, not followed by any statement of the evidence, may be disregarded on appeal.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 742. An assignment of error should be followed by a proper statement of the facts, and mere references to the record are not the statement required by the rules.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

§ 742. Where an assignment of error is not followed by a proper statement of the facts, as required by the rules, it may be disregarded.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

§ 742. A proposition which cannot be deduced from an assignment of error will not be considered on appeal.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 744. A statute requiring an appellant to file assignments of error in the clerk's office held mandatory.—Newman v. Satterwhite (Tex. Civ. App.) 1145.

§ 745. Assignments of error, filed in the lower court and accompanied by the proper certificate, will be considered on appeal, in the absence of objections.—Newman v. Satterwhite (Tex. Civ. App.) 1145.

§ 747. In the absence of cross-assignments of error calling in question the correctness of the trial court's ruling in striking out appellee's plea in reconvention on exception, the ruling cannot be reviewed.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

§ 750. Where the findings do not support the judgment, the Court of Civil Appeals will consider assignments of error attacking the judgment as unsupported by the evidence.—Belt v. Cetti (Tex. Civ. App.) 241.

§ 753. Where no assignments of error were copied into the transcript, error alleged in the brief cannot be considered on appeal unless it is shown by the record.—Engleman v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1089.

§ 754. As against a defendant, which filed no brief in the appellate court, held plaintiff, not having complained below, could not have the judgment reformed so as to be against such defendant for the whole amount of the verdict, though he would have been entitled thereto below.—Ft. Worth Light & Power Co. v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.) 831.

XII. BRIEFS.

§ 759. Breaking up an assignment of error in the brief by copying its several subdivisions separately and presenting propositions under each of them held not a compliance with the rules of the Court of Civil Appeals.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 1155.

§ 760. An assignment of error to exclusion of evidence cannot be considered; the ground of the objection to the evidence not being shown.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

XIII. DISMISSAL, WITHDRAWAL, OR ABANDONMENT.

§ 787. An appeal dismissed for failure of appellant to summon appellees within a reasonable time.—Birmingham v. Rice (Ark.) 1017.

§ 787. Power of Supreme Court to dismiss an appeal for delay under Kirby's Dig. § 1198, stated.—Birmingham v. Rice (Ark.) 1017.

XVI. REVIEW.

(A) SCOPE AND EXTENT IN GENERAL.

§ 837. In passing on the question of error in exclusion of evidence, held, that reference cannot be had to an allegation of a pleading properly stricken therefrom.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 837. No notice can be taken of an unsworn answer, in determining whether a trial court erred in dissolving a temporary injunction.—Dawson v. Baldrige (Tex. Civ. App.) 598.

§ 839. Where a jury was waived, and no motion for a new trial was made, nor a separation of the law and facts asked, the only question on appeal is the sufficiency of the pleadings to support the verdict.—Stone v. Lamb (Ky.) 942.

§ 852. That the evidence strongly preponderates in favor of the verdict is of weight in determining whether it resulted from an alleged erroneous theory presented by an instruction.—Houston & T. O. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 854. A verdict sustaining an attachment on each ground alleged should be upheld, though erroneous as to one of the grounds, where the others are valid.—Seasinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.

(C) PARTIES ENTITLED TO ALLEGE ERROR.

§ 882. An instruction, though erroneous, is not ground for reversal where identical with an instruction offered by the complaining party.—Camden Interstate Ry. Co. v. Lester (Ky.) 283.

§ 882. Where the instructions given for plaintiff were correct and those given for defendant were erroneous, defendant is not entitled to complain on review that the instructions are conflicting.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 882. A defendant voluntarily treating the issue of contributory negligence as one for the jury held not entitled to complain of plaintiff's instructions submitting the issue to the jury.—Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 493.

§ 882. Errors in declarations of law invited by appellant held not available on appeal.—Campbell v. Tinker (Mo. App.) 660.

§ 882. Error in a personal injury action against an employer in authorizing recovery on a theory not pleaded held not ground for reversal.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 882. The error of submitting a cause on an erroneous theory cannot be said to have been invited by appellant by requests for instructions, where such requests were offered in explanation and amplification of the general instructions.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Pickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 1133.

(E) PRESUMPTIONS.

§ 907. The decree in a chancery case, shown by the record to have been heard on oral evidence, held presumed to be correct; error not appearing on the face of the record, and the evidence not having been brought into the record.—Barringer v. Bratcher (Ark.) 1015.

§ 907. Where the record does not show that any action was taken by the trial court on defendant's exceptions to the petition, error therein, if any, is presumed to have been waived.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 909. In view of recital of record that an officer gave notice of an election on creation of a school district, it will be presumed he published it as required by law.—Taylor v. Cundiff (Ky.) 879.

§ 909. Where there is neither a statement of facts nor conclusions of fact in the record, it must be presumed in favor of the judgment that the evidence warranted sustaining a plea of limitations.—Schneider v. Schneider (Tex. Civ. App.) 789.

§ 916. Where, on appeal in an action for breach of contract, the transcript of the testimony contains a statement that the contract was put in evidence, but it is not made a part of the record, and the transcript states that the contract was correctly set forth in the pleadings, the court may assume that the contract put in evidence was correctly set forth in the petition.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Fenley (Tex. Civ. App.) 845.

§ 916. The ruling of a trial court on a plea not in the record will be presumed to be correct, unless the contrary is shown.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 927. On review of the direction of a verdict, the question is whether there was evidence to warrant a verdict for the adverse party.—McGrory v. Ultima Thule, A. & M. Ry. Co. (Ark.) 710.

§ 928. Where appellant fails to set out instructions in the abstract, it will be presumed that they were correct.—Bray Clothing Co. v. McKinney (Ark.) 406.

§ 931. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1907, art. 1331, and in circumstances stated, held that a trial court will be presumed to have found favorably to plaintiff on an issue not submitted.—Lowrance v. Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 551.

§ 934. Where findings are sufficient to support the judgment, it will be presumed to have been based thereon, in the absence of a showing to the contrary in the record.—Lowrance v. Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 551.

§ 934. Where only a general demurrer was interposed to a plea of reconvention, and the demurrer was not acted upon by the court, every intendment that could have been indulged in favor of the plea had the demurrer been insisted on should be given it on appeal, where the judgment is assailed on account of the insufficiency of the plea.—Knox v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1142.

§ 938. An abstract of record held not to show that there was a valid extension of the time in which to file a bill of exceptions.—Goodhart, Hartman Co. v. Kinney (Mo. App.) 679.

§ 938. In the absence of a bill of exceptions signed by the judge or bystanders, it will be assumed on appeal that a qualification of a bill of exceptions presented by appellant was made with appellant's consent.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

§ 939. Where the only part of the record proper that is brought up on appeal is a certified copy of the judgment, which is regular on its face, the court will presume that the record proper is sufficient.—Goodhart, Hartman Co. v. Kinney (Mo. App.) 679.

(F) DISCRETION OF LOWER COURT.

§ 945. An appellate court will not review the ruling of the trial court in matters of discretion, unless prejudice appears.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 959. Denial of trial amendment held not to be reversed unless it allowed the adverse parties to succeed on a technical point which might have been determined against them without prejudice to their substantial rights.—Fresier v. Harrison (Mo. App.) 108.

§ 959. Refusal or allowance of a reply to an answer setting up new matter is discretionary with the trial court, and will not be reviewed on appeal, unless abused.—Tarr v. Crump (Mo. App.) 488.

(G) QUESTIONS OF FACT, VERDICTS, AND FINDINGS.

§ 1001. The court on appeal in determining whether there is sufficient evidence to sustain the verdict must take that view of it which is most favorable to the successful party.—Priest v. Hodges (Ark.) 253.

§ 1001. A verdict supported by evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 81.

§ 1001. A verdict based on contradictory and highly improbable testimony of an unreliable witness will not be allowed to stand.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Wiley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1127.

§ 1002. Controverted questions of fact are for the jury in the trial court.—A. G. Brown & Co. v. McKnight (Ark.) 408.

§ 1002. A verdict on conflicting evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

§ 1002. A jury finding upon conflicting evidence is conclusive on appeal.—International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 758.

§ 1008. Findings of fact in a case tried before the court will not be disturbed unless clearly wrong.—Ross v. Thomas (Ky.) 948.

§ 1008. Ordinarily findings are conclusive on appeal.—Kingman-St. Louis Implement Co. v. Bantley Bros. Hardware Co. (Mo. App.) 500.

§ 1009. A finding of the chancellor supported by a preponderance of the evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.—West v. Burks (Ark.) 397.

§ 1009. Where on appeal the mind is left in doubt, the finding and judgment of the chancellor exercises a controlling influence.—Rathfon v. Gaines (Ky.) 937.

§ 1009. A finding of fact by the chancellor on conflicting evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.—Travis v. Taylor (Ky.) 988.

§ 1009. Though in equity the Supreme Court may weigh the evidence, it will defer largely to the chancellor's judgment.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 482.

§ 1009. The Court of Appeals in an equity case will defer largely, on disputed matters, to the conclusions of the trial judge based on oral testimony heard by him.—Ball v. Reyburn (Mo. App.) 524.

§ 1010. A motion to set aside an execution sale lies on the law side of a court, and the evidence taken at the hearing cannot be weighed on appeal.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

§ 1010. An appellate court will not substitute different conclusions of fact for those of the trial court, where it cannot say that the findings have not sufficient evidence to support them.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

§ 1011. A finding of the trial court on conflicting evidence will be sustained on appeal.—Jones v. Plummer (Mo. App.) 109.

§ 1011. A finding on conflicting evidence held conclusive on appeal.—McKallip v. Collins Bros. (Tex. Civ. App.) 546.

§ 1011. Findings on conflicting evidence not acquiesced in may be revised in a proper case from the statement of facts.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

§ 1012. Findings of the chancellor not against the preponderance of the evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

§ 1018. There being evidence that would have warranted a verdict for more than the damages found the judgment will not be reversed as excessive.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 780.

§ 1024. The finding of the trial court on the issue of whether a juror's opinion disqualifies him will not be set aside, except for manifest error.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

(H) HARMLESS ERROR.

§ 1027. Where the action was for work done under a contract with defendant's agent, and, in the alternative, for the value of work done with the knowledge and consent of its agent, and the jury found for plaintiff in the terms of the contract, any errors as to the question of quantum meruit could not have been misleading.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

§ 1028. Where the correct judgment was rendered on the undisputed evidence, any error of procedure was immaterial.—Wright v. Hooker (Tex. Civ. App.) 765.

§ 1033. Certain declarations of law, if erroneous, held not prejudicial.—Campbell v. Tinker (Mo. App.) 660.

§ 1033. A connecting carrier against which a judgment for the entire damages to a shipment of horses might have been entered cannot complain of an error in entering judgment against it for only one-half of the damages, and under the interstate commerce act (Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 20, 24 Stat. 386 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3169]), as amended in 1906 (Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 598 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909]), the receiving carrier cannot complain of a division of the damages.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Fenley (Tex. Civ. App.) 845.

§ 1033. A party cannot complain on appeal merely because the judgment awards against it a less penalty than the pleadings and facts would have authorized, save for the limitation of the prayer for recovery.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Andrews, Reynolds & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1101.

§ 1039. Whether the answer filed below contained a plea of contributory negligence is immaterial on appeal, where that issue was not submitted to the jury.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 1042. Refusal to strike an allegation of an answer held harmless; the matter not having been submitted to the jury.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 1043. Appearance of witnesses before the closing of the hearing of evidence cured any error in the denial of an application for a continuance because of their absence.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

§ 1043. A carrier in an action for injuries to a passenger held not prejudiced by the denial of an application for a continuance for the absence of witnesses.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

§ 1044. The error of the court in directing a compulsory reference, and thereby depriving a party of his right to trial by jury, is reversible.—Snyder v. Crutcher (Mo. App.) 489.

§ 1046. An erroneous remark by the court that he did not believe a question not objected to was proper held not prejudicial.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 1050. Evidence of a conversation consisting of self-serving declarations held harmless.—Ellerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

§ 1050. Where the ground relied on for a recovery is the commission of a negligent act in one respect, it is prejudicial to permit evidence establishing another and different negligent act.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 352.

§ 1050. The error in admitting immaterial evidence not influencing the verdict is harmless.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 1050. The admission of opinion evidence held harmless error.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

§ 1050. In a local option election contest, the admission of certain testimony, if error, held harmless.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 1051. A party cannot complain of the omission of testimony in support of a fact established by other evidence received without objection.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 1051. Defendant's objection to certain evidence held waived by his consent to the introduction of a part of plaintiff's written statement containing practically the same facts.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Malloy (Tex. Civ. App.) 721.

§ 1051. In a local option election contest, the admission of certain testimony held not prejudicial.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 1051. Admission of a letter from the land commissioner to show an award of land to defendant in an action to try title to the land, if error, was harmless, where the award to defendant was otherwise shown.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1135.

§ 1051. Admission of improper evidence held not prejudicial.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 1155.

§ 1051. Where it was admitted that a certain person was the common source of title, the admission of evidence of a deed of the property to him held not error.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 1053. In an action for malpractice, the error in permitting evidence as to the physician's policy of insurance against accidents held not reversible, in view of the evidence and the instructions of the court.—Samuels v. Willis (Ky.) 339.

§ 1053. In trover for cattle, error in admitting evidence of a difficulty which occurred when the cattle were taken was harmless, where the court did not submit the issue of exemplary damages.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 1054. In an action against a railroad for damages to plaintiff's shipments of cabbages, the erroneous admission of certain evidence held not prejudicial to defendant.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 1056. In a local option election contest, any error in excluding certain testimony held harmless.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 1056. Where there was no specific allegation as to certain irregularities, and the case was tried without a jury, the erroneous rejection of testimony as to such irregularities was not ground for reversal.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 1056. The exclusion of a letter to prove a fact concerning which there was no controversy was without prejudice.—Little v. Rich (Tex. Civ. App.) 1077.

§ 1057. Sustaining an objection to a question held harmless.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 1058. The refusal to allow defendant's physician to examine plaintiff's injuries in the presence of the jury held harmless error.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Browning (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 1060. Remarks of plaintiff's attorney in an action for personal injuries held harmless error.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Browning (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 1062. The erroneous submission of such an issue as to the meaning of a written contract to a jury is harmless error, except where the jury places a wrong construction on the instrument.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

§ 1062. In an action against a carrier for damages caused by the ejection of plaintiff's wife, and for loss of time to plaintiff caused thereby, any error in submitting the issue of loss of time without proof of the value and amount thereof was cured by requiring plaintiff to remit a sum sufficient to cover that item of damage.—International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 753.

§ 1064. The use of certain words in an instruction, as to duty to construct drains through a road so as not to overflow upper proprietors with surface water, held not prejudicial.—Ames Shovel & Tool Co. v. Anderson (Ark.) 1013.

§ 1064. Defendant held not prejudiced because an instruction on contributory negligence contained the words "that plaintiff saw or might by the exercise of ordinary care have seen," instead of the words "that plaintiff knew or might by the exercise of ordinary care have known."—Ellerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

§ 1064. An instruction in an action against a carrier to recover for injuries to a passenger held harmless error.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 1064. Error in an instruction upon the weight and credibility of plaintiff's testimony held prejudicial.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 1064. An error in an instruction in an action against a carrier for personal injuries proper culverts, an instruction, if erroneous as being on the weight of evidence, held not prejudicial under the evidence.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Suter (Tex. Civ. App.) 215.

§ 1064. In an action for wrongful attachment, an instruction held not prejudicial to plaintiff.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 1064. Error in submitting issue of defendant telegraph company's negligence in failing to deliver telegram at a certain time held harmless.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 717.

§ 1064. Request that the jury bring in a verdict as speedily as possible consistent with their duties held not error.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

§ 1066. The giving of an abstract instruction is not ground for reversal where the instructions when read together could not have worked prejudicially to the party complaining.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 1066. As under Rev. St. 1899, § 4123 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2239), it is essential in attachment proceedings for rent that the jury find defendant liable for the rent, certain instruction held not prejudicial error.—Sessinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.

§ 1068. An instruction submitting a rule for estimating damages, including the element of loss of earnings, is reversible error, where the evidence does not sustain that element.—Leach v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 510.

§ 1068. An instruction in an action to recover for architect's plans held not harmless error.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

§ 1068. In an action against a carrier for injuries to an alighting passenger, an erroneous charge held not prejudicial.—Southworth v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 861.

§ 1067. In a street car passenger's action for injuries claimed to have been sustained by the car starting while he was boarding it, held not reversible error to refuse a requested instruction upon the care required by defendant, in view of other instructions given.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 1068. Appellant held not prejudiced by erroneous instructions submitting the question of his adverse possession, which the evidence failed to sustain.—Ramsey v. Morrow (Ky.) 296.

§ 1068. An erroneous charge in a personal injury action held not prejudicial in view of the size of the verdict.—Town of Bellevue v. England (Ky.) 994.

§ 1068. Where the verdict was correct on the merits, it will not be disturbed for error in instructions.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 1068. Error in an instruction authorizing double recovery of damages is presumptively prejudicial.—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.

§ 1068. Where the verdict was correct under the evidence, errors in instructions were not prejudicial.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

§ 1068. The error in an instruction as to exemplary damages in an action for wrongful attachment held harmless.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 1068. A charge as to the damages recoverable for the death of a minor child held not where counsel had agreed that the testimony should be read provided all of it was read, held not prejudicial error under the circumstances.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 1071. An erroneous finding of fact was immaterial, where it did not affect the other findings, which were supported by the evidence.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Alsop & Gray (Tex. Civ. App.) 194.

§ 1073. In an action against a railroad for damages to plaintiff's shipments of cabbages, defendant held not prejudiced under the evidence by a judgment based on the market value of the cabbages at the point of shipment.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 1074. The refusal to stay process for the enforcement of a decree rendered on constructive service until a retrial on the merits is had is not prejudicial where on the final hearing the court properly refused to set aside the decree.—West v. Burks (Ark.) 397.

§ 1074. Error in failure of court to consider appellant's motion to correct court's statement of facts held harmless.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

(K) SUBSEQUENT APPEALS.

§ 1097. The decision on appeal is the law of the case on a subsequent appeal.—Loughridge v. Ball (Ky.) 321.

§ 1097. The decision of the Court of Appeals on a former appeal, directing certain instructions to be given on remand, held binding on the Court of Appeals on a subsequent appeal.—Lexington Ry. Co. v. Woodward (Ky.) 965.

§ 1097. An instruction approved by the court on appeal is the law of the case on a subsequent appeal.—Van Cleve v. St. Louis, M. & S. E. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 116.

§ 1097. The decision of the Court of Civil Appeals is the law of the case on a subsequent appeal.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Redus (Tex. Civ. App.) 208.

§ 1099. Questions that are raised or could have been raised on an appeal held concluded on a second appeal.—Jackson's Adm'rs v. McHargue (Ky.) 944.

XVII. DETERMINATION AND DISPOSITION OF CAUSE.

(A) DECISION IN GENERAL.

§ 1106. Where an action is brought for an amount in an amended petition larger than the jurisdiction of the county court, the appeal will not be dismissed where the original petition is not in the record, but will be remanded.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Flory (Tex. Civ. App.) 1116.

(B) AFFIRMANCE.

§ 1140. In an action for the balance due for railroad construction work, including clearing stations of the right of way, error in refusing to instruct that plaintiff could not recover for certain work held obviated by deducting the contract price of such work from the verdict.—A. G. Brown & Co. v. McKnight (Ark.) 409.

§ 1140. Error in judgment held cured by remittitur.—Price v. Greer (Ark.) 1009.

§ 1140. A cause held not to be reversed for the allowance of a recovery in excess of that pleaded, where plaintiff offers to remit the excess.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Graffeo (Tex. Civ. App.) 873.

(C) MODIFICATION.

§ 1151. Certain relief granted to complainant on appeal only on payment of costs by complainant.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

§ 1151. The court, on appeal from a judgment against a carrier for damages to live stock, held authorized to reform the judgment and render judgment for a specified sum on the shipper remitting the excess.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Rogers (Tex. Civ. App.) 738.

§ 1151. That a judgment for double usurious payments of interest was excessive by the amount of interest awarded would not necessitate a reversal.—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.

§ 1151. Error in including interest in a judgment for damages can be remedied by the appellate court.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

§ 1152. A decree on the report of the commissioner may be modified on review, though there were no exceptions filed to the report before confirmation.—Webster v. Cadwallader (Ky.) 327.

(D) REVERSAL.

§ 1175. Where the uncontradicted evidence failed to establish a cause of action, the court, on appeal from a judgment for plaintiff, will render the proper judgment.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 234.

§ 1175. Where the evidence was fully developed on the trial, the court on appeal from an erroneous judgment will reverse it and render a proper judgment.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Rogers (Tex. Civ. App.) 738.

§ 1177. New trial held necessary upon reversal, where a question of fact was involved and a general verdict was rendered.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

§ 1178. When a judgment is reversed, because exceptions have been erroneously sustained to pleadings, a judgment cannot be rendered on evidence which would have been admissible under the pleadings, if the exceptions had not been sustained.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 1178. Where a judgment is reversed, the Court of Civil Appeals cannot render judgment for the other party, based on evidence not admitted on the trial.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

(F) MANDATE AND PROCEEDINGS IN LOWER COURT.

§ 1195. Where instructions have been approved by the appellate court as the law of the case, only such instructions should be given on a retrial where the evidence on the retrial is the same as on the former trial.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 352.

APPEARANCE.

§ 24. Defective service of process held waived by special appearance for the purpose of demurrer and afterwards filing an answer.—Lohefener v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. (Mo. App.) 515.

APPLIANCES.

Liability of employer for defects, see Master and Servant, §§ 101-129.

APPLICATION.

Of assets of partnership, see Partnership, §§ 181, 186.

APPOINTMENT.

Of corporate officers, see Corporations, § 281.
Of executor or administrator, see Executors and Administrators, §§ 19-21.

ARBITRATION AND AWARD.

See Reference.

ARCHITECTS.

Contract to furnish plans and specifications, action for breach, see Contracts, §§ 338, 346, 353.

ARGUMENT OF COUNSEL.

In civil actions, see Trial, §§ 110-133.
In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 714-726.

ARMY AND NAVY.

Right of member of national guards employed in service of United States Army to vote, see Elections, § 74.

ARREST.

See Bail.
Illegal arrest, see False Imprisonment.

II. ON CRIMINAL CHARGES.

Presumptions as to regularity of warrant issued by judge of county court, see Evidence, § 82.

§ 65. Where a warrant for plaintiff's arrest was issued in B. county, but no warrant was issued or transferred to defendants in G. county, when they arrested plaintiff without a warrant, the arrest was wrongful under White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. art. 258.—Little v. Rich (Tex. Civ. App.) 1077.

ARREST OF JUDGMENT.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 972, 974.

ARSON.

Charge of, as slander, see Libel and Slander, § 7.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.I. CIVIL LIABILITY.*(A). ACTS CONSTITUTING ASSAULT OR BATTERY AND LIABILITY THEREFOR.

§ 3. Recovery for accidental, though negligent, act may not be had under complaint for assault and battery.—Biggins v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Tex.) 125.

§ 13. Where reasonable inferences from the evidence justify it, held, the question of defendant has provoked the difficulty, depriving him of the right of self-defense, is properly submitted.—Johnson v. Daily (Mo. App.) 530.

(B) ACTIONS.

§ 26. Defendant in an action for assault and battery held to have the burden of justification.—Johnson v. Daily (Mo. App.) 530.

§ 38. As part of the damages for assault and battery, held, there may be recovery for any humiliation and disgrace shown to have been suffered therefrom.—Johnson v. Daily (Mo. App.) 530.

§ 43. Instruction in an action for assault and battery held not misleading.—Johnson v. Daily (Mo. App.) 530.

Of loss on insured, see Insurance, § 188.
Of tax, see Taxation, §§ 411, 453.

ASSETS.

Of estate of decedent, see Executors and Administrators, § 43.
Of partnership, see Partnership, §§ 181, 186.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

See Appeal and Error, §§ 731-754.

ASSIGNMENTS.

Admeasurement or assignment of dower, see Dower, § 59.
Fraud as to creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances.
In bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, §§ 148, 156.
Of contracts of sale of standing timber, see Logs and Logging, § 8.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

(A) PROPERTY, ESTATES, AND RIGHTS ASSIGNABLE.

§ 8. A deed by which the grantors attempted to convey their interest in land owned by their mother in fee during the latter's lifetime, subject to her use for life, held void.—Spears v. Spaw (Ky.) 275.

§ 8. A covenant of warranty in a void deed of an expectancy held also void.—Spears v. Spaw (Ky.) 275.

ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS.

See Bankruptcy, §§ 148-308.

ASSOCIATIONS.

Mutual benefit insurance associations, see Insurance, §§ 694-755.

ASSUMED NAMES.

Chattel mortgage executed under, see Chattel Mortgages, § 150.

ASSUMPSIT, ACTION OF.

See Money Received; Work and Labor.

ASSUMPTION.

Of risk by employé, see Master and Servant, §§ 203-219, 280, 295.

ATTACHMENT.

See Execution; Garnishment; Sequestration. Exemptions, see Exemptions; Homestead.

I. NATURE AND GROUNDS.

(B) GROUNDS OF ATTACHMENT.

Default in payment of rent, see Landlord and Tenant, § 229.

VII. QUASHING, VACATING, DISSOLUTION, OR ABANDONMENT.

§ 228. An affidavit for attachment should not be quashed for uncertainty in the amount sued for, where the original petition alleges rea-nonresidence should not be quashed because of statements in the complaint that defendant is temporarily within the state.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

IX. RETURN.

§ 324. The return of an attachment signed by a deputy constable, which was in fact served by a deputy sheriff, may be amended by the sheriff.—Kramer v. Lilley (Tex. Civ. App.) 735.

XI. WRONGFUL ATTACHMENT.

Action for, in justices' court, see Justices of the Peace, § 86.

Impeachment of witness in action for, see Witnesses, § 331½.

§ 375. The measure of damages for wrongful attachment defined.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 375. In an action for wrongful attachment, depreciation in value of the goods is an element of actual but not of exemplary damages.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 377. One sued for wrongful attachment held not relieved from liability for exemplary damages because he acted on advice of counsel.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

ATTENDANCE.

Of juror, see Jury, § 58.

ATTORNEY AND CLIENT.

Absence of counsel as ground for new trial, see New Trial, § 86.

Argument and conduct of counsel at trial in civil actions, see Trial, §§ 110-133.

Argument and conduct of counsel at trial in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 714-726.

Attorneys as public officers, see District and Prosecuting Attorneys.

Attorney's fees in action on note, see Bills and Notes, § 534.

Attorney's fees in garnishment, see Garnishment, § 191.

Attorneys in fact, see Principal and Agent. Harmless error in argument and conduct of counsel, see Appeal and Error, § 1060.

Validity of contract by attorney to secure contract from county, see Contracts, § 131.

II. RETAINER AND AUTHORITY.

§ 76. The death of the client terminates the relation of attorney and client.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

IV. COMPENSATION AND LIEN OF ATTORNEY.

(A) FEES AND OTHER REMUNERATION.

Recovery in particular actions or proceedings.

See Divorce, § 197.

By county taxpayer, see Counties, § 196.

On injunction bond, see Injunction, § 252.

§ 143. Unconscionable bargain for attorney's services defined.—Ball v. Reyburn (Mo. App.) 524.

§ 143. A contract to pay $500 for attorney's services in representing defendant in a suit to enjoin a city from lowering a street grade held not unconscionable.—Ball v. Reyburn (Mo. App.) 524.

(B) LIEN.

§ 182. Under St. 1909, § 489 (Russell's St. § 1806), an attorney successfully prosecuting an action by a taxpayer to recover county money illegally appropriated held not entitled to assert a lien on the money recovered.—Marion County v. Rives & McChord (Ky.) 309.

AUTHORITY.

Of agent, see Principal and Agent, §§ 69-79, 119-136.

Of broker, see Brokers, § 44.

Of justice of the peace, see Justices of the Peace, § 47.

BAILII. IN CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

§ 56. In view of Code Cr. Proc. 1896, art. 443, relating to the requisites of the citation in proceedings to forfeit a bail bond, it is not necessary in such proceedings to show that accused was arrested, so that it is immaterial whether the capias was valid.—Trail v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 714.

§ 58. It is not necessary that a bail bond should state whether accused was charged by information or indictment.—Trail v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 714.

§ 76. Though a bail bond in a criminal case be a joint obligation in terms, the Court of Criminal Appeals will construe it a joint and several obligation.—Trail v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 714.

§ 77. A judgment nisi for forfeiture of bail need not state whether the accused was charged by information or indictment.—Trail v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 714.

§ 77. Since it is not necessary that either the bail bond or the judgment nisi state whether accused was charged by information or complaint, that the judgment stated that he was charged by information and the bond stated that he was charged by complaint was an immaterial variance.—Trail v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 714.

BAILMENT.

Particular species of bailments, and bailments incident to particular occupations.

See Carriers, §§ 51-193; Innkeepers; Pledges.

BALLOTS.

See Elections, §§ 180, 190.

BANKRUPTCY.III. ASSIGNMENT, ADMINISTRATION, AND DISTRIBUTION OF BANKRUPT'S ESTATE.*(B) ASSIGNMENT, AND TITLE, RIGHTS, AND REMEDIES OF TRUSTEE IN GENERAL.

§ 148. The life estate of a bankrupt acquired by will after the adjudication of his bankruptcy does not pass to his trustee.—Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 377.

§ 156. A petition of intervention filed by a trustee in bankruptcy claiming the estate created by will held insufficient where it failed to show that testator died before the adjudication in bankruptcy.—Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 377.

§ 156. Where a petition of intervention filed by a trustee in bankruptcy failed to show that the testator died before the adjudication in bankruptcy, held, that it must be presumed that the adjudication in bankruptcy was before testator's death.—Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 377.

§ 156. The wife and children of a bankrupt held necessary parties to a petition of intervention filed by the trustee in bankruptcy to reach the bankrupt's estate under a will.—Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 377.

(C) PREFERENCES AND TRANSFERS BY BANKRUPT, AND ATTACHMENTS AND OTHER LIENS.

Bank taking checks in good faith, paying part of proceeds and receiving balance on deposit as holder in due course, see Bills and Notes, § 356.

§ 188. A lien on the proceeds of property sold by a bankrupt held not a preference, nor invalid for want of record.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 195. The lien of a garnishor with notice of a prior claim and the lien of a trustee in bankruptcy to whom money was subsequently transferred held inferior to such claim.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

(E) ACTIONS BY OR AGAINST TRUSTEE.

Cure of defects in pleading, see Pleading, § 403. General demurrer to petition of intervention by trustee, see Pleading, § 205.

Privilege of co-defendants as to venue, see Venue, § 22.

§ 288. Equity looks upon that as done which ought to have been done.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 295. An action against a trustee in bankruptcy by a claimant of money paid to the trustee by agents of the bankrupt as the property of the bankrupt may be brought in a state court, under Act Cong. Aug. 13, 1883, c. 866, § 3, 25 Stat. 436 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582).—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 295. An attempt by a trustee in bankruptcy in an action brought against him in a state court to have an order dismissing a garnishment affecting the property in question set aside held to be a waiver of objections to the jurisdiction of the state court.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 299. Agents of a bankrupt who held a fund claimed by plaintiff, who pay it to the trustee in bankruptcy after demand has been made on them, may be joined in an action against the trustee to recover the money.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 303. Evidence in an action against the trustee of a bankrupt and the agents of the bankrupt to recover a sum of money paid by the agents to the trustee and claimed by plaintiff held to sustain a finding for the plaintiff.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 304. Certain facts held sufficient to take the right to recover the amount paid in satisfaction of a note to the jury or to the court sitting as a jury, as having been the payment of the individual debt of a partner out of firm assets.—Blake v. Third Nat. Bank (Mo.) 641.

V. RIGHTS, REMEDIES, AND DISCHARGE OF BANKRUPT.

§ 391. An appeal and supersedeas not operating to vacate a judgment, but only to state proceedings thereunder, where a petition in bankruptcy was not filed until more than four

BANKS AND BANKING.

III. FUNCTIONS AND DEALINGS.

(B) REPRESENTATION OF BANK BY OFFICERS AND AGENTS.

§ 102. Manager of a private bank conducted by a partnership held without authority to bind it by a payment of the individual debt of a partner out of firm assets.—Blake v. Third Nat. Bank (Mo.) 641.

BAR.

Of action by former adjudication, see Judgment, §§ 570-622.

Of action by limitation, see Limitation of Actions, § 167.

Of dower, see Dower, §§ 46, 47.

Pleas in bar, see Pleading, § 121.

BATTERY.

See Assault and Battery.

BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

Mutual benefit insurance associations, see Insurance, §§ 694-755.

Sufficiency of service of process by publication in action to restrain merger, see Process, § 87.

BENEFITS.

Acceptance of, as ground of estoppel, see Estoppel, § 76.

BEQUESTS.

See Wills.

BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see Evidence, § 158.

BIAS.

Of juror, see Jury, §§ 88-142.

BIDS.

At mortgage sale, see Mortgages, § 518.

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.

See Exceptions, Bill of.

BILL OF EXCHANGE.

See Bills and Notes.

BILL OF LADING.

See Carriers, § 51.

BILLS AND NOTES.

Effect of usury, see Usury, § 26.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

(C) EXECUTION AND DELIVERY.

Delivery in escrow, see Escrows, § 12.

(E) CONSIDERATION.

§ 92. A note executed by a legatee to a contestant to procure the withdrawal of the con-

§ 102. In an action on a note, an answer held to state an equitable defense.—Allen v. Herrick Hardware Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1157.

V. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES ON INDORSEMENT OR TRANSFER.

(B) INDORSEMENT FOR TRANSFER.

§ 299. The failure of the payee to fix the liability of the indorser by suit, as provided by Rev. St. 1895, art. 304, may be waived by the indorser.—Ketterson v. Inscho (Tex. Civ. App.) 626.

(D) BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

§ 333. The drawer of a check on a bank notified the bank through its president to refuse payment. The check was later bought for a valuable consideration by a firm of which the president of the bank was one of the partners. Held, that notice to the president was not notice to the firm.—Flynn v. Bank of Mineral Wells (Tex. Civ. App.) 848.

§ 356. A bank held a holder in due course of a check under St. 1909, § 3720b, subsecs. 51, 52 (Russell's St. §§ 1920, 1921).—Chouteau Trust & Banking Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 279.

§ 363. Though a bank was a bona fide holder of a check for value when it acquired it, it could not recover thereon against the maker if he pleaded and showed that it had parted with its interest and was simply suing for the benefit of an indorser who had paid back to the bank the money it had paid him.—Chouteau Trust & Banking Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 279.

§ 368. Under St. 1909, § 3720b, subsec. 57 (Russell's St. § 1926), held, that the holder in due course of a check received from an indorser could, upon dishonor, sue both the maker and indorsers or any one of them for the full amount of the check.—Chouteau Trust & Banking Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 279.

§ 369. A maker of a note held estopped as against an innocent purchaser thereof from urging that the note had never been delivered to the payee.—Goodwin & McFarland v. Burton (Tex. Civ. App.) 587.

§ 370. That the balance due on a void contract is the consideration for a draft is no defense to its payment in the hands of innocent purchasers for a valuable consideration.—Flynn v. Bank of Mineral Wells (Tex. Civ. App.) 848.

VII. PAYMENT AND DISCHARGE.

Notice to payee's agent of insolvency of maker at time of payment, see Principal and Agent, § 179.

VIII. ACTIONS.

Restraining action, see Injunction, § 26.

Venue of action against maker of note and executrix of indorser as dependent on residence of parties, see Venue, § 22.

§ 452. The right to sue the buyer on a note for the price is not affected because, after the maturity of the note, the seller executed, without consideration and when he had no title, a bill of sale of the goods to the indorser at the latter's request.—Ketterson v. Inscho (Tex. Civ. App.) 626.

§ 460. The indorsee of a note may sue in one action the maker and the independent executrix of the payee on his indorsement of the note.—Goodwin & McFarland v. Burton (Tex. Civ. App.) 587.

§ 489. In an action on a note it was held proper under the issues to receive evidence of account books and other testimony to show from what transactions the indebtedness accrued.—Avery v. Tucker (Mo. App.) 672.

§ 498. Metal checks issued to employés, by which the employer promises to pay a certain amount to redeem the same, are presumed in the hands of holders for value to be based on an adequate consideration.—Kentucky Coal Mining Co. v. Mattingly (Ky.) 850.

§ 520. Evidence held to warrant a finding that a note secured by a mortgage had not been obtained by duress.—Wright v. Bayless (Ky.) 918.

§ 527. Certain proof held to prima facie show that a note had been paid by the maker.—Gray v. Tribue (Tex. Civ. App.) 808.

§ 534. The mere clerical error of omitting the pronoun "I" in the blank space of a printed note providing for an attorney's fee is immaterial in an action on the note.—Rutherford v. Gaines (Tex. Civ. App.) 866.

§ 534. Plaintiff held entitled to an allowance of attorney's fee provided in a note for the purchase price of land.—Rutherford v. Gaines (Tex. Civ. App.) 866.

BLASPHEMY.

§ 1. Reply of defendant while testifying as a witness before a grand jury, "It is none of your damn business," held not to constitute cursing and swearing in a public place.—Morrison v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 541.

BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

Of bill of exchange or promissory note, see Bills and Notes, §§ 333-370.

Of lands, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 229-245.

BONDS.

Sureties on bonds, see Principal and Surety.

Bonds for performance of duties of trust or office.

See Trusts, § 378.

Husband as administrator of community, see Husband and Wife, § 276.

Bonds in judicial proceedings.

See Bail; Injunction, §§ 250, 252.

Bonds on appeal, see Appeal and Error, §§ 373-392.

BOOK AGENTS.

See Hawkers and Peddlers, § 3.

BOOKS OF ACCOUNT.

As evidence, see Evidence, § 354.

BOUNDARIES.

Of city, see Municipal Corporations, § 35.

Of school district, see Schools and School Districts, §§ 24-42.

I. DESCRIPTION.

§ 3. The rule that distances yield to courses, and both to natural objects or marked monuments, does not apply where proximate certainty may be accomplished by changing a course instead of the distance.—Ramsey v. Morrow (Ky.) 296.

§ 7. The rule for establishing a lost stake corner to run the courses from known corners to the intersection of the lines cannot be applied, where the lines so extended would never meet.—Ramsey v. Morrow (Ky.) 296.

§ 7. In a suit to determine a lost corner, a marked line held to establish itself, though the corner was not marked.—Ramsey v. Morrow (Ky.) 296.

§ 9. A description in a deed held not fatally defective for failure to state the length of two of the lines necessary to include the quantity, and because of the omission of a line necessary to close the survey.—Tompkins v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 581.

§ 10. Boundaries of lots, conveyed in accordance with the plat, will not be affected by the transfer of another lot under a prior plat.—Toudouse v. Keller (Tex. Civ. App.) 185.

II. EVIDENCE, ASCERTAINMENT, AND ESTABLISHMENT.

Judicial notice of boundaries, see Criminal Law, § 304.

§ 40. In an action to establish a lost corner, whether certain marks, designated an "ancient line," were made by the surveyor or by another, held for the jury.—Ramsey v. Morrow (Ky.) 296.

§ 40. In ejectment, whether a patent included all of the land in controversy or a part of it held for the jury.—Loughridge v. Ball (Ky.) 321.

§ 55. Width of a lot, in a plat in which the width of all are specified except that one, will be the length of the block minus the sum of the width of the other lots.—Toudouse v. Keller (Tex. Civ. App.) 185.

BRANDS.

Evidence of other offenses in prosecution for defacing, see Criminal Law, § 369.

Indictment in language of statute for defacement of, see Indictment and Information, § 110.

On lumber, see Logs and Logging, § 37.

BREACH.

Of condition, see Insurance, §§ 255-282, 330, 335.

Of contract, see Contracts, §§ 230, 322; Sales, §§ 150-181; Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 129-184.

Of contract to sublease land for mining, see Mines and Minerals, § 62.

Of covenant, see Insurance, §§ 330, 335.

Of warranty, see Insurance, §§ 255-282, 330, 335.

BRIDGES.

I. ESTABLISHMENT, CONSTRUCTION, AND MAINTENANCE.

Validity of contract by attorney to secure contract from county for erection of bridge, see Contracts, § 181.

BRIEFS.

On appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 759, 760.

BROKERS.

See Principal and Agent.

Specific enforcement of contract for sale of lands made by broker, see Specific Performance, § 65.

IV. COMPENSATION AND LIEN.

§ 44. An owner employing a broker to effect an exchange of lands held authorized to withdraw his proposition before its acceptance and defeat the right of the broker to commissions.—Arthur v. Porter (Tex. Civ. App.) 611.

§ 49. A contract for the sale of lots construed.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

§ 54. Broker's agency contract held to require plaintiff, in order to recover compensation, to procure within the period of his agency a purchaser able, ready, and willing to buy on the very terms stipulated.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 57. Real estate brokers held not entitled to commissions on a sale, where the contract negotiated by them stipulated for a forfeiture by the owner not authorized by him.—Evants v. Fuqua (Tex.) 132.

§ 57. A broker held entitled to his contract compensation, though the sale falls through because of the owners' failure to comply with the contract of sale.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 61. Where vendors contracted to furnish a title good in the opinion of the purchaser and he rejected the title, whether the abstract furnished showed a good title or whether the vendors had title in fact was immaterial.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 61. Where a vendor agrees to sell and furnish title good in the opinion of the purchaser procured by the vendor's broker, the vendor is, liable for commissions in case the sale is not effected because of the purchaser's opinion that the title is defective.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 61. A broker employed to procure a purchaser and to furnish an abstract of title held not entitled to his commissions on the showing made.—S. G. Carter & Co. v. Harrell & Walker (Tex. Civ. App.) 1139.

§ 64. A real estate broker employed to sell land earns his commissions when he procures a purchaser who is ready and able to buy on the terms offered and enters into an enforceable contract therefor, but who subsequently refuses to perform.—Moss & Raley v. Wren (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 64. Where a contract has been made between the owner of land and the broker's customer, the broker's right to commissions is not dependent on the purchaser's ability to pay for the land.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

V. ACTIONS FOR COMPENSATION.

§ 80. An independent undertaking of a party to a contract for the sale of lots to use diligence held to be one for the breach of which the other parties could recover in a separate action for damages, or by a plea in reconvention in an action by him for his contract compensation.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY.

Evidence as to rules of in action for injuries to livestock in transportation, see Carriers, § 228.

BURGLARY.

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

§ 41. Evidence held to sustain a conviction of burglary of a railroad car with intent to commit theft.—Crowson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1036.

BUSINESS.

Reports as to credit of business concerns, see Mercantile Agencies, § 1.

BY-LAWS.

Of corporations in general, see Corporations, § 56.

Of mutual benefit insurance association, see Insurance, § 760.

CALENDARS.

Computation of time, see Time.
Of causes for trial, see Trial, § 11.

CANCELLATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

See Quieting Title.

Grounds for cancellation of deed of insane person, see Insane Persons, § 28.

Rescission of contracts for sale of realty, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 84-127.

Setting aside fraudulent conveyances, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 216-301.

II. PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.

Jurisdiction of justice's courts, see Justices of the Peace, § 47.

§ 39. An allegation of ratification in an answer held not necessarily to have reference to plaintiff being insane, where the petition seeks to set aside a deed not only on the ground that plaintiff was insane when she executed it, but also, proceeding on the theory of her sanity, on the ground of fraud.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 43. Where a vendee alleged that false representations were made by the vendor, evidence that the vendor's agent made the representations was objectionable as a variance.—Stevenson v. Cauble (Tex. Civ. App.) 811.

§ 52. An issue submitted to the jury in a suit to set aside a deed on the ground that grantor was insane held to give a proper test.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 52. A special issue in suit to set aside a deed for fraud held not open to objection by plaintiff of not submitting the proper test of whether fraud had been perpetrated.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE.

See Rape.

CARRIERS.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION OF COMMON CARRIERS.

(A) IN GENERAL.

Deprivation of property without due process of law, see Constitutional Law, § 803.

§ 2½. The statute authorizing penalties for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502), and which provides, by article 4499, a penalty of $25 per day for each car not furnished, held not a violation of the Constitution as authorizing an imposition of excessive fines and punishment.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Andrews, Reynolds & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1101.

§ 13. The term "discrimination" is used in Rev. St. 1895, art. 4574, in its ordinary acceptation as meaning a delivery showing a preference in favor of or against a shipper in the performance of any act essential to the completion of that service, and is synonymous with "delay" as used in the section.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 18. A breach of duty of a carrier in requiring a connecting carrier to disregard routing directions of a shipper in violation of its duty under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4535, held not an "unjust discrimination" within article 4574.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 18. A contract between a shipper and a carrier held not to create an unjust discrimination in favor of the shipper, in violation of Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4574.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Shawnee Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 776.

§ 20. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4574, being a penal statute, held to be strictly construed.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 20. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4502, relating to the failure to furnish cars, is not void for uncertainty.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 20. The phrase "on hand," as used in Rev. St. 1895, art. 4502, defined.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 20 Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4499, the penalty for failure to furnish cars is to be charged at the rate of $25 per day for each car, and be continued for the whole time of the carrier's delinquency, and the penalty is not forbidden if cars were eventually furnished.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 20. In an action for penalties for failure to furnish cars for a shipment of stock, it is sufficient if the evidence shows plaintiff was one of the owners, and had the actual custody and control thereof, and he need not be shown to be the sole owner.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 20. The statutes authorizing a penalty for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502) apply to a contract for local transportation, though the shipper intended, when it was completed, to deliver to a connecting carrier for further transportation into Mexico.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 20. Evidence, in an action for penalties for failure to furnish cars, held to authorize a finding that the carrier's failure to furnish cars within the time demanded was without sufficient legal excuse.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 20. An application by a shipper for cars held to be a sufficient compliance with the statute (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4499) to authorize recovery of a penalty for its disobedience.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Andrews, Reynolds & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1101.

§ 20. A finding, in an action against a railroad company for penalties for failure to furnish cars, held to require the conclusion, if necessary to support the judgment for plaintiff, that defendant was without excuse for its delay at any time after a certain date.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Andrews, Reynolds & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1101.

§ 20. In view of Rev. St. 1895, art. 4497, 4500, held, that Rev. St. 1895, art. 4502, requiring a shipper to have his property "on hand at the time any demand for cars was made," means that he has the property so circumstanced that it may be shipped within the time named by the statute after delivery of the cars.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 1118.

(B) INTERSTATE AND INTERNATIONAL TRANSPORTATION.

Regulation of interstate transportation as regulation of commerce, see Commerce, § 80.

§ 23. Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, §§ 1, 2, 34 Stat. 584, 586 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, pp. 892, 895), prohibiting the issuance of free passes by interstate carriers, held not retroactive and not to apply to a contract made in 1871, by which a carrier agreed to issue annual passes for life to one injured, in settlement of his claim for damages.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley (Ky.) 982.

§ 32. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4497, requiring railway companies to supply cars, held to apply to interstate shipments.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 1118.

§ 35. Annual passes issued pursuant to contract by which the railroad agreed to issue annual passes in settlement of a personal injury claim held not a "free pass" within Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 1, 34 Stat. 584 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 892), or to violate section 2.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley (Ky.) 982.

II. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

Mandamus to compel shipment by certain route and give bill of lading therefor, see Mandamus, § 133.

(A) DELIVERY TO CARRIER.

Deprivation of property without due process of law by statute imposing penalties, see Constitutional Law, § 303.

(B) BILLS OF LADING, SHIPPING RECEIPTS, AND SPECIAL CONTRACTS.

§ 51. Where a shipper accepts a bill of lading, upon which the routing specified by him had been erased and another substituted, with knowledge of the change, he is bound by the bill as changed.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

(C) CUSTODY AND CONTROL OF GOODS.

§ 76. A shipper may recover for injuries to the property covered by his contract of shipment with the carrier, for which the latter is liable, though the shipper did not own the property.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 769.

(D) TRANSPORTATION AND DELIVERY BY CARRIER.

§ 79. The provisions of a contract of shipment, whether verbal or written, under which goods are carried, determine the route and connections to be observed.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 79. After a carrier has refused to route cars as desired by a shipper, if he permits it to take the cars for shipment, he acquiesces in the routing actually given by the carrier.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 84. The place where property is to be delivered by a carrier is at the usual place for making such delivery at the point of destination, unless the specific place is named in the contract of shipment.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

(E) DELAY IN TRANSPORTATION OR DELIVERY.

§ 104. The derailment and wreck of a train causing delay in transportation of property by a carrier is prima facie evidence of the carrier's negligence.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Wallace (Ark.) 412.

§ 104. In an action against a carrier for negligent delay in transporting perishable freight, the verdict of the jury for plaintiff held to settle the question of unreasonable delay in the transportation authorizing a recovery.—Parsons v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 101.

§ 105. The measure of damages for the negligent delay in the transportation of perishable freight is the difference between the market value of the freight when delivered and the market value of the same when it should have been delivered had no reasonable delay occurred.—Parsons v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 101.

§ 106. In an action against a carrier for injuries to a shipment of perishable freight, an instruction on the measure of damages held erroneous because enlarging the scope of the cause of action pleaded.—Parsons v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 101.

(F) LOSS OF OR INJURY TO GOODS.

§ 110. A carrier receiving for transportation a refrigerator car loaded with perishable fruit held required to use ordinary care to protect the fruit by keeping the car ventilated and properly iced.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. A. A. Jackson & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 853.

§ 117. A common carrier undertaking to carry perishable property in cars specially adapted to preserve it is responsible for any defects in the cars resulting in injury to the property, and the duty to provide suitable cars extends to proper refrigeration according to established custom.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 117. A carrier held liable for the loss of cabbage, from failure to refrigerate the car with reasonable dispatch.—McLean v. Gulf & I. Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 578.

§ 121. Though a shipper may discover before loading or the departure of the car that it is not suitable for carrying perishable goods, he will not thereby be deemed guilty of contributory negligence, or of having assumed the risk, where he has no means of relieving himself of the situation.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 131. In an action against a railroad for damages to plaintiff's shipment of cabbages, there was a variance between an allegation that the damage was caused from delay in transportation and proof that it arose from lack of refrigeration, which was not alleged.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 133. In an action against a railroad for damages to plaintiff's shipments of cabbages, certain testimony as to the amount for which the cabbages were sold in their damaged condition held admissible on the question of damages.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 134. In an action against a railroad for damages to plaintiff's shipments of cabbages through failure to ice the cars, certain evidence held not to tend to disprove a finding that ice was ordered by plaintiff.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 134. In an action against a railroad for damages to a shipment of cabbages, certain evidence held to warrant a finding that defendant's cars were either not properly constructed or not refrigerated.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 134. In an action against a carrier for damages to perishable fruit, evidence held to show negligence.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. A. A. Jackson & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 853.

§ 135. Defendant railroad was not liable for special damages where it had no notice that plaintiff's shipments of cabbages were made to fill a contract of sale at any special price.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. McLean (Tex. Civ. App.) 161.

§ 135. A carrier held liable for the difference in the value of the freight in the condition in which it was delivered at its destination and the condition it would have been in had there been no negligence.—Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Watson (Tex. Civ. App.) 175.

§ 136. The act of a carrier in changing the route of shipment from that stated in the contract is not negligence per se; but proof of the change, without good cause, coupled with proof of unusual delay causing damage to freight, is evidence of negligence sufficient to raise an issue of fact.—Parsons v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 101.

§ 137. An instruction in an action for injuries to freight held erroneous, as leading the jury to include in their estimate of damages injuries incident to the shipping of the goods.—Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Watson (Tex. Civ. App.) 175.

(H) LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

§ 150. A carrier cannot contract for exemption from liability for its own negligence or the negligence of its servants, though not inhibited from making such exemption by statute.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Wallace (Ark.) 412.

(I) CONNECTING CARRIERS.

Assumptions by judge as to facts in actions against connecting carrier, see Trial, § 191. Concurrent and conflicting jurisdiction of state and federal courts in actions against connecting carriers, see Courts, § 489. Pleading federal statute in action against connecting carriers, see Statutes, § 279. Validity of interstate commerce act, see Commerce, § 30.

§ 169. A railway company engaged in shifting cars delivered to it by a carrier to the house tracks of consignees is not a connecting carrier, but is the agent of the carrier.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. A. A. Jackson & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 853.

§ 177. Liability of initial carrier, where it accepts property for transportation over another line, stated.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Wallace (Ark.) 412.

§ 177. A carrier of freight is only liable for injury thereto resulting from its own negligence.—Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Watson (Tex. Civ. App.) 175.

§ 180. An instruction that two of several connecting carriers had agreed to transport an automobile safely to destination held error.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Patton (Tex. Civ. App.) 798.

§ 185. Where freight transported by successive carriers is injured en route, the presumption is that the injury occurred on the line of the last carrier.—Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Watson (Tex. Civ. App.) 175.

§ 185. In the absence of any evidence on the subject, the presumption is that damages to freight during transportation resulted from the negligence of the last connecting carrier.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. A. A. Jackson & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 853.

(J) CHARGES AND LIENS.

§ 193. One of several connecting carriers, when sued for damages to an automobile, held entitled to the submission of a set-off for de-

Declarations by carriers agent as evidence in action against carriers of live stock, see Evidence, § 244.

Hearsay evidence in action against carriers of live stock, see Evidence, § 323.

Instructions invading province of jury in actions against carrier of live stock, see Trial, § 200.

Opinion evidence, in action against carrier of live stock, see Evidence, § 471.

§ 207. A carrier contracting to carry live stock cannot excuse a breach of the contract by proving inability to furnish cars because of unusually heavy traffic.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Shawnee Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 776.

§ 207. A carrier breaching his contract to deliver cars to a shipper held liable notwithstanding the unexpected movement of freight and shortage of cars.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Shawnee Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 776.

§ 210. A carrier must furnish reasonably safe pens for cattle unloaded en route.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 211. Carrier held not absolved from duty to furnish shipper means to feed and water stock by fact that shipper accompanied and agreed to feed and water the same.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

§ 215. The fact that cattle unloaded from cars and put in infected pens were unloaded in violation of the regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture held not to defeat a recovery.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 215. The quarantine regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture as to where cattle may be unloaded in Texas held to refer only to cattle shipped from one state to another, and not to cattle shipped from one state through Texas to Mexico.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 217. In an action against a carrier for injuries to a shipment of live stock infected with a disease, evidence held not to show contributory negligence of the shipper.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 218. Delivery of no part of certain shipment held completed until delivery of entire shipment, provided the same was removed within reasonable time.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

§ 218. Completed removal of stock from car by shipper within contract limiting carrier's liability, determined.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

§ 218. Removal of stock to point $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from car held not an unreasonable distance.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

§ 218. One and one-half hours held not unreasonable time for removing household goods and live stock from car by shipper.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

§ 218. A shipper of household goods and live stock is entitled to a reasonable time in which to remove the same.—Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. Pullen (Ark.) 702.

§ 223. That the outfit of railroad subcontractors was transported without charge was no defense to their action against defendant for damages to their mules by negligent transportation.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

§ 228. In an action for injuries to a shipment of live stock from a northern state through Texas to Mexico, resulting from their being infected with a disease, the exclusion of a rule of the Bureau of Animal Industry referring to interstate shipments, and enacted for the protection of cattle at the point to which a shipment is destined, was proper.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 228. In an action for injuries to a shipment of cattle from a northern state through Texas to Mexico, resulting from their becoming infected with a disease, proof of a custom as to the disinfection of cars from the South was admissible.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 228. The owner of mules injured in transportation could not recover in the absence of evidence of their market value at destination.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

§ 228. Proof that a carrier transporting live stock delayed the train for a longer time than was usual and necessary held not to prove injury to the stock.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Rogers (Tex. Civ. App.) 738.

§ 228. In an action against connecting carriers for damages for a wrongful delivery of a shipment of stock, an instruction as to the burden of proof held erroneous.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rankin (Tex. Civ. App.) 823.

§ 228. Evidence in an action against connecting carriers for injuries to a shipment of horses held to authorize a finding against the delivering carrier for all the damages.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Fenley (Tex. Civ. App.) 845.

§ 229. In an action against a carrier for injuries to mules, the measure of liability was the difference in their value at destination in the condition they were in and their value if properly transported.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

§ 229. The measure of damages to horses, injured in transit by negligent delay and rough handling, determined.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 229. Measure of damages stated for a carrier's negligently placing cattle in quarantine pens so that they had to be sold and could not be shipped to destination.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 1155.

§ 230. Evidence that the value of certain mules killed by defendant carrier was $200 each, held sufficient to justify the submission of the question of their market value to the jury.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

§ 230. In an action against the initial carrier for negligent delay in the transportation of horses, resulting in the death of some of them, an instruction held not objectionable as making the carrier pay for depreciation necessarily received by the horses while carried by the connecting carrier.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 230. In an action against a carrier for injuries to horses, an instruction authorizing the jury to find for the shipper such damages as he sustained held not erroneous, in view of an instruction defining the measure of damages.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 230. An instruction, in an action against a carrier for negligent delay in transporting a shipment of horses, held not open to a special objection in view of another instruction.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 230. An instruction, in an action against connecting carriers to recover damages to a shipment of cattle, as to the burden of proof of negligence, held erroneous.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rankin (Tex. Civ. App.) 823.

IV. CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS.

(A) RELATION BETWEEN CARRIER AND PASSENGER.

§ 246. Evidence in an action for the death of plaintiff's intestate held to sustain a finding that he was a passenger at the time.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Pate (Ark.) 260.

(B) FARES, TICKETS, AND SPECIAL CONTRACTS.

§ 253½. A contract made in 1871, by which an interstate carrier agreed to issue annual passes for life to one injured, in settlement of his claim for damages, was legal and valid when made.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley (Ky.) 982.

(C) PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT OF TRANSPORTATION.

§ 276. In an action by a passenger for damages from being directed to the wrong train, certain testimony held improperly admitted.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Summers (Ky.) 926.

(D) PERSONAL INJURIES.

Alder by verdict in action for injuries to passenger, see Pleading, § 438.

Application of instructions to case in action for injuries to passenger, see Trial, § 252.

Error in instruction in action for injuries to passenger cured by giving other instructions, see Trial, § 296.

Miscarriage and loss of child-bearing ability as element of damages resulting from injury to female passenger, see Damages, § 32.

§ 280. Duty of carriers to passengers on mixed trains stated.—Leach v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 510.

§ 288. A carrier held liable for the acts of the servant in charge of or having control over the passengers.—Louisville Ry. Co. v. Kupper (Ky.) 266.

§ 288. Defendant street railway company held liable, under the evidence, both for an unlawful assault by its conductor on plaintiff, a passenger, and for an unlawful arrest of the latter at the conductor's instance after plaintiff left the car.—Louisville Ry. Co. v. Kupper (Ky.) 266.

§ 286. A carrier must keep its depot and approaches thereto properly lighted, so as to permit passengers to pass safely to and from the train.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 852.

§ 286. It is the duty of a carrier to exercise ordinary and reasonable care in the construction and maintenance of station platforms and railings, including a railing extending from the end of a platform parallel with the track across a viaduct.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 286. A railroad company held liable under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4521, for injuries to a passenger by not having its depot open within the time required thereby at a flag station where it sold tickets and maintained a depot for passengers.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Rumfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 810.

§ 287. A street railway company held liable for the injuries received by a passenger attempting to board a car.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 303. To back a car while the passenger is alighting and without waiting a reasonable time for him to alight is actionable negligence if injury results.—Van Cleve v. St. Louis, M. & S. R. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 116.

§ 303. Where a car is stopped for the purpose of allowing passengers to alight, it is the duty of the carrier to allow it to remain stopped for a reasonable time to allow passengers to alight in safety by exercising ordinary care.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 303. Carrier's liability for injuries to a passenger alighting from a car held not conditioned upon knowledge of defendant's servants that she is alighting.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 308. A carrier held liable for injuries sustained by a passenger induced to alight from the train at an intermediate point.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Redus (Tex. Civ. App.) 208.

§ 308. A carrier is bound to exercise a high degree of care for the safety of passengers disembarking from a car.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

§ 304. One who was injured while alighting from a moving train, after assisting his sister on board, held to be on the train as an implied licensee, so that the company would be bound to exercise ordinary care to protect him from injury and would be liable for its failure to do so.—Huchingson v. Texas Cent. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1123.

§ 305. Street car company held liable for passenger's death if it was directly caused by being thrown against a stove in a derailment, though he had suffered from other diseases.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 306. A railroad company, having leased the right to a lumber company to operate log trains over a portion of the track, held liable for injuries to a passenger in a collision between defendant's passenger train and a log train.—Big Sandy & O. R. Co. v. Blankenship (Ky.) 816.

§ 306. A carrier is liable for injuries to a passenger in a collision resulting from the negligence of the lessee of a right to operate log trains over the road.—Big Sandy & O. R. Co. v. Blankenship (Ky.) 816.

§ 314. The petition in an action for a street car passenger's death held only to allege negligence generally.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 316. In an action for a passenger's death by the sudden derailment of a street car, held, that there was a presumption that the derailment was caused by negligence.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 317. In an action for injuries to a passenger while alighting at a station, in consequence of the sudden starting of the train, evidence of negligent failure to properly light the depot was inadmissible.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 852.

§ 317. In an action for injuries to a passenger while alighting at a depot, evidence of the carrier's freight business, conducted at its freight depot on one side of the track, held inadmissible.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 852.

§ 317. Evidence to show how railings over viaducts are constructed in other cities held not admissible to show negligence of defendant in constructing a similar railing.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 320. Evidence in an action against a carrier for injuries received while attempting to board defendant's car held sufficient to carry the case to the jury.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 320. Evidence in an action against a carrier for injuries to a passenger while attempting to board a street car by the sudden starting of the car held to require the submission of the case to the jury.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 320. In an action for the death of a street railway passenger, whether decedent's death was proximately caused by the injuries sustained, held for the jury.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 320. In an action for injuries sustained while plaintiff was getting off a moving train, which he entered to assist his sister on board, by stumbling against a footstool claimed to have been negligently left upon the platform or car step, whether the company was negligent held a jury question.—Huchingson v. Texas Cent. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1123.

§ 321. An instruction in an action against a carrier for injuries to a passenger held not misleading.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 321. It is usual to use the word "highest" in instructions upon the decree of care required by carriers toward passengers, instead of the word "utmost," and the former word should be used.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 321. In an action against a railroad for injuries to a passenger, an instruction held not erroneous as permitting a recovery on a matter not alleged in the petition.—Van Cleve v. St. Louis, M. & S. E. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 116.

§ 321. An instruction, in an action against a carrier for injuries to a passenger received while alighting from a car, held not erroneous as failing to submit the question whether the car was stopped a reasonable time, and as ignoring the question of knowledge on the part of defendant that plaintiff was alighting.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 321. In an action for injuries to a passenger while alighting from a car, an instruction held not misleading in view of the petition and evidence.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chase (Tex. Civ. App.) 783.

§ 321. In an action for injuries to a passenger while alighting from a car, an instruction held not erroneous as submitting two issues, and thereby making it impossible to tell from the verdict on which issue the jury found.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chase (Tex. Civ. App.) 783.

§ 321. In an action against a carrier for injuries to an alighting passenger, a charge held not misleading.—Southworth v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 861.

§ 321. In an action for injuries to a passenger, the use of the conjunctive in an instruction held not erroneous, in view of another instruction given.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ford (Tex. Civ. App.) 1137.

(E) CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE OF PERSON INJURED.

§ 328. Where a street car has stopped for a reasonable time for passengers and gives the signal to start before one attempts to enter, the invitation to enter is withdrawn, and one attempting to enter the car thereafter would be negligent, especially if he heard and understood the signal.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 338. A passenger injured in jumping from a train when she saw a collision was imminent held entitled to recover, though, if she had remained, she might not have been injured.—Big Sandy & C. R. Co. v. Blankenship (Ky.) 315.

§ 346. In a passenger's action for injuries sustained in falling off a street car, plaintiff's evidence held to show that the accident resulted from plaintiff's voluntary act in letting go his hold on the car.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 347. It is not negligence as matter of law for a railway passenger to stand on the platform or steps of a car while it is approaching a station.—Southworth v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 861.

§ 347. In an action for injuries sustained while plaintiff was getting off a moving train which he entered to assist his sister on board, by stumbling against a footstool left upon the platform or car step, whether plaintiff was negligent held a jury question.—Huchingson v. Texas Cent. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1122.

§ 348. In an action against a carrier for injuries to a passenger, a requested instruction held properly refused.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 348. In an action against a carrier, an instruction requested by defendant held improperly refused.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

§ 348. In a street car passenger's action for injuries claimed to have been caused by the premature starting of the car, an instruction that if the car stopped at the usual place for a reasonable length of time to enable plaintiff to safely board it, etc., he could not recover, held proper under the evidence.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 348. In a passenger's action for injuries sustained in falling off a street car, an instruction that if plaintiff was in a safe position and thereafter let go of the guard rail and fell off, to find for defendant, held proper under the evidence.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

(F) EJECTION OF PASSENGERS AND INTRUDERS.

§ 363. Women who had bought tickets, but innocently left them at the station, were not strictly trespassers, and the conductor should not have ejected them at a distance from the station in a deep ditch if he could have put them off at a more suitable place.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

§ 364. One boarding a street car and refusing to pay fare held a trespasser.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

§ 370. A carrier held not liable for the acts of the conductor in a fight with a passenger resulting in the passenger being thrown or falling from the car and injured so that he died.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

§ 380. Allegations that plaintiff was humiliated, mortified, and shamed by being put off a train at a certain place held to show "mental distress," though that was not alleged in terms.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

§ 381. One suing a street railway company for the death of a passenger ejected from a car by the conductor thereof held required to show that the conductor killed decedent and that deceased was a passenger.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

§ 382. In an action by an ejected passenger, held, that punitive damages were not allowable under the evidence.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Summers (Ky.) 926.

§ 382. In an action for damages for the ejectment of plaintiff's wife from a passenger train, a verdict for plaintiff for $150 held excessive, $100 being proper.—International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 758.

§ 382. In an action for damages for ejecting plaintiff's wife and daughter from defendant's passenger train at an improper place, because they had left their tickets at the station, a verdict for $1,000 held not excessive.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

§ 384. In an action for damages for putting plaintiff's wife off the train at an improper place, an instruction held not to make defendant's liability depend on whether the train was stopped pursuant to her request, and not conflicting with another instruction.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

CARRYING WEAPONS.

See Weapons.

CASE ON APPEAL.

Making and settlement, see Appeal and Error, §§ 564, 572.

Necessity for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 544-549.

CATTLE PENS.

Care required of carrier in furnishing, see Carriers, § 210.

Liability of carrier for placing stock in infected pen, see Carriers, §§ 215, 217, 228.

CAUSE OF ACTION.

See Action; Malicious Prosecution, § 23.

CERTIFICATE.

By county commissioners designating center of county in proceedings for removal of county seat, see Counties, § 34.

Certified copies, see Evidence, § 342.

Of secretary of state as to contents of legislative journals, conclusiveness, see Statutes, § 60.

CHALLENGE.

To juror, see Jury, §§ 88-142.

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE.

§ 7. A champertous deed is not void, but only voidable at the instance of parties in adverse possession.—Meade v. Ratliff (Ky.) 271.

§ 7. A deed of land held adversely is champertous, though made in good faith and for a valuable consideration; but the parties may rescind it, and this right is not affected by St. 1909, § 216 (Russell's St. § 1783).—Meade v. Ratliff (Ky.) 271.

§ 7. The sufficiency of evidence introduced by the plaintiff in ejectment to show that a champertous deed by his ancestor was rescinded by the parties is a question for the jury.—Meade v. Ratliff (Ky.) 271.

CHANCERY.

See Equity.

CHANGE OF VENUE.

Of civil action, see Venue, §§ 32, 71.

CHARACTER.

Of accused in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 369.

Of witness, see Witnesses, §§ 355-358.

CHARGE.

By carrier, see Carriers, § 193.

To jury in civil actions, see Trial, §§ 191-296.

To jury in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 780-822.

CHattel MORTGAGES.

See Pledges.

III. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

(D) LIEN AND PRIORITY.

§ 150. A mortgage or other conveyance signed in a wrong name, or a name by which the grantor is not customarily known, imparts no notice.—Bradford v. Lembke (Tex. Civ. App.) 159.

§ 150. If a person took a mortgage on chattels executed under a name other than the mortgagor's, who afterwards sold them under his customary name to a purchaser in good faith without notice of the mortgage, held, that the mortgagee, having made the loss possible, should stand it, and not the purchaser.—Bradford v. Lembke (Tex. Civ. App.) 159.

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES.

§ 177. In an action by a mortgagee for conversion of chattels by purchase from the mortgagor under a name different from that under which he had executed the mortgage, the burden held upon the purchaser to show that the name under which the mortgage was given was an assumed name.—Bradford v. Lembke (Tex. Civ. App.) 159.

VIII. PAYMENT OR PERFORMANCE OF CONDITION, RELEASE, AND SATISFACTION.

§ 235. Evidence held not to show a payment of a chattel mortgage debt.—Priest v. Hodges (Ark.) 253.

IX. FORECLOSURE.

§ 261. Effect of sale by trustee of property under a trust deed stated where the property was at the time of sale in a sheriff's hands.—Brant v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 229.

CHECKS.

See Bills and Notes.

Pay checks, see Master and Servant, § 79.

CHILDBEARING.

Loss of ability as element of damages resulting from injury to female, see Damages, § 32.

CHILDREN.

See Guardian and Ward; Infants; Parent and Child.

CHOSE IN ACTION.

Assignment, see Assignments.

CHURCHES.

See Religious Societies.

CITIES.

See Municipal Corporations.

CLERICAL ERRORS.

Variance between indictment and proof in prosecution for forgery, see Forgery, § 34.

CLERKS OF COURTS.

Authority as to taking proceedings on appeal in forma pauperis, see Appeal and Error, § 332.

CLOUD ON TITLE.

See Quieting Title.

COLLATERAL AGREEMENT.

Parol evidence, see Evidence, §§ 441, 442.

COLLATERAL ATTACK.

On incorporation of religious society, see Religious Societies, § 4.

On judgment, see Judgment, §§ 470-521.

On order confirming judicial sale, see Judicial Sales, § 81.

COLLATERAL SECURITY.

See Pledges.

COLLATERAL UNDERTAKING.

See Frauds, Statute of, § 23.

COLLECTION.

Of estate of decedent, see Executors and Administrators, § 115.

COLOR OF TITLE.

To sustain adverse possession, see Adverse Possession.

COMBINATIONS.

See Conspiracy.

COMITY.

Between courts, see Courts, § 439.

COMMERCE.

Carriage of goods and passengers, see Carriers.

III. MEANS AND METHODS OF REGULATION.

§ 80. Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 595 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909), held valid.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Scott (Ky.) 990.

IV. INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

§ 85. The Interstate Commerce Commission held not to have jurisdiction over actions for damages to interstate shipments.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Scott (Ky.) 990.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

See Bills and Notes.

§ 85. To take testimony, see Depositions.

COMMISSIONS.

Of broker, see Brokers, §§ 44-64.

Of executor or administrator, see Executors and Administrators, § 496.

COMMON CARRIERS.

See Carriers.

COMMON LAW.

§ 11. The territory which now composes the state of Kansas, having been acquired by the United States under a treaty with France, was never subject to the common law of England.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

See Schools and School Districts, §§ 13-103.

COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

See Husband and Wife, §§ 262-276.

COMPENSATION.

For performance of contract, see Contracts, §§ 228, 231.

For property taken for public use, see Eminent Domain, § 84.

Of particular classes of officers or other persons.

See Brokers, §§ 44-64; Executors and Administrators, § 496.

Agent, see Principal and Agent, § 82.

Attorney, see Attorney and Client, § 143.

Prosecuting attorney, see District and Prosecuting Attorneys, § 5.

Servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 79, 82.

COMPETENCY.

Of experts as witnesses, see Evidence, § 543.

Of jurors, see Jury, §§ 88-142.

Of witnesses in general, see Witnesses, §§ 37-176.

COMPLAINT.

In civil actions, see Pleading, § 49.

In criminal prosecutions, see Indictment and Information.

COMPOSITIONS WITH CREDITORS.

See Compromise and Settlement.

COMPROMISE AND SETTLEMENT.

See Payment; Release.

Offer of as evidence, see Evidence, § 213.

§ 23. On an issue as to a compromise and settlement, a receipt executed by defendant to plaintiff held admissible.—Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith (Ky.) 307.

§ 25. In an action for breach of a logging contract where defendant offered in evidence a settlement, instructions held objectionable.—Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith (Ky.) 307.

COMPUTATION.

Of period of limitation, see Limitation of Actions, §§ 55-127.

Of time, see Time.

CONCEALED WEAPONS.

See Weapons.

CONCLUSION.

Of witness, see Evidence, §§ 471-501.

CONCLUSIVENESS.

Of certificate of Secretary of State as to contents of legislative journals, see Statutes, § 60.

CONCURRENT JURISDICTION.

Of courts, see Courts, § 489.

CONDEMNATION.

Taking property for public use, see Eminent Domain.

CONDITIONS.

Conditional delivery of deed, see Escrows.

In contracts and conveyances.

See Chattel Mortgages, § 235; Wills, §§ 651-665.

Insurance policies, see Insurance, §§ 255-282, 330, 335.

CONFESSION.

Admissibility in evidence, see Criminal Law, § 534.

CONFIRMATION.

Of judicial sale, see Judicial Sales, § 31.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

Conflicting jurisdiction of courts, see Courts, § 489.

CONNECTING CARRIERS.

See Carriers, §§ 169-185.

CONSIDERATION.

Of contract in general, see Contracts, §§ 108-136.

Of particular classes of contracts.

See Bills and Notes, §§ 92, 493; Deeds, §§ 15-17, 195; Fraudulent Conveyances, § 74.

CONSOLIDATION.

Of corporations, see Corporations, § 581.

Of corporations of different states, see Corporations, § 690.

Of insurance associations, see Insurance, §§ 694, 696.

CONSPIRACY.

Evidence of acts and declarations of conspirators, see Criminal Law, §§ 423, 424.

II. CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY.

(A) OFFENSES.

§ 41. When defendant's guilty connection is established, he is chargeable with all acts and declarations of co-conspirators made during the conspiracy's existence and in carrying it forward.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

(B) PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

§ 43. Under a charge limited to a single act of the conspirators to intimidate a certain person, the court properly excluded evidence of illegal or wrongful acts done subsequently by a band with whom defendant was not charged to be in concert or collusion.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

§ 45. Where, on a trial for conspiracy to intimidate, a witness for the commonwealth was asked whether or not a person, who came to see him at the time defendant said he would have a person there, told him to turn off the switch, and answered in the affirmative, held that the question and answer were competent.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

§ 45. On trial for conspiracy to intimidate, held that the court properly excluded a part of an answer of a witness for the commonwealth as to what was told him by a certain person.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

§ 47. In a prosecution for conspiracy, the state must first prove defendant's connection with the alleged conspiracy.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

§ 48. Instructions in a prosecution for conspiracy held correct.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

Provisions relating to particular subjects.

See Carriers, § 2; Jury, § 14; Taxation, § 47. Enactment and validity of statutes, see Statutes, §§ 18-60.

II. CONSTRUCTION, OPERATION, AND ENFORCEMENT OF CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS.

§ 48. The federal Constitution does not inhibit Congress from impairing the obligation of contracts, but the same moral obligation not to enact such unjust laws rests upon it as upon the states, and it will be presumed that Congress did not intend to impair contract obligations, unless a clear intent to do so appears.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley (Ky.) 982.

III. DISTRIBUTION OF GOVERNMENTAL POWERS AND FUNCTIONS.

(A) LEGISLATIVE POWERS AND DELEGATION THEREOF.

§ 52. Rev. St. 1899, § 1617 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1199), limiting the power of courts to punish for contempt, held, as applied to the circuit courts created by Const. art. 6, § 22 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 234), violative of Const. 1875, art. 3 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 172).—Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Gildersleeve (Mo.) 86, 97; Chicago & A. Ry. Co. v. Same (Mo.) 96.

§ 52. Courts cannot be shorn of the power to punish for contempt by the legislative branch of the state government.—Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Gildersleeve (Mo.) 86, 97; Chicago & A. Ry. Co. v. Same (Mo.) 96.

VII. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

(B) CONTRACTS OF STATES AND MUNICIPALITIES.

§ 137. A city may, in the absence of provision to the contrary, tax its bonds in the hands of another.—Bank of Russellville v. City of Russellville (Ky.) 921.

VIII. RETROSPECTIVE AND EX POST FACTO LAWS.

§ 191. The retrospective laws forbidden by Const. art. 2, § 15 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 137), are laws impairing existing vested civil rights, and the prohibition does not apply to a statute limiting the time within which actions may be brought and embracing actions already institut-failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502), held not contrary to Const. U. S. Amend. 14, as amounting to a taking of the carrier's property without due process of law.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 303. The statute authorizing penalties for failure to furnish cars (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502) held not to violate Const. U. S. Amend. 14, by depriving a railroad company of property without due process of law.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Andrews, Reynolds & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1101.

CONSTRUCTION.

Of contracts, instruments, or judicial acts and proceedings.

See Chattel Mortgages, § 150; Contracts, §§ 143-231; Deeds, §§ 96-99; Sales, § 85; Statutes, §§ 181-267; Wills, §§ 439-707.

Bill of lading, see Carriers, § 51.

Instructions, see Trial, §§ 295-296.

Insurance policy, see Insurance, §§ 168, 726.

Limitation laws in general, see Limitation of Actions, § 5.

Mining lease, see Mines and Minerals, §§ 62-68.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Of animals, liability of carrier for infection, see Carriers, §§ 215, 217, 228.

CONTEMPT.

Laws restricting power to punish as encroachment on judiciary, see Constitutional Law, § 52.

Violation of injunction, see Injunction, § 219.

CONTEST.

Of election, see Elections, §§ 291, 298.

Of local option election, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 37.

CONTINGENT REMAINDERS.

Creation, see Wills, § 629.

CONTINUANCE.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 589-608.

CONTRACTS.

Agreements within statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of.

Alteration, see Alteration of Instruments.

Assignment, see Assignments.

Cancellation, see Cancellation of Instruments.

Impairing obligation, see Constitutional Law, § 137.

Liquidated damages or penalties, see Damages, § 80.

Operation and effect of champerty, see Champerty and Maintenance.

Operation and effect of usury laws, see Usury, §§ 26-117.

Parol or extrinsic evidence, see Evidence, §§ 400-442.

Specific performance, see Specific Performance.

Contracts of particular classes of persons.

See Attorney and Client, § 143; Carriers, §§ 51, 253½; Counties, § 121; Master and Servant; Municipal Corporations, §§ 243, 247, 330, 362; Schools and School Districts, § 86.

Transportation of passengers, see Carriers, § 253½.

Particular classes of express contracts.

See Bills and Notes; Chattel Mortgages; Covenants; Insurance; Liens; Partnership; Sales.

Agency, see Principal and Agent.

Bills of lading, see Carriers, § 51.

Employment, see Master and Servant.

Leases, see Landlord and Tenant.

Mutual benefit insurance, see Insurance, §§ 723-726.

Sales of realty, see Vendor and Purchaser.

Stipulations in actions, see Stipulations.

Suretyship, see Principal and Surety.

Particular classes of implied contracts.

See Covenants, § 20; Money Received; Work and Labor.

Particular modes of discharging contracts.

See Compromise and Settlement; Payment; Release.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

(A) NATURE AND ESSENTIALS IN GENERAL.

§ 10. A contract between a manufacturer and a selling agent held not void for want of mutuality.—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Miller & Harris (Ky.) 376.

(B) VALIDITY OF ASSENT.

§ 93. Defendant held entitled to a cancellation of a contract for the sale of gravel, etc., on the ground of a mistake of fact.—Edwards v. Trinity & B. V. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 572.

(F) LEGALITY OF OBJECT AND OF CONSIDERATION.

§ 108. A contract between the owner of goods and another, whereby such other person was to deal with the goods for one year and then turn them back to the owner, held not void as against public policy.—Holder v. Shelby (Tex. Civ. App.) 590.

§ 108. A contract by a railroad section foreman to procure a switch track at a specified place in consideration for a conveyance of land held not to be void as against public policy.—Wright v. Riley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1134.

§ 131. A contract for the services of an attorney to use his personal influence to secure a contract from the county for the erection of bridges is void as against public policy.—Flynn v. Bank of Mineral Wells (Tex. Civ. App.) 848.

§ 136. One employing an agent to purchase real estate held entitled to recover from the agent a secret commission received from the vendor, though the purchaser after the purchase and before the payment by the vendor of the commission formed an unlawful purpose to dispose of the property through a lottery.—Commercial Club of Joplin v. Davis (Mo. App.) 668.

§ 136. One employing an agent to purchase real estate held entitled to recover from him the commission received from the vendor pursuant to a secret agreement, though the purchaser, vendor, and agent each knew that the property was purchased for an unlawful purpose.—Commercial Club of Joplin v. Davis (Mo. App.) 668.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

(A) GENERAL RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

§ 143. The courts cannot make a contract to suit one of the parties, but must take the contract as they find it and determine the rights of the parties from it as they themselves make or leave it.—Garnes v. Frazier & Foster (Ky.) 998.

§ 147. The dominant purpose in construing a contract is to ascertain the real intent of the parties.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

§ 153. A contract should be construed so as to give effect to the intention of the parties.—Frisbie v. Bigham Masonic Lodge No. 256 (Ky.) 859.

§ 169. The circumstances under which a contract is made, the situation of the parties, and the facts of which they were cognizant at the time may be resorted to if the writing is ambiguous.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

(C) SUBJECT-MATTER.

§ 202. A contract for the selling of furnaces held not breached by the sale of airtight stoves.—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Miller & Harris (Ky.) 376.

(F) COMPENSATION.

§ 228. Where parties to a contract accept the benefit of another party's services under the contract, and pay him a portion of the consideration, they cannot withhold the remainder of the consideration, unless the contract gives them the right to do so.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

§ 231. Under a building contract, the total amount of the original price and the costs of extras and changes held controlling under a clause permitting retention by the owner of a certain per cent. of the contract price until completion of the building.—Illinois Surety Co. v. Garrard Hotel Co. (Ky.) 967.

III. MODIFICATION AND MERGER.

§ 247. The burden is on the party asserting the modification of a contract to show the assent of the other party thereto.—A. G. Brown & Co. v. McKnight (Ark.) 406.

§ 247. One asserting a subsequent modification of the contract must prove it by a preponderance of the evidence.—A. G. Brown & Co. v. McKnight (Ark.) 409.

V. PERFORMANCE OR BREACH.

§ 280. Defendants, having agreed to employ plaintiff to do all their hauling for certain stores for a year, held not to have performed after having sold out the stores within three months by employing plaintiff to do such hauling as they might have for him.—Smith v. J. H. Carter & Co. (Mo. App.) 527.

§ 322. In an action for breach of a teaming contract, whether defendants owned the teams sold to plaintiff, or whether they were owned by a third person for whom defendants acted, held immaterial.—Smith v. J. H. Carter & Co. (Mo. App.) 527.

VI. ACTIONS FOR BREACH.

§ 324. Where the measure of damages for the breach of a contract is the amount of profits to which plaintiffs would be entitled, it is immaterial whether they sue for damages or for an accounting of profits.—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Miller & Harris (Ky.) 376.

§ 326. The violation by a manufacturer of a valid contract with a selling agent renders the manufacturer liable in damages.—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Miller & Harris (Ky.) 376.

§ 326. Even if defendant was not liable under the contract for work done by plaintiff, or on the quantum meruit, it was liable for a sum which plaintiff paid to his laborers, which sum defendant's agent expressly agreed to pay.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 218.

§ 338. In an action on a contract, allegations in the answer as to defendant's financial condition held immaterial.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

§ 346. In an action on a contract, evidence of defendant's financial condition held inadmissible.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

§ 349. Testimony as to what stipulations it was customary to insert in contracts for hauling logs held inadmissible to prove that such stipulation was also embraced in the contract in question.—Dayton Lumber Co. v. Stockdale (Tex. Civ. App.) 806.

§ 353. An instruction in an action to recover for architect's plans held not supported by the evidence.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

§ 358. Instruction in an action on a contract to furnish architect's plans held not erroneous.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

CONTRADICTION.

Of record, see Appeal and Error, § 664.
Of witness, see Witnesses, § 405.

CONTRIBUTION.

Among heirs, see Descent and Distribution, § 152.

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

See Negligence, § 83.

CONVERSION.

Wrongful conversion of personal property, see Trover and Conversion.

CONVEYANCES.

In fraud of creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances.

In trust, see Trusts, §§ 1-18.

Of property to evade taxation, see Taxation, § 108.

Under judicial sale, see Judicial Sales, § 61.

Conveyances by or to particular classes of persons.

See Corporations, § 439.

Married women, see Husband and Wife, § 69½.

Conveyances of particular species of, or estates or interests in, property.

See Easements, §§ 5-42; Homestead, §§ 118-128; Mines and Minerals, § 55.

Timber, see Logs and Logging, § 3.

Particular classes of conveyances.

See Assignments; Chattel Mortgages; Deeds; Mortgages.

CORONERS.

Impeachment of witness by evidence of statements at inquest, see Witnesses, § 393.

Waiver of privilege of witness at inquest, see Witnesses, § 305.

CORPORATIONS.

Mandamus, see Mandamus, § 133.

Taxation of corporations and corporate property, see Taxation, § 122.

Particular classes of corporations.

See Municipal Corporations; Railroads; Religious Societies; Street Railroads.
Insurance companies, see Insurance.
Mercantile agencies, see Mercantile Agencies.
Telegraph and telephone companies, see Telegraphs and Telephones.
Water companies, see Waters and Water Courses, §§ 183-206.

I. INCORPORATION AND ORGANIZATION.

Of religious society, see Religious Societies, § 4.

III. CORPORATE NAME, SEAL, DOMICILE, BY-LAWS, AND RECORDS.

§ 49. A corporation, chartered under the name of "Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America," held entitled to an injunction restraining a similar organization, composed of colored people, from using the name "Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World."—Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks v. Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks (Tenn.) 389.

§ 56. The by-laws of a corporation must be adopted by the members of the corporate body, and cannot be by the directors unless the charter or fundamental law so provides.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

IV. CAPITAL, STOCK, AND DIVIDENDS.(B) SUBSCRIPTION TO STOCK.

§ 76. That persons signing a written contract of subscription failed to read or understand it before signing would not relieve them from liability thereon in the absence of fraud.—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Peterson (Ky.) 384; Same v. Beaven, Id.; Same v. Mahon, Id.

§ 77. A subscription paper of four pages construed to be a single contract.—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Peterson (Ky.) 384; Same v. Beaven, Id.; Same v. Mahon, Id.

§ 78. A contract between a building company and subscribers to a fund for building a butter factory construed.—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Peterson (Ky.) 384; Same v. Beaven, Id.; Same v. Mahon, Id.

§ 78. The liability of subscribers to stock under a contract held to be several, unless they elected to make it joint by becoming delinquent in payment.—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Peterson (Ky.) 384; Same v. Beaven, Id.; Same v. Mahon, Id.

§ 83. Power of subscribers to an enterprise to withdraw and avoid liability on their subscriptions stated.—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Peterson (Ky.) 384; Same v. Beaven, Id.; Same v. Mahon, Id.

V. MEMBERS AND STOCKHOLDERS.(C) SUING OR DEFENDING ON BEHALF OF CORPORATION.

§ 206. Minority stockholders of a corporation may maintain suits to declare corporate action ultra vires and void after having first demanded action by the corporation and been refused.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

VI. OFFICERS AND AGENTS.(A) ELECTION OR APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE.

§ 281. The directors of a corporation must be chosen by the members—that is, by the corpora-tors—unless the latter have authorized some other mode of choice which the law will tolerate.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

VII. CORPORATE POWERS AND LIABILITIES.(A) EXTENT AND EXERCISE OF POWERS IN GENERAL.

§ 370. Corporations have only such powers as are expressly granted or necessarily implied from the powers expressly given.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

§ 372. All statutes under which a corporate power is asserted must be construed favorably to the state from which the power emanated.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

§ 393. Equity has jurisdiction to define the powers of corporations and to declare threatened or consummated corporate acts invalid.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

(B) REPRESENTATION OF CORPORATION BY OFFICERS AND AGENTS.

§ 432. From the facts, held that it could be inferred that the slander of plaintiff by defendant corporation's agent was an act within the general scope of his employment, making defendant liable therefor.—Payton v. People's Credit Clothing Co. (Mo. App.) 631.

(C) PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCES.

§ 439. Acts 1887, p. 329, c. 198, providing for the leasing and disposition of the property of a corporation, applies only to quasi public, and not to private, corporations.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

(F) CIVIL ACTIONS.

Waiver of defects in process in general by appearance, see Appearance, § 24.

§ 503. A plea of privilege to be sued in the county of defendant's residence held overruled in view of Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, exception 23.—Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 194.

X. CONSOLIDATION.

Of insurance associations, see Insurance, §§ 694, 696.

§ 581. Corporations have no general power to consolidate or merge with another corporation, unless express power so to do is found in their charters or the statutes of the state which created them.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

XI. DISSOLUTION AND FORFEITURE OF FRANCHISE.

§ 592½. Act April 23, 1907 (Laws 1907, p. 311, c. 164) § 4, subd. 5, providing that, where a corporation created under title 21 of a general law of the state shall fail to commence active operations within three years after filing its charter, the charter is hereby forfeited, and it is dissolved, held not a basis for forfeiture for past omissions on the part of the company.—Reed v. Sampson (Tex. Civ. App.) 749.

§ 596. Under Rev. St. 1895, tit. 21, arts. 680, 681, construed in connection with Act April 23, 1907 (Laws 1907, p. 311, c. 164) § 4, subd. 5, the failure of a corporation to commence active operations within three years after filing its charter held not to ipso facto dissolve it.

article 681 not being self-executing.—Reed v. Sampson (Tex. Civ. App.) 749.

XII. FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

§ 690. Acts 1887, p. 329, c. 198, held not to authorize a consolidation and union of a domestic with a foreign corporation.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 890.

CORRECTION.

Of assessment of taxes, see Taxation, § 453.
Of irregularities and errors at trial, see Trial, § 412.

Of judgment, see Judgment, § 334.

Of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 635-655.

CORROBORATION.

Of witness in general, see Witnesses, § 831½.

COSTS.

In action for construction of will, see Wills, § 707.

Questions presented for review as to rulings on taxation of, see Appeal and Error, § 709.

VII. ON APPEAL OR ERROR, AND ON NEW TRIAL OR MOTION THEREFOR.

§ 232. One appealing from a judgment of the circuit court rendered on appeal from the county court is entitled to the costs of the appeal on the appellate court dismissing the cause because the county court was without jurisdiction.—Price v. Madison County Bank (Ark.) 706.

§ 234. Where there was error requiring a remittitur to cure, costs of the appeal should be taxed against the appellee.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 739.

§ 238. In trespass to try title, where the court, on rendering judgment for defendant, awarded him a writ of possession which was not justified by the pleadings, and plaintiff did not call the error to the attention of the court, the reformation of the judgment in that respect on appeal will not relieve plaintiff from the costs of appeal.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1185.

COUNTERCLAIM.

See Set-Off and Counterclaim.

COUNTERFEITING.

See Forgery.

COUNTIES.

See Municipal Corporations.

County attorneys, see District and Prosecuting Attorneys.

Validity of contract by attorney to secure contract from county, see Contracts, § 131.

I. CREATION, ALTERATION, EXISTENCE, AND POLITICAL FUNCTIONS.

Judicial notice, see Criminal Law, § 304.

II. GOVERNMENT AND OFFICERS.

(B) COUNTY SEAT.

Judgment on election contest as bar to proceeding to enjoin issue of bond relating to county seat removal, see Judgment, § 739.

Presumption as to performance of official duty, see Evidence, § 83.

Right of dower in land dedicated for county seat before conveyance to husband of claimant, see Dower, § 12.

§ 34. Under Const. art. 9, § 2, and Rev. St. 1895, art. 813, a certificate of the county commissioners designating the geographical center of the county held sufficient.—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

§ 34. Under Const. art. 9, § 2, and Rev. St. 1895, arts. 813, 815, county commissioners, in designating the center of a county, held not authorized to exclude from consideration that part of the county covered by waters, navigable or otherwise.—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

§ 34. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 813, a certificate of the land commissioners designating the geographical center of a county held conclusive.—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

§ 35. Under Const. art. 9, § 2, and under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 813, 815, the failure of the records of a judge to show that, in the determination of the result of an election to remove a county seat, the place to which the county seat was to be removed was within five miles of the geographical center, held not to render his order declaring the result of the election void.—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

§ 35. An order of a judge in a county seat removal election held to include a determination that the place to which the county seat was removed was within five miles of the center of the county.—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

§ 35. Under Const. art. 9, § 2, and Rev. St. 1895, arts. 813, 815, an order of a county judge declaring the result of a county seat removal election held not to be attacked.—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

III. PROPERTY, CONTRACTS, AND LIABILITIES.

(A) PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND OTHER PROPERTY.

§ 104. Effect of a deed executed to take the place of a former destroyed one donating land for a county seat stated.—Van Pelt v. Parry (Mo.) 425.

§ 108. Under Rev. St. 1855, c. 44, §§ 6, 8, and chapter 45, held, that a county could establish a permanent county seat on land already owned by it, and a subsequent sale as swamp land of a tract containing the town would not pass uncoveyed lots, county buildings etc.—Van Pelt v. Parry (Mo.) 425.

(B) CONTRACTS.

§ 121. The fiscal court of a county cannot bind itself by parol.—Fiscal Court of Breckenridge County v. Board of Trustees of Town of Hardinsburg (Ky.) 298.

IV. FISCAL MANAGEMENT, PUBLIC DEBT, SECURITIES, AND TAXATION.

Attorney's lien in action by tax payer on behalf of tax payers of county, see Attorney and Client, § 182.

Jurisdiction of action to compel depository of county fund to pay interest in United States currency, see Courts, § 124.

Mandamus at instance of county taxpayer, see Mandamus, § 23.

§ 196. An attorney employed by a taxpayer to prevent the illegal expenditure of county money, or to recover county money illegally expended, must look alone to the taxpayer for see Appeal and Error, § 373.

§ 208. A county cannot be sued except on an express contract.—Marion County v. Rives & McChord (Ky.) 309.

COUNTY SEATS.

See Counties, §§ 34, 35.

COURTS.

Justices' courts, see Justices of the Peace.
Mandamus to inferior courts, see Mandamus, § 51.

Province of court and jury, see Trial, §§ 191-200.

Removal of action from state court to United States court, see Removal of Causes.

Review of decisions, see Appeal and Error.

Right to trial by jury, see Jury, § 14.

Trial by court without jury, see Trial, § 395.

Jurisdiction of proceedings affecting particular classes of persons, see Guardian and Ward, § 144.

Jurisdiction of proceedings affecting trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 295.

Of action for accounting by guardian, see Guardian and Ward, § 144.

Of criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 90-101.

I. NATURE, EXTENT, AND EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION IN GENERAL.

To jurisdiction of state court in action against trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 295.

§ 35. The presumption is that a court of record, while sitting and performing its functions, is lawfully assembled.—State v. Bush (Mo. App.) 670.

§ 35. The fact that the several judges of the county court met at adjourned sessions is conclusive evidence that the regular term of court had not expired, and the presumption is that they would not have assembled as a court unless there had been an adjourned session, or on statutory notice.—State v. Bush (Mo. App.) 670.

§ 37. Since consent cannot give jurisdiction of the subject-matter where none exists, the question of jurisdiction of the subject-matter may be raised at any time.—Price v. Madison County Bank (Ark.) 706.

§ 37. Rule governing attack on jurisdictional defects stated.—Kingman-St. Louis Implement Co. v. Bantley Bros. Hardware Co. (Mo. App.) 500.

II. ESTABLISHMENT, ORGANIZATION, AND PROCEDURE IN GENERAL.

(C) RULES OF COURT AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

§ 82. Rules as to presenting assignments of error, being for the convenience of appellate courts to aid in the orderly dispatch of business, held directory only, and waivable by the courts.—Mitchell v. Rushing (Tex. Civ. App.) 582.

(D) RULES OF DECISION, ADJUDICATIONS, OPINIONS, AND RECORDS.

§ 89. As far as statutes affect a contest of a local option election, held, the Supreme Court will put its own construction thereon, instead of following that of the Court of Criminal Appeals.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

will be followed by the Court of Civil Appeals.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Pickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 1133.

§ 92. Inference from remarks of the Court of Appeals outside the point of decision should not be drawn against express decisions of the Supreme Court.—Crohn v. Clay County State Bank (Mo. App.) 498.

§ 104. The Court of Civil Appeals is not required by the statute to render written opinions in affirmed cases which cannot be taken to the Supreme Court by writ of error.—Wright v. Hooker (Tex. Civ. App.) 765.

§ 114. The entry of nunc pro tunc orders of adjournment on each day the court was in session during the term to correct the records held proper.—State v. Bush (Mo. App.) 670.

§ 116. Papers filed in a criminal case become a part of the record and cannot be changed, except by order of the court after full hearing and as authorized by law.—Carroll v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1031.

III. COURTS OF GENERAL ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.

(A) GROUNDS OF JURISDICTION IN GENERAL.

§ 120. The circuit court has no jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin a county judge's judgment imposing a fine of $5 under Civ. Code Prac. § 284.—Barnes v. Barnett (Ky.) 997.

§ 121. In an action for conversion the district court held to be without jurisdiction in the action.—Lindale Brick Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 568.

§ 121. In an action for damages, the interest forms a part of the damages, and if the amount of the damages and interest exceed the jurisdictional amount the court has no jurisdiction of the action.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Flory (Tex. Civ. App.) 1116.

(B) COURTS OF PARTICULAR STATES.

§ 124. An action to compel a depository of county funds selected under Acts 1907, p. 113, to pay interest, held within the jurisdiction of the circuit court under Const. art. 7, § 11, and not within the jurisdiction of the county court under section 28.—Price v. Madison County Bank (Ark.) 706.

§ 142. The circuit court of the city of St. Louis, like all other circuit courts in the state, is, to all intents and purposes, a court of general jurisdiction.—Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Gildersleeve (Mo.) 86, 97; Chicago & A. Ry. Co. v. Same (Mo.) 96.

VI. COURTS OF APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

(B) COURTS OF PARTICULAR STATES.

§ 223. The Court of Appeals held without jurisdiction of an appeal in an action for official salary, where the amount involved was but $126, though an affirmation would entitle plaintiff to such salary for his full term, which would be more than the jurisdictional amount.—Town of Beaver Dam v. Stevens (Ky.) 320.

§ 231. The Court of Appeals held without jurisdiction on appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to a writ of mandamus in a matter involving an estate largely in excess of $4,500.—State ex rel. Ashton v. Imel (Mo. App.) 97.

Topics, divisions, & section (f) NUMBERS in this Index, & Dec. & Amer. Digs. & Reporter Indexes agree

VIII. CONCURRENT AND CONFLICTING JURISDICTION, AND COMITY.

(B) STATE COURTS AND UNITED STATES COURTS.

§ 489. A state court held to have jurisdiction of an action to recover damages to an interstate shipment of live stock under Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 595 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909).—Louisville & N. E. Co. v. Scott (Ky.) 990.

COVENANTS.

In contract to sublease land for mining, see Mines and Minerals, § 62.

In insurance policies, see Insurance, §§ 330, 335.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

(A) EXPRESS COVENANTS.

Covenant of warranty on assignment of expectancy, see Assignments, § 8.

(B) IMPLIED COVENANTS.

§ 20. A purchaser of lots in a residence block held precluded from maintaining a wagon and feed yard thereon, through an implied covenant in his deed.—Lowrance v. Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 551.

§ 20. The date when defendant received a deed to lots held properly considered the date of his purchase, and not a prior date when he made a partial payment for the lots, taking a receipt therefor, as affecting notice to him that the block had been designated by the townsite company as residence property exclusively.—Lowrance v. Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 551.

IV. ACTIONS FOR BREACH.

§ 121. Where an unsuccessful suit was instituted, at grantor's instigation, to test his right and paramount title to land conveyed, as against third parties claiming it, it is not the rule that the grantee suing for a breach of warranty must still show that the title under which he was ousted was paramount to that of his grantor.—Landes v. Matthews (Mo. App.) 1185.

§ 122. In an action for breach of warranty of title, evidence held to show that a prior unsuccessful suit by plaintiffs against third parties claiming ground covered by the deed on which action was based was instituted by defendant's authority.—Landes v. Matthews (Mo. App.) 1185.

COVERTURE.

See Husband and Wife.

CREDIBILITY.

Of witness, see Witnesses, §§ 331½-405.

CREDIT.

Reports as to credit of persons engaged in business, see Mercantile Agencies, § 1.

CREDIT INSURANCE.

See Insurance, §§ 168, 432, 511, 665.

CREDITORS.

See Bankruptcy; Creditors' Suit; Fraudulent Conveyances.

Of intestate, see Descent and Distribution, § 152.

Remedies against surety, see Principal and Surety, § 139.

CREDITORS' SUIT.

§ 36. The lien obtained on the equitable assets of a debtor by a creditor's suit attaches thereto from the time of service of process, or on the filing of the bill and suing out of process.—Plummer & Davis v. School Dist. No. 1 of Marianna (Ark.) 1011.

§ 36. Creditors of a contractor, constructing a building for a school district instituting a suit against the district and the contractor to apply the funds in the hands of the directors to the payment of their debts against the contractor, held entitled to a preference over other creditors subsequently instituting such a suit.—Plummer & Davis v. School Dist. No. 1 of Marianna (Ark.) 1011.

CRIMINAL LAW.

Arrest of accused, see Arrest, § 65.

Bail, see Bail, §§ 56-77.

Indictment, information, or complaint, see Indictment and Information.

Prosecuting officers, see District and Prosecuting Attorneys.

Offenses by particular classes of persons.

See Infants, § 68; Master and Servant, § 79.

Particular offenses.

See Blasphemy; Burglary; Conspiracy, §§ 41-48; Forgery; Homicide; Incest; Larceny; Libel and Slander, § 159; Rape; Robbery; Seduction, §§ 38, 39; Sodomy.

Against liquor laws, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 233.

Carrying weapons, see Weapons, § 17.

Defacing brands on lumber, see Logs and Logging, § 37.

Engaging in business without license, see Licenses, § 42.

Violation of law relating to payment of wages, see Master and Servant, § 79.

IV. JURISDICTION.

§ 90. In view of the meaning of "accused" and "defendant," under Pen. Code 1895, art. 25, held that a justice of the peace does not act as a magistrate in a court of inquiry, under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 941.—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

§ 90. One justice of the peace as such cannot sit in the precinct of another justice, and take jurisdiction of matters arising therein, under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 1564, 1566, and hence cannot hold a court of inquiry under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 941, in another justice's precinct.—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

§ 90. Ordinarily one justice of the peace has no authority to take cognizance of proceedings within the limits of the jurisdiction of another justice, and statutes permitting it are to be strictly construed; and, where by statute certain proceedings must be had before a proper justice, no other justice can take jurisdiction.—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

§ 90. A justice of the peace has authority to sit as a magistrate under the express provisions of Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 41; but in view of article 62, providing that when a magistrate sits to inquire into a criminal accusation, his court is called an examining court, but his authority as a magistrate is entirely distinct from his jurisdiction as a justice of the peace.—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

§ 90. The jurisdiction of a justice of the peace is only that fixed by the Constitution and statutes; and, as a general rule, any exercise of jurisdiction by him beyond his prescribed power is void.—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

§ 101. Under Rev. St. 1899, art. 18, §§ 13, 18, 19 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 4900-4911), the St.

Louis Court of Criminal Correction held to have no jurisdiction of a misdemeanor committed in St. Louis by the transfer of an information filed in the circuit court of the city, as such proceedings can only be instituted in the Court of Criminal Correction.—State v. Cariot (Mo. App.) 512, 513.

X. EVIDENCE.

(A) JUDICIAL NOTICE, PRESUMPTIONS, AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

Evidence of confession for purpose of impeachment, see Witnesses, § 390.

In prosecution for offense against liquor law, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 233.

In prosecution for seduction, see Seduction, § 39.

§ 304. Though the court takes judicial notice of the boundaries of a county in the state, it does not take judicial notice of the county in which an unincorporated town is situated.—State v. Bush (Mo. App.) 670.

(B) FACTS IN ISSUE AND RELEVANT TO ISSUES, AND RES GESTÆ.

§ 349. The state may prove, as a circumstance to show flight of accused, that he was incarcerated in the general jail in a distant city, charged with the crime.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 361. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 791, where the explanatory matter offered in evidence is not a part of a conversation already inquired about, it must be necessary to explain the acts or statements introduced by the adverse party.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 366. Statements made by decedent almost immediately after the firing of the fatal shot held admissible as a part of the res gestæ.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

(C) OTHER OFFENSES, AND CHARACTER OF ACCUSED.

§ 369. All of the transaction in which the offense was committed may be given in evidence, though it shows another crime.—Bennett v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 332.

(F) ADMISSIONS, DECLARATIONS, AND HEARSAY.

§ 412. Notes found on accused while in jail with other prisoners, and which he attempted to pass to a visitor, and which showed the writers were preparing to arrange for alibis, held competent evidence against him.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

§ 419. Evidence in a prosecution for violation of the local option law held inadmissible as hearsay.—Ross v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1034.

(G) ACTS AND DECLARATIONS OF CONSPIRATORS AND CODEFENDANTS.

§ 423. Where two or more persons act together, any acts or declarations, prior to the commission of the crime, illustrating the purpose and animus or probable co-operation of the parties in the commission of the crime, are admissible.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 423. On a trial for homicide, alleged to have been committed by accused and a codefendant acting together, evidence that the codefendant was, prior to the homicide, seen going to the place of the homicide, held admissible.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 424. After the consummation of the conspiracy, the acts and declarations of the co-conspirators do not bind each other.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

§ 427. It cannot be shown that defendant belonged to a band of conspirators, by hearsay declarations of the conspirators themselves.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

(H) DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE AND EXCLUSION OF PAROL EVIDENCE THEREBY.

§ 429. A marriage license and return held admissible in evidence, without proof that the person signing the return as justice of the peace was such in fact.—Baker v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 542.

(I) OPINION EVIDENCE.

§ 478. An expert on gunshot wounds is competent to testify that the bullet which killed decedent entered in the back near the right shoulder blade, and that the point of exit was the wound in front of the body on the left breast.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

(K) CONFESSIONS.

§ 534. A confession, standing alone, held not to justify a conviction.—Brown v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 945.

(M) WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY.

In particular criminal prosecutions.

See Burglary, § 41; Conspiracy, § 47; Homicide, §§ 252-254; Incest, § 14; Larceny, §§ 56, 59; Robbery, § 24.

For carrying weapons, see Weapons, § 17.

§ 564. In a prosecution for violation of the local option law, evidence of a sale of liquor at a certain unincorporated town, without showing in what county such town is located, is insufficient to fix the venue, and therefore fails to show any offense.—State v. Bush (Mo. App.) 670.

XI. TIME OF TRIAL AND CONTINUANCE.

§ 589. Where the facts which accused expected to show by a witness, in order to procure whom he asked a continuance, were not material or probably true, and the evidence tended to show collusion between accused and the absent witness, a continuance was properly denied.—Myers v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1032.

§ 590. The court held to have abused its discretion in denying accused a continuance.—Smith v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 368.

§ 590. The refusal to postpone a case for 24 hours to enable accused to file a plea of former jeopardy held not erroneous.—Robinson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1037.

§ 594. Application for continuance for absence of witness held insufficient, where, on motion for new trial, the witness makes affidavit he would not have testified as claimed.—Smith v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 145.

§ 598. Defendant held not entitled to continuance for absent witness, who, as known to defendant at the preceding term, was not subpoenaed.—Smith v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 145.

§ 598. A postponement of a criminal case to procure testimony of witnesses held properly refused.—Ross v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1034.

§ 600. Denial of an application for a continuance for absence of certain witnesses for accused held not prejudicial.—Freeman v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 917.

§ 603. An affidavit held insufficient to authorize a third continuance.—Freeman v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 917.

§ 603. An application for continuance for the absence of a witness, which did not show whether the witness had permanently left the state, and did not show any probability that the witness would ever return to the state was defective.—Ross v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1034.

XII. TRIAL.

(A) PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS.

§ 621. The refusal to require the state to try accused on a prior indictment held not erroneous.—Robinson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1037.

(C) RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE.

§ 665. The exclusion of witnesses from the courtroom is largely discretionary, and parties not desiring to suffer by the rule for the separation of witnesses should exercise diligence to see that their witnesses obey it.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

(E) ARGUMENTS AND CONDUCT OF COUNSEL.

§ 714. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 823, the action of the district attorney, on a trial for murder, in referring on cross-examination to accused's former conviction, and in commenting thereon in his argument, held reversible error.—Benson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1049.

§ 720. Statement of commonwealth attorney held an inference not unauthorized by the evidence.—Cox v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 282.

§ 720. Much latitude is allowed a commonwealth attorney in the prosecution of his case; the only limitation being that he must confine himself to the facts in evidence and the fair and reasonable deductions and conclusions to be drawn therefrom.—Cox v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 282.

§ 721. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 770, held reversible error for the state's attorney to state in argument that accused's failure to testify for himself on his former trial showed that his present testimony was false.—Ilare v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 544.

§ 721. A remark of the prosecuting attorney held not a comment on accused's failure to testify.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 723. Argument of commonwealth's attorney held not improper.—Gipson v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 334.

§ 726. The prosecuting attorney's statements in argument as to why a witness was absent held a proper reply to the statements of accused's counsel as to his credibility.—Myers v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1032.

(F) PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY IN GENERAL.

§ 753. Where there is any evidence tending to show guilt, held, a peremptory instruction may not be given.—Bennett v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 332.

§ 762. An instruction in a homicide case held not misleading.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 763. Instructions held not erroneous as directing the jury to find accused guilty of either murder in the second degree or manslaughter.—Benson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1049.

§ 763. An instruction on impeaching testimony held erroneous, as on the weight to be given testimony.—Benson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1049.

(G) NECESSITY, REQUISITES, AND SUFFICIENCY OF INSTRUCTIONS.

In particular criminal prosecutions.

See Conspiracy, § 48; Libel and Slander, § 159.

§ 780. In a prosecution for robbery, a charge on accomplice testimony and its corroboration held improper.—Early v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1036.

§ 780. An instruction on the testimony of an accomplice held sufficiently favorable to accused.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 784. Held unnecessary under the evidence in a homicide case to charge on circumstantial evidence.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 784. The refusal to charge on circumstantial evidence in a homicide case held proper under the evidence.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 814. Where on the trial of a Mexican for murder, there was nothing suggesting the necessity of a charge that the jury must not allow the fact that accused was a Mexican to influence them, the refusal to so charge was not erroneous.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 814. Where, on the trial for the murder of the district judge, there was nothing suggesting the necessity of a charge that the jury must not consider the bare fact that decedent was a district judge, the refusal to so charge was not erroneous.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 822. When the instructions as a whole present the entire law of the case, they are sufficient.—Wheat v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 264.

§ 822. The court, in testing the sufficiency of a charge, must consider the instructions as a whole.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

(H) REQUESTS FOR INSTRUCTIONS.

§ 824. The failure to limit the use of impeaching testimony held not erroneous under the evidence.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 829. On a trial for homicide, the refusal to give an instruction held not erroneous, in view of the evidence and the instructions given.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

(J) CUSTODY, CONDUCT, AND DELIBERATIONS OF JURY.

§ 855. The practice of writing out the testimony of witnesses by the jury after retirement and using the writing in arriving at a verdict is not to be commended.—Gipson v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 334.

§ 864. The trial court's action in a murder prosecution in permitting the jury to inspect the fatal bullets in the courtroom held proper.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

XIII. MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL AND IN ARREST.

§ 913. Where there was an agreed statement of facts filed, the death of the presiding judge, after the trial and before the statement of facts was made up, was no ground for a new trial.—Ellis v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 543.

§ 941. A new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence held properly refused in a murder case.—Cox v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 282.

§ 946. A motion for a new trial and in arrest of judgment cannot be made together and at the same time, for a motion in arrest is a waiver of a motion for new trial.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 956. On motion for new trial in a homicide case on the ground that a juror had stated in the jury room that accused was guilty, etc., affidavits held to sustain a finding that the jury did not make the alleged improper statements.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 956. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 821, counter affidavits are receivable on a motion for a new trial, and the court may receive oral proof on the issue.—Pickett v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1039.

§ 972. A motion in arrest must rest on matter of record.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 974. A motion in arrest must state specifically the grounds on which it is based.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

XV. APPEAL AND ERROR, AND CERTIORARI.

(A) FORM OF REMEDY, JURISDICTION, AND RIGHT OF REVIEW.

§ 1020. A judgment of the county court in a criminal case appealed from a justice court is not appealable when the fine is under $100.—Cassens v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 546.

§ 1024. A writ of error will not lie from an order quashing an information.—State v. Wilkison (Mo. App.) 659.

(B) PRESENTATION AND RESERVATION IN LOWER COURT OF GROUNDS OF REVIEW.

§ 1030. Objections going to such irregularities as could have been corrected on the attention of the trial court having been called there-to held waived.—Hobbs v. State (Tenn.) 262.

§ 1032. Objections to the indictment must be made in the trial court.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 1035. An objection to the failure to swear the jury must be presented to the trial court, or it is waived.—Hobbs v. State (Tenn.) 262.

§ 1036. To take advantage of the admission of improper evidence, accused must object to its introduction and reserve his exceptions to the overruling of his objection.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 1032. A denial of a continuance is not reviewable, where no exception was reserved to the ruling.—Crowson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1036.

(C) PROCEEDINGS FOR TRANSFER OF CAUSE, AND EFFECT THEREOF.

§ 1033. An order granting an appeal cannot be set aside without notice to the appellant.—State v. Biesemeyer (Mo. App.) 1197.

(D) RECORD AND PROCEEDINGS NOT IN RECORD.

§ 1090. Error assigned in the motion for a new trial in refusing to grant a continuance cannot be considered on a criminal appeal, where the record contains no bill of exceptions preserving the point.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 1090. Where the record contained no statement of facts or bill of exceptions, and the indictment was sufficient, the judgment must be affirmed.—Mallory v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1031.

§ 1090. A ruling permitting a witness to be impeached cannot be reviewed, in absence of a bill of exceptions.—Crowson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1036.

§ 1091. The court on appeal, in reviewing an assignment complaining of the failure of the court to limit impeaching testimony, held not required to examine a voluminous statement of facts to learn of the nature and character of the impeaching testimony and whether in fact it should have been limited.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 1094. Where the record contains neither statement of facts nor bill of exceptions, the judgment will be affirmed.—Miller v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 534.

§ 1097. If the bill of exceptions on accused's appeal did not fairly or fully state the matters necessary to review errors in admitting evidence or permitting improper argument, so that a statement of facts was essential to review the case, it became the state attorney's duty to bring up the statement of facts.—Hare v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 544.

§ 1097. Though the record contained no statement of facts, accused held entitled to avail himself on appeal of errors in requiring him to state whether he testified on a former trial, and in permitting comments in argument on his failure to so testify, in violation of Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 770.—Hare v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 544.

(G) REVIEW.

§ 1137. Where accused presented a special charge similar to that prepared by the court, after its charge was framed, but before it was read to the jury, any error in the court's charge was invited, and accused cannot complain thereof.—Myers v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1032.

§ 1144. The Supreme Court, on appeal, will, as against objection made for the first time on appeal, presume that the jury were sworn.—Hobbs v. State (Tenn.) 262.

§ 1144. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 821, the court, on appeal from the denial of a new trial for misconduct of the jury, held required to assume, in the absence of a bill of exceptions or anything to the contrary, that the matter alleged in the motion was found untrue.—Pickett v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1039.

§ 1156. Under Cr. Code Prac. § 281, providing that the decision on motion for a new trial shall not be subject to exception, the matter of misconduct of the jury, first brought to the attention of the court on application for a new trial, cannot be considered on appeal.—Gipson v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 334.

§ 1158. The appellate court will not disturb the trial court's findings upon affidavits relative to the misconduct of a juror in the jury room unless his decision is clearly wrong.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 1159. The verdict of a jury upon the facts in a criminal case will not be disturbed on appeal except in the absence of proof to support it.—Cox v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 282.

§ 1159. The credibility of a witness is a question for the jury in the trial court.—Gipson v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 334.

§ 1169. Admission of improper evidence held reversible error.—Ross v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1034.

§ 1169. The error in admitting certain evidence held not prejudicial to accused.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 1172. Whether the court correctly defined carnal knowledge in a prosecution for incest held immaterial.—Baker v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 542.

§ 1173. On a trial for horse stealing, failure to give certain charge held prejudicially erroneous.—Walklate v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 314.

§ 1174. Certain occurrences in the presence of the jury held harmless.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 1177. The error in assessing punishment at "seven years in the penitentiary," instead of "seven years' confinement in the penitentiary," is harmless.—Baker v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 542.

CROPS.

Measure of damages for injuries to, see Damages, § 112.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

See Witnesses, § 268.

CRUELTY.

Ground for divorce, see Divorce, § 27.

CURTESY.

See Dower.

CUSTODY.

Of child, see Guardian and Ward, §§ 54, 58.
Of goods in course of transportation, see Carriers, § 76.
Of jury, see Criminal Law, §§ 855, 864.

CUSTOMS AND USAGES.

Customary law, see Common Law.
Evidence of custom as to disinfection of cars used in transportation of live stock, see Carriers, § 228.

CUSTOMS DUTIES.

VII. VIOLATIONS OF CUSTOMS LAWS.

Conviction of offense as affecting competency of person convicted to testify in criminal cases, see Witnesses, § 48.

DAMAGES.

Damages for particular injuries.

See Death, § 99; Libel and Slander, § 120; Malicious Prosecution, §§ 67-68; Trespass, § 52.
Breach by buyer of contract for sale of goods, see Sales, §§ 369, 413.
Breach by vendor of contract for sale of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 342-352.
Breach of contract to convey land, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 351.
Breach of contract to sublease land for mining, see Mines and Minerals, § 62.
Delay in shipment, see Carriers, § 105.
Failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, §§ 68, 71.
For injuries to shipment of live stock, see Carriers, § 229.
Malpractice, see Physicians and Surgeons, § 18.
Wrongful attachment, see Attachment, §§ 375-377.
Wrongful execution, see Execution, § 472.
Wrongful injunction, see Injunction, § 261.
Wrongful sequestration, see Sequestration, § 21.

III. GROUNDS AND SUBJECTS OF COMPENSATORY DAMAGES.

(A) DIRECT OR REMOTE, CONTINGENT, OR PROSPECTIVE, CONSEQUENCES OR LOSSES.

For assault and battery, see Assault and Battery, § 38.
In actions for malicious prosecutions, see Malicious Prosecution, § 67.
§ 20. In an action for damages for a wrongful act, it is not material whether it was in the contemplation of the wrongdoer that loss of business or profit would result to the injured person.—Kentucky Heating Co. v. Hood (Ky.) 337.
§ 32. Where plaintiff, a woman en ciende, was injured by defendant's actionable negligence, and suffered an abortion, she could recover for her injury, including mental and physical suffering, the natural and proximate result of the injury.—Big Sandy & C. R. Co. v. Blankenship (Ky.) 316.

§ 38. In an action for injuries, evidence that plaintiff's mind was not as accurate as it was before he was hurt was admissible as bearing on the question of damages.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 48. The subjects of recovery for mental anguish caused by negligent injuries stated.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 53. In an action for personal injuries, it was not error to permit plaintiff to testify that he suffered mental anguish by fear that blood poisoning might set in and prove fatal.—Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. McSwain (Tex. Civ. App.) 874.

§ 54. Mental anguish caused an injured person by his being an object of pity, sympathy, or curiosity to the public or to his friends held not a subject of compensation.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

(B) AGGRAVATION, MITIGATION, AND REDUCTION OF LOSS.

§ 62. Where defendant's fences were knocked down by plaintiff in lumbering operations, defendant was only bound to exercise reasonable care for the protection of his crops and grass.—Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith (Ky.) 307.

§ 62. In an action for breach of a hauling contract, defendant held not to have waived his right of action against defendants by having accepted employment from the buyer of defendants' business.—Smith v. J. H. Carter & Co. (Mo. App.) 527.

§ 64. A railroad company destroying buildings by fire cannot reduce the owner's recovery therefor by showing that he received insurance.—Erhart v. Wabash Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 657.

IV. LIQUIDATED DAMAGES AND PENALTIES.

§ 80. Three dollars per day held a reasonable sum to be agreed on as liquidated damages to be paid by the contractor to the owner for failure to complete a $13,000 hotel within the time specified in the contract.—Illinois Surety Co. v. Garrard Hotel Co. (Ky.) 967.

V. EXEMPLARY DAMAGES.

For particular injuries.

Ejection of passenger, see Carriers, § 382.
Injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 282.
Libel, see Libel and Slander, § 120.
Wrongful sequestration, see Sequestration, § 21.
§ 91. When exemplary damages may be awarded stated.—Greer v. White (Ark.) 258.

VI. MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

For particular injuries.

Wrongful injunction, see Injunction, § 261.

(A) INJURIES TO THE PERSON.

§ 95. In an action for injuries, damages are confined to expense of cure, value of time lost, compensation for suffering, and permanent reduction of earning power.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Crow (Ky.) 365.

(B) INJURIES TO PROPERTY.

Injuries caused by overflow, see Waters and Water Courses, §§ 125, 178.

§ 112. The measure of damages for the destruction by fire of timber and grass is the difference between the value of the land just before and just after the fire.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 112. Where peach trees and grapevines are entirely destroyed by fire set by a locomotive, the measure of damages is the difference in value of the land just before and after the burning.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Graffeo (Tex. Civ. App.) 873.

VII. INADEQUATE AND EXCESSIVE DAMAGES.

For particular injuries.

Ejection of passengers, see Carriers, § 332.

Malpractice, see Physicians and Surgeons, § 18.

§ 130. In an action for injuries, a verdict for plaintiff held not excessive.—Big Sandy & O. R. Co. v. Blankenship (Ky.) 316.

§ 130. $10,000 recovered for personal injuries held excessive by $4,000.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 131. In an action for injuries, a verdict for plaintiff for $700 held not so excessive as to indicate passion or prejudice.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

§ 131. A verdict in a personal injury action held not excessive.—Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 406.

§ 132. In an action for injuries, a verdict for $5,000 held not excessive.—Eilerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

§ 132. A verdict in a personal injury action held excessive, requiring a reduction of a specified amount.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 132. In an action for personal injuries, a verdict for $4,500 held not excessive.—Van Cleve v. St. Louis, M. & S. E. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 116.

§ 132. A verdict in a personal injury action held not excessive.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Redus (Tex. Civ. App.) 208.

§ 132. A verdict of $1,500 in an action for personal injuries to a servant held not excessive.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Browning (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 132. A verdict allowing an injured plaintiff $25,000 held excessive and to be reduced to $17,500.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 132. In an action for injuries to a servant, a verdict for $10,000 held not excessive.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1004.

VIII. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, AND ASSESSMENT.

(A) PLEADING.

Assessment on overruling demurrer to complaint; see Pleading, § 218.

§ 143. In personal injury cases, plaintiff should so describe his injuries that defendant from an inspection of the pleading may have reasonable notice of the injuries for which a recovery will be sought.—Louisville Ry. Co. v. Gaugh (Ky.) 276.

§ 158. Under a complaint alleging injury to the head, evidence as to injury to the hearing held inadmissible as a distinct ground for compensation.—Louisville Ry. Co. v. Gaugh (Ky.) 276.

§ 158. In an action for injuries to the hip and spine, testimony that one of plaintiff's legs below the knee was smaller than the other held admissible.—Lexington Ry. Co. v. Woodward (Ky.) 965.

(B) EVIDENCE.

§ 174. In an action for injury to land by overflow in May, 1905, testimony as to its value on March 14, 1906, held properly excluded on question of damages.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Chilton (Tex. Civ. App.) 779.

§ 184. In an action for injuries to plaintiffs' business, caused by false statements by defendant to plaintiffs' customers, evidence held to justify a verdict of $4,000 actual damage, and $10,000 exemplary damages, to plaintiffs.—American Freehold Land Mortgage Co. of London v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 1106.

§ 185. Evidence held to warrant a verdict finding that plaintiff's condition resulted from the injury sued for.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Downey (Ky.) 284.

§ 185. Where the record discloses the fact that the jury misunderstood the evidence bearing on the question of damages in a personal injury action, or ignored the same or returned a verdict for an excessive amount, the court must correct the error.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

(C) PROCEEDINGS FOR ASSESSMENT.

Assessment on overruling demurrer to complaint, see Pleading, § 218.

Assumptions by judge as to facts, see Trial, § 191.

§ 208. In an action for injuries by fire set by a locomotive, evidence held sufficient to take to the jury the question of damages.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Graffeo (Tex. Civ. App.) 873.

§ 208. Evidence held sufficient to take to the jury the issue of depreciation in value of land by reason of the destruction of peach trees.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Graffeo (Tex. Civ. App.) 873.

§ 210. An instruction authorizing a recovery for more than amount claimed in the petition held erroneous.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Graffeo (Tex. Civ. App.) 873.

§ 216. A charge, in an action against a city for injuries from a defective street, held erroneous.—Town of Belleview v. England (Ky.) 994.

§ 216. An instruction in a personal injury action held not erroneous as authorizing the jury in assessing damages to consider plaintiff's prior diseased physical condition.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 216. An instruction limiting damages for future suffering to such as plaintiff "would undergo" held too favorable to defendant.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

§ 216. An instruction, in an action for personal injuries, held to correctly charge on the measure of damages, in the absence of a requested instruction thereon.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 216. An instruction permitting a recovery for "any pain of body, any mental distress, any humiliation or shame," etc., suffered by plaintiff did not permit the jury to award double damages for mental distress.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

(D) COMPUTATION AND AMOUNT, DOUBLE AND TREBLE DAMAGES, AND REMISSION.

§ 228. A remittitur of the amount claimed for medical attendance and medicine obviated any error in the submission of such elements of damage.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

DAYS.

Excluding or including in computation of time, see Time, § 9.

DEATH.

Of client as terminating relation of attorney and client, see Attorney and Client, § 76.
 Of party to action before entry of judgment against him as ground for collateral attack on judgment, see Judgment, § 486.
 Of party to action before entry of judgment against him as ground for vacating judgment, see Judgment, § 336.
 Of party to action ground for abatement, see Abatement and Revival, § 58.
 Of principal and terminating agency, see Principal and Agent, § 43.
 Of trial judge prior to making up statement of facts for appeal as ground for new trial in criminal prosecution, see Criminal Law, § 913.

II. ACTIONS FOR CAUSING DEATH.(A) RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

§ 9. Statutes giving a right of action for a wrongful death, being in derogation of the common law, must be construed with reasonable strictness.—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.

§ 14. To authorize a recovery under Rev. St. 1899, § 2864 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1637), for the death of a person, a criminal intent of the wrongdoer, followed by criminal conduct, resulting in fatal injury, must be shown.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

§ 31. The action for wrongful death being purely statutory, only such persons can bring it as are designated in the statute.—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.

(C) PARTIES AND PROCESS.

§ 42. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2864 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1637), giving a cause of action for a wrongful death of an unmarried minor to be recovered by the father and mother, held, that both must join in the action before judgment, and, if the father refuses to join, the mother cannot recover by making him a coplaintiff against his consent.—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & O. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.

(D) PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

§ 76. Where the evidence in an action for negligent death did not show the proximate cause of the accident, but left the same open to conjecture, there could be no recovery.—Mt. Marion Coal Mining Co. v. Holt (Tex. Civ. App.) 825.

(E) DAMAGES, FORFEITURE, OR FINE.

§ 99. Verdict of $1,000 in favor of the estate of a passenger killed in alighting from a train held not excessive.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Pate (Ark.) 260.

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

See Bankruptcy; Creditors' Suit; Fraudulent Conveyances.

DECEDENTS.

Estates, see Descent and Distribution; Executors and Administrators.
Testimony as to transactions with persons since deceased, see Witnesses, §§ 144-176.

DECLARATION.

In pleading, see Pleading, § 49.

DECLARATIONS.

As evidence in civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 271-313.

As evidence in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 412, 419.

DEDICATION.

Dedication as extinguishment of dower, see Dower, § 47.

I. NATURE AND REQUISITES.

§ 1. Elements of dedication stated.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 13. Any acts of a life tenant of land respecting a dedication thereof would not affect the remaindermen, as the life tenant could not dedicate any interest in the fee.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 15. Proof necessary to establish dedication by implication stated.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 15. The mere fact that persons living in the neighborhood of a tract of uninclosed and unimproved woodland had been allowed to use a passway across it, repairing it from time to time, without interruption for 30 years, does not show an intention to dedicate the way to the public use.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 16. The assent and intent of the owner to appropriate land to a public use is sufficient to constitute a dedication; no writing being necessary.—Menczer v. Poage (Tex. Civ. App.) 863.

§ 31. Mere dedication is not enough to constitute a street a public street, so as to impose on a city the duty to keep it clear of defects, nuisances, and obstructions by third persons or by the city itself, but there must be an acceptance of the dedication by the city.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 35. An acceptance of a dedicated street may be either express or implied.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 43. An instrument acknowledging receipt of a sum of money for an alley between certain streets, as well as parol testimony to locate and identify the strip, was admissible to show an intention to dedicate the strip as a public alley.—Menczer v. Poage (Tex. Civ. App.) 863.

§ 44. Evidence held to show that a strip of land 50 feet wide, including a strip upon which a defective sidewalk and sink hole were situated, was dedicated to a city for a public street.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 45. Whether the dedication of land for a street was accepted by a city, held, under the evidence, to be for the jury.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

II. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

Evidence of similar facts in order to show purposes of dedication, see Evidence, § 129.

§ 51. Fact that public did not use full width of dedicated street held not to affect the effect of dedication and acceptance.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

DEEDS.

Acknowledgment of execution, see Acknowledgment.

Admissions by grantor, see Evidence, § 230.

Cancellation, see Cancellation of Instruments.
 Champertous deeds, see Champerty and Maintenance, § 7.

Covenants in deeds, see Covenants.

Deeds used at exhibits as part of record on appeal and error, see Appeal and Error, § 510.

Estoppel by deed, see Estoppel, §§ 12-47.

In fraud of creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances.

In trust, see Trusts, §§ 1-18.

Parol or extrinsic evidence, see Evidence, §§ 400-442.

Deeds by or to particular classes of persons.
 Married women, see Husband and Wife, § 60½.
Deeds of particular species of, or estates or interest in, property.
 See Mines and Minerals, § 55.
 Creating easement, see Easements, §§ 5-42.
 Of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 118-128.
 Of trust, see Mortgages.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

(A) NATURE AND ESSENTIALS OF CONVEYANCES IN GENERAL.

§ 15. A consideration is not necessary to support a deed or conveyance that is fully executed and delivered.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 17. Love and affection is a sufficient consideration of a deed between husband and wife.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

(D) DELIVERY.

§ 56. Where a deed was never delivered to the grantees, but they surreptitiously took it from the grantor and paid nothing for it, no interest passed to them thereunder.—White v. Holder (Ky.) 993.

§ 56. Facts held to show that a deed was sufficiently delivered to authorize the foreclosure of a vendor's lien to secure the payment of certain reserved rents.—Tipton v. Tipton (Tex. Civ. App.) 842.

(E) VALIDITY.

§ 70. Fraudulent representations of a third person will not warrant rescission of a deed and recovery of the purchase money paid, unless they were authorized, or vendor knew or approved thereof.—Travis v. Taylor (Ky.) 988.

II. RECORDING AND REGISTRATION.

Presumptions as to correctness of record, see Evidence, § 83.

III. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

(A) GENERAL RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

§ 96. Recital in deed as to consideration held evidence thereof.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 97. Where, in the caption of a deed, T. and his wife were named as parties of the second part, but in the granting clause only T. was named, there was a conveyance to T. alone.—Loughridge v. Ball (Ky.) 321.

§ 99. A deed and a contract, executed at the same time, as part consideration of the deed, are to be considered as though the contract were part of the deed.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

(E) CONDITIONS AND RESTRICTIONS.

Evidence of restriction in order to show purposes of dedication of other property near by, see Evidence, § 129.

IV. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

§ 195. In determining the legal effect of an executed conveyance in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the law will imply a consideration.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 211. Evidence held to show that the grantor knew what land was described in the deed and was not mistaken in its identity.—McMillan v. Morgan (Ark.) 407.

DEFACING BRANDS.

On lumber, see Logs and Logging, § 37.

DEFAMATION.

See Libel and Slander.

DEFAULT.

Judgment by, see Judgment, §§ 118-170.

DEGREES.

Of murder, see Homicide, §§ 23, 255.

DELAY.

In delivery of telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 38.

In prosecution of appeal as ground for dismissal, see Appeal and Error, § 787.

In transportation or delivery of goods by carrier, see Carriers, §§ 104-108.

Laches, see Equity, § 67.

DELIVERY.

Of deed, see Deeds, § 56; Escrows.

Of gift, see Gifts, § 19.

Of goods by carrier, see Carriers, §§ 79, 84.

Of goods sold, see Sales, §§ 150-181.

Of instrument as element of forgery, see Forgery, § 4.

DEMONSTRATIVE EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see Evidence, § 178.

DEMURRER.

In pleading, see Pleading, §§ 192-218.

To evidence, see Trial, § 156.

DENIALS.

In pleading, see Pleading, § 121.

DEPARTURE.

In pleading, see Pleading, § 180.

DEPOSITARIES.

Of deeds delivered as escrow, see Escrows.

DEPOSITIONS.

See Witnesses.

§ 84. Where a deposition was suppressed because of irregularities, held improper to retake the deposition on the same direct and cross-interrogatories on file, without further notice.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

§ 107. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2289, held, that objections to the form and manner of taking a deposition, made when it was offered in evidence, were properly overruled.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 1155.

DEPOSITS.

As security to performance of land contract, rights of parties on abandonment of contract, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 87.

DEPOTS.

Railroad stations, care required of carrier as to condition, see Carriers, § 238.

DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.

See Dower; Executors and Administrators; Homestead, §§ 145, 146; Wills.

III. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF HEIRS AND DISTRIBUTEES.(A) NATURE AND ESTABLISHMENT OF RIGHTS IN GENERAL.

Covenant of warranty on assignment of expectancy, see Assignments, § 8.

(C) DEBTS OF INTESTATE AND INCUMBRANCES ON PROPERTY.

§ 152. Since the redemption of mortgaged property by the mortgagor's widow to satisfy her dower right would inure to the benefit of the mortgagor's infant children and heirs, she was entitled to contribution from them, and that the purchaser claimed to have purchased on foreclosure for the benefit of the children did not affect her right to contribution.—Hiller v. Nelson (Ky.) 292.

DESCRIPTION.

Of property conveyed, see Boundaries, §§ 8-10.
Of property devised or bequeathed, see Wills, § 560.

DEVISES.

See Wills.

ILATORY PLEAS.

See Pleading, § 106.

DILIGENCE.

Affecting right to continuance in criminal prosecution, see Criminal Law, § 594.
Affecting right to new trial, see New Trial, § 102.
Of party asking relief, see Specific Performance, § 97.

DISABILITIES.

Of married women, see Husband and Wife, § 69½.

DISCHARGE.

From indebtedness, obligation, or liability.
See Bankruptcy, § 391; Compromise and Settlement; Release.
Liability as surety, see Principal and Surety, §§ 100, 117.

DISCONTINUANCE.

Of action, see Dismissal and Nonsuit, § 7.

DISCRETION OF COURT.

Exclusion from courtroom of witnesses not under examination, see Trial, § 41.
Opening default judgment, see Judgment, § 143.
Review in civil actions, see Appeal and Error, §§ 945, 959.

DISCRIMINATION.

By carrier, see Carriers, §§ 13, 32.

DISEASES.

Of animals, liability of carrier for infection, see Carriers, §§ 215, 217, 228.

DISINFECTION.

Of cars used in transportation of livestock, see Carriers, § 228.

DISMISSAL AND NONSUIT.

Construction of limitation laws as to bringing new action, see Limitation of Actions, §§ 5, 6.
Costs on dismissal of appeal, see Costs, § 232.
Dismissal of appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 787.
Review of decision as dependent on finality of determination, see Appeal and Error, § 78.
Setting aside judgment of dismissal, see Judgment, § 382.

I. VOLUNTARY.

§ 7. A cause held not finally submitted with in Rev. St. 1899, § 639 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 658), notwithstanding section 714 (page 711).—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 7. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 639 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 658), an order dismissing a cause while the whole case was under submission held void on the face of the record.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

II. INVOLUNTARY.

§ 48. An order of dismissal entered at a term subsequent to the rendition of a final judgment in the cause is void.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

DISSOLUTION.

Of attachment, see Attachment, §§ 228, 232.
Of corporation, see Corporations, §§ 592½, 596.
Of injunction, see Injunction, §§ 171, 172.
Of partnership, see Partnership, §§ 273-325.

DISTRIBUTION.

Of estate of decedent, see Descent and Distribution.

DISTRICT AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

Right to purchase land at tax sale, see Taxation, § 674.

§ 5. The anti-trust law of 1903 (Gen. Laws, p. 119, c. 94), which expressly repealed the anti-trust law of 1899 (Laws 26th Leg. p. 246, c. 146), approved May 25th, 1899, but contained a proviso that it should not affect any rights of the state to recover penalties, etc., for acts committed before it took effect, held to repeal a provision of the law of 1899, giving the prosecuting attorney one-fourth of the penalties collected as compensation.—State v. Brady (Tex.) 128.

§ 5. The provision of the anti-trust law of 1903 (Gen. Laws, p. 119, c. 94), relating to the fees of prosecuting attorneys for representing the state in prosecutions under the act, held to apply to the collection of penalties for violations of the anti-trust law of 1899 (Laws 26th Leg. p. 246, c. 146), approved May 25, 1899, the provision of which relating to the fees of prosecuting attorneys was repealed by the law of 1903.—State v. Brady (Tex.) 128.

DITCHES.

See Drains.

DIVORCE.II. GROUNDS.

§ 27. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. art. 2977, the act of a husband in stealthily abandoning the wife and taking with him an infant held not cruel treatment, justifying a divorce.—Slaughter v. Slaughter (Tex. Civ. App.) 193.

IV. JURISDICTION, PROCEEDINGS, AND RELIEF.

(C) PLEADING.

§ 104. A husband's misconduct toward his wife after the filing of her suit for divorce is properly assigned in an amended petition as grounds for divorce.—Hicks v. Stewart & Templeton (Tex. Civ. App.) 206.

(H) FEES AND COSTS.

§ 197. The husband and wife are both liable for reasonable counsel fees of attorneys prosecuting her suit for divorce, when it appears that the facts alleged were probably true and constituted such cruelty as rendered cohabitation insupportable.—Hicks v. Stewart & Templeton (Tex. Civ. App.) 206.

§ 197. The husband and wife are liable for reasonable attorneys' fees necessarily incurred in her suit for divorce, regardless of her mental capacity to contract.—Hicks v. Stewart & Templeton (Tex. Civ. App.) 206.

VII. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF DIVORCE, AND RIGHTS OF DIVORCED PERSONS.

Effect on right to sue for death of child, see Death, § 42.

DOCKETS.

Of causes for trial, see Trial, § 11.

DOCUMENTS.

As evidence in civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 342-363.

As evidence in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 429.

DOMICILE.

Of parties as affecting venue, see Venue, §§ 21-26.

DONATIONS.

See Gifts.

DOWER.

Right of widow of defendant in mortgage foreclosure proceedings claiming right of dower to redeem, see Mortgages, § 594.

I. NATURE AND REQUISITES.

§ 12. Where a person who, with full notice that swamp land had been permanently dedicated as a county seat, took a deed to it from the county, thus acquiring at most only a seisin to the use of the county, his widow was not entitled to dower therein, under Rev. St. 1890, §§ 2933, 2956 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 1690, 1704).—Van Pelt v. Parry (Mo.) 425.

§ 13. A wife held entitled to dower in her husband's defeasible fee which her issue would have inherited as his heir.—Rice v. Rice (Ky.) 270.

II. INCHOATE INTEREST.

(B) BAR, RELEASE, OR FORFEITURE.

§ 46. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 2135 (Russell's St. § 4645), a widow who joined her husband in a mortgage of the homestead held entitled to dower in the surplus of the proceeds of the sale.—Hiller v. Nelson (Ky.) 292.

§ 46. A married woman's inchoate right of dower in land held not affected by a judgment foreclosing a mortgage on the land.—Eversole v. First Nat. Bank (Ky.) 961.

§ 47. If the fee of land held by a husband passed during his lifetime to a city for public use as a street either by prescription, by express dedication by deed, or by acts in pais coupled with acceptance, or by condemnation, the wife's inchoate right of dower was extinguished.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

III. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF WIDOW.

Redemption from mortgage in order to protect dower of rights, right to contribution against heir of mortgagor, see Descent and Distribution, § 152.

§ 59. A widow is entitled to either dower or homestead in the lands of her deceased husband, at her election, which she has a reasonable time to make after her husband's death; but she can elect at once, and, having elected to take a homestead, she cannot thereafter surrender the homestead right and take a dower interest.—White v. Holder (Ky.) 995.

§ 59. Evidence held to show that a widow elected to take a homestead in her deceased husband's land.—White v. Holder (Ky.) 995.

DRAINS.

In cities, see Municipal Corporation, § 827.

I. ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE.

§ 36. Under Const. art. 7, §§ 14, 83, held, that the right of appeal from an order of allowance of fees to attorneys for a drainage district existed though it was not conferred by Kirby's Dig. § 1428, and it could be exercised under sections 1487-1493.—Huddleston & Taylor v. Coffman (Ark.) 1010.

§ 36. A citizen of a county owning land in a drainage district held entitled under Const. art. 13, § 16, to appeal from an order allowing fees to attorneys.—Huddleston & Taylor v. Coffman (Ark.) 1010.

DRUNKARDS.

Care required as to intoxicated licensee on premises, see Negligence, § 32.

DUE PROCESS OF LAW.

See Constitutional Law, §§ 297, 303.

DURESS.

In securing note, see Bills and Notes, § 520.

EARNINGS.

Right of parent to earnings of child, see Parent and Child, § 5.

EASEMENTS.

Public easements, see Dedication; Highways.

I. CREATION, EXISTENCE, AND TERMINATION.

§ 5. Essentials of an easement by prescription stated.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 8. Under St. 1909, § 2546 (Russell's St. § 221), one maintaining without authority water pipes in the streets of a city to deliver water to customers held not to acquire the right by adverse possession to maintain the pipes, where no notice was given the city.—Kevil v. City of Princeton (Ky.) 863.

§ 10. A person held not to have acquired a right of way over land by prescription.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 18. The fact that the only means of exit from a person's land to a public highway is over the land of another gives him no right to use the other's land.—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

§ 18. A grantee of minerals has no way of necessity over land of a stranger to remove such minerals.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

§ 42. An ambiguous grant of an easement will be construed in favor of the claimant of the easement.—Frisbie v. Bigham Masonic Lodge No. 256 (Ky.) 359.

EJECTION.

Of passenger, see Carriers, §§ 863-884.

EJECTMENT.

See Trespass to Try Title.

ELECTION.

Between counts in indictment, see Indictment and Information, § 132.

ELECTIONS.

Of corporate officers, see Corporations, § 281.
To determine establishment of graded school, see Schools and School Districts, § 42.
To determine issue of school district bonds, see Schools and School Districts, § 97.

I. RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE AND REGULATION THEREOF IN GENERAL.

§ 1. The exercise of the elective franchise held a right conferred by the state or body politic.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

II. ORDERING OR CALLING ELECTION, AND NOTICE.

Election on question of issuing school district bond, see Schools and School Districts, § 97.

III. ELECTION DISTRICTS OR PRECINCTS AND OFFICERS.

§ 51. Under Election Law (Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 535, c. 11), § 60, that a city alderman unlawfully acted as judge of an election held not to vitiate the election; there being another judge.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

IV. QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTERS.

Election to determine question of levying school taxes, see Schools and School Districts, § 103.

§ 60. Const. 1875, art. 6, § 2, as amended by Acts 1901, p. 322, providing that any voter subject to pay a poll tax must pay the same before he offers to vote, does not render unconstitutional Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 527, c. 11, § 23, providing a method for determining how and where a voter shall or shall not be declared subject to a poll tax.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 60. The statutory requirement that a voter pay a city poll tax held not unconstitutional, as imposing a burden additional to that imposed by Const. 1875, art. 6, § 2, as amended by Acts 1901, p. 322, requiring the payment of poll taxes imposed by the laws of the state.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 72. A citizen of the United States, who had actually resided in the state 12 months and in the county 6 months prior to casting his vote, held qualified.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 72. Under Election Law (Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 521, c. 11) § 4, the residence of a voter held to have been in a certain town.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 72. A minor, residing for 12 months in the state with his father's consent, became a resident and entitled to vote on attaining his majority, though the father was absent from the state part of the time.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 74. A member of the National Guards employed in the service of the army of the United States, is not, under the state Constitution, entitled to vote.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 83. One owing a state and county poll tax to F. county for 1906, which he had not paid prior to February 1, 1907, held not entitled to vote at an election in P. county in December, 1907.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 83. Where one paid his state poll tax within the time required by law, it was immaterial, so far as it affected his qualification as an elector in P. county, whether he paid the tax there or in another county.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

VII. BALLOTS.

§ 180. A mutilated ballot must be construed so as to give effect to the voter's intent, if it can be ascertained from the face of the ballot.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 190. A torn ballot, which can be so placed together as to show beyond doubt its number and for what it was voted, is valid.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

VIII. CONDUCT OF ELECTION.

§ 198. The general rule is that statutory provisions as to elections, if not made expressly mandatory, will be construed as so far directory that the election will not be nullified by mere irregularities, not fraudulently brought about, when the departure from the prescribed method throws a substantial doubt on the result.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 208. The provision of a statute as to the time of opening and closing the polls is so far directory that an irregularity in this respect, which does not deprive a legal voter of his vote or admit a disqualified person to vote, will not vitiate the election.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 227. Elections for advancement of educational interests of children of the state held to be construed in favor of validity.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

§ 229. An election is not rendered invalid because certain persons not qualified were permitted to vote, where the result of the election would not be affected if all of the objectionable votes were deducted from those received on the prevailing side.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

X. CONTESTS.

§ 291. A mutilated ballot will be presumed to have been mutilated after it was counted by the election officers.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 291. It will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that a voter produced the proper evidence that he had paid his poll tax as required by law.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 293. Where the ballots have been tampered with, and the identical ballots voted are not before the court, parol evidence of the contents is not admissible.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 293. Testimony of voters that they voted for a certain candidate or measure, and that their ballots have been changed, is admissible.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 295. It was not essential to prove that a voter owed a poll tax to both the state and the county, and failed to pay the same, in order to render his vote illegal; proof that he owed it to the state, and failed to pay it, sufficing.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 298. Where election officers had reasonable ground to find that certain persons had no right to vote, the findings would not be reversed in a contest.—Nichols v. Pennington (Ky.) 382.

§ 298. In a school district trustee election contest, under St. 1909, § 1590a (Russell's St. § 4046), the court had no jurisdiction to determine the alleged ineligibility of the contestee.—Nichols v. Pennington (Ky.) 382.

§ 298. In an election contest the court could not consider votes of legal voters, who were refused the right to vote as cast.—Nichols v. Pennington (Ky.) 382.

ELKS.

Restraining wrongful use of name of order of, see Corporations, § 49.

EMANCIPATION.

Of child, see Parent and Child, § 16.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

Public improvements by municipalities, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 330-567.

II. COMPENSATION.

(B) TAKING OR INJURING PROPERTY AS GROUND FOR COMPENSATION.

§ 84. Under Const. § 242, a city cannot take a subterranean stream for a public sewer without compensating the owner for the resulting injury.—Kevil v. City of Princeton (Ky.) 363.

EMPLOYÉS.

See Master and Servant.

EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL.

See Estoppel, § 75.

EQUITY.

Equitable estoppel, see Estoppel, § 75.
Equitable jurisdiction of justice of the peace, see Justices of the Peace, § 47.

Particular subjects of equitable jurisdiction and equitable remedies.

See Cancellation of Instruments; Creditors' Suit; Fraudulent Conveyances; Injunction; Nuisance, § 23; Partition, §§ 13-95; Quieting Title; Specific Performance; Trusts.

Relief against judgment, see Judgment, §§ 443, 455.

§ 4. Accident or surprise, as used in equity, embraces not only various forfeitures due to accidents in the popular sense, but unforeseen events, misfortunes, losses, acts, or omissions not the result of negligence or misconduct.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

§ 4. "Accident" defined.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

§ 4. The word "surprise" is used interchangeably with "accident" to designate emergencies giving rise to accidents, both words signifying a detrimental situation wherein a party is placed unexpectedly and against which ordinary prudence would not have guarded.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

II. LACHES AND STALE DEMANDS.

In proceeding to restrain operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 222.

§ 67. "Laches" defined.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

ERROR, WRIT OF.

See Appeal and Error.

ESCROWS.

§ 12. A note placed in escrow becomes binding on the maker and indorser on the fulfillment of the conditions, though there is no delivery.—Ketterson v. Inscho (Tex. Civ. App.) 626.

§ 12. A deed or bill of sale placed in escrow, to be delivered on compliance with specified conditions, becomes effective on the fulfillment of the conditions, though there is no actual delivery.—Ketterson v. Inscho (Tex. Civ. App.) 626.

§ 12. A buyer and a third person indorsing a note for the price held liable thereon, though the bill of sale delivered in escrow had not been actually delivered to the buyer.—Ketterson v. Inscho (Tex. Civ. App.) 626.

ESTABLISHMENT.

Of boundaries, see Boundaries, §§ 40, 55.

Of courts, see Courts, §§ 82-116.

Of drains, see Drains, § 36.

Of highways, see Highways, § 68.

Of lost instruments, see Lost Instruments.

Of public schools, see Schools and School Districts, § 13.

Of telegraphs or telephones, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 15.

Of will, see Wills, §§ 300-354.

ESTATES.

Created by will, see Wills, §§ 601-616.

Decedents' estates, see Descent and Distribution; Executors and Administrators.

Particular estates.

See Dower; Life Estates.

Estates for years, see Landlord and Tenant.

ESTOPPEL.

By judgment, see Judgment, §§ 570-622, 651-739.

II. BY DEED.

(A) CREATION AND OPERATION IN GENERAL.

§ 12. A deed will not be construed to operate by way of estoppel beyond the clear meaning of the words used.—Newell v. Burnside Banking Co. (Ky.) 267.

§ 29. Recitals in deed to a third person through whom both parties claimed held binding on both parties.—Colville v. Colville (Tex. Civ. App.) 870.

§ 32. Where deeds establishing a dividing line were exchanged between adjoining owners in order, the acceptance by one of the parties of the deed to him held not a waiver of such title as he already had to the land on his side of the agreed line.—Loughridge v. Ball (Ky.) 321.

(B) ESTATES AND RIGHTS SUBSEQUENTLY ACQUIRED.

§ 38. Land which the grantor does not own, conveyed with general warranty, passes by estoppel, on the grantor subsequently acquiring title.—Newell v. Burnside Banking Co. (Ky.) 267.

§ 47. A mortgage construed, and held to convey only the mortgagor's interest in the land described which he owned at the time of its execution.—Newell v. Burnside Banking Co. (Ky.) 267.

III. EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL.

To assert or deny particular facts, rights, claims, or liabilities.

To allege error, see Appeal and Error, § 882; Criminal Law, § 1137.

To avoid or forfeit insurance policy, see Insurance, § 888.

To object to proof of loss, see Insurance, § 561.

(B) GROUNDS OF ESTOPPEL.

Claim of homestead, see Homestead, § 191.

Delivery of bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 369.

§ 75. The owner of a stock of goods intrusting it to a firm, and allowing it to deal with the goods as its own, held estopped as to creditors of the firm from claiming the goods.—Holder v. Shelby (Tex. Civ. App.) 590.

(C) PERSONS AFFECTED.

Partner, see Partnership, § 34.

Tenant, see Landlord and Tenant, § 63.

EVICITION.

Of tenant of demised premises, see Landlord and Tenant, § 173.

EVIDENCE.

See Depositions; Witnesses.

Admissibility of evidence under pleading, see Pleading, §§ 376, 380.

Applicability of instructions to evidence, see Trial, §§ 251-253.

Conformity of judgment to proofs, see Judgment, §§ 249-251.

Questions of fact for jury, see Trial, §§ 139-143.

Receipt as evidence on issue of compromise, see Compromise and Settlement, § 23.

Reception at trial, see Criminal Law, § 665; Trial, §§ 41-105.

As to particular facts or issues.

See Adverse Possession, §§ 114, 116; Damages, §§ 174-185; Deeds, §§ 195-211; Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 271-301; Gifts, § 49; Marriage, §§ 48-50; Partnership, §§ 48, 56; Release, §§ 55, 56; Statutes, § 283.

Assumption of risk by servant injured, see Master and Servant, § 280.

Consideration for bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 493.

Contributory negligence of passenger, see Carriers, § 346.

Contributory negligence of servant injured, see Master and Servant, §§ 274, 281.

Defense of statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, § 150.

Defense of statute of limitations, see Limitation of Actions, § 195.

Election between homestead and dower, see Dower, § 59.

Intention to dedicate, see Dedication, § 43.

Negligence of master, see Master and Servant, §§ 270, 278.

Payment of note, see Bills and Notes, § 527.

Relation of carrier and passenger, see Carriers, § 246.

In actions by or against particular classes of persons.

See Carriers, §§ 133-134, 228, 276, 316, 317, 381; Innkeepers, § 11; Master and Servant, §§ 265-281; Municipal Corporations, §§ 818-819.

Connecting carriers, see Carriers, § 85.

Trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 303.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Libel and Slander, § 103; Negligence, § 121; Quieting Title, § 44; Trespass, §§ 44, 46; Trespass to Try Title, §§ 38-41; Trover and Conversion, §§ 36, 40.

Contest of local option election, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 37.

Election contest, see Elections, § 293.

For breach of contract, see Contracts, § 349.

For breach of contract of carriage, see Carriers, § 276.

For breach of contract to convey land, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 350.

For breach of covenant, see Covenants, § 121.

For causing death, see Death, § 76.

For ejection of passenger, see Carriers, § 381.

For failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 66.

For injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 347, 396, 397.

For injuries caused by operation of street railroad, see Street Railroads, § 113.

For injuries from fire caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 481.

For injuries to passenger, see Carriers, §§ 316-317.

For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 265-281.

For injuries to traveler on street, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 818-819.

For loss of or injury to shipment, see Carriers, §§ 133-134.

For loss of or injury to shipment of live stock, see Carriers, § 228.

For rent, see Landlord and Tenant, § 231.

On bill or note, see Bills and Notes, §§ 493-527.

Probate proceedings, see Wills, § 300.

To restore lost deed, see Lost Instruments, § 8.

In criminal prosecutions.

See Conspiracy, § 45; Criminal Law, §§ 304-564; Homicide, §§ 146-255; Larceny, §§ 55, 59.

Review and procedure thereon in appellate courts.

Harmless error in rulings on, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1050-1053.

Presumptions as to rulings on, see Appeal and Error, § 916.

Review of rulings on as dependent on presentation in lower court of grounds of review, see Appeal and Error, § 204.

Review of rulings on as dependent on record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 548.

Review on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1001-1024.

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 304.

§ 9. Courts will take judicial notice of the accuracy of X-ray photographic views of the bones of a living body, when properly taken.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 34. The state courts will take judicial notice of federal statutes.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Scott (Ky.) 990.

§ 35. The courts do not take judicial notice of a statute of another state.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

II. PRESUMPTIONS.

As to particular facts or issues.

See Negligence, § 121.

Authority of agent, see Principal and Agent, § 119.

Consideration for bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 493.

Mutilation of ballot, see Elections, § 291.

Resulting trust, see Trusts, § 86.

Undue influence in execution of will, see Wills, § 163.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Trespass to Try Title, § 38.

For injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 396.

For injuries to passenger, see Carriers, § 316.

On bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 493.

§ 66. It is presumed that a vendor knew the boundaries of the land which he sold.—Gaffney v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 606.

§ 67. Normal conditions will be presumed to exist in every instance until the contrary is shown, and presumptions arising from proof of a given status operate prospectively, and not retrospectively.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hughey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1130.

§ 77. No presumption of fact arises from defendant's failure to call witnesses, where plaintiff fails to make out a case.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Finley (Tenn.) 692.

§ 80. The presumption that the common law is in force in another state applies only to those states which were carved out of English territory.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

§ 80. The laws of a sister state will be presumed to be similar to the law of the forum unless the contrary is shown.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

§ 82. The presumption is that a warrant issued by the judge of the county court was regular, and that the judge discharged his duty with reference thereto.—Schooler v. Yancey (Ky.) 940.

§ 83. As to ancient official acts of county officers, it will be presumed that they performed the duty imposed on them as the law commanded or contemplated.—Van Felt v. Parry (Mo.) 425.

§ 83. Under the rule that the law presumes that an officer properly performs his duty, it is presumed that a deed is correctly recorded.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

III. BURDEN OF PROOF.

As to particular facts or issues.

See Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 271-273; Limitation of Actions, § 195.

Modification of contract, see Contracts, § 247.

Undue influence in execution of will, see Wills, § 163.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Trespass, § 44.

For assault, see Assault and Battery, § 26.

For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, § 265.

IV. RELEVANCY, MATERIALITY, AND COMPETENCY IN GENERAL.

(B) RES GESTÆ.

§ 121. In trover for cattle, in which plaintiff claimed exemplary damages, testimony by plaintiff as to a difficulty which occurred at the time the cattle were taken was admissible as part of the res gestæ.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

(C) SIMILAR FACTS AND TRANSACTIONS.

In action for injuries from fire caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 481.

In action for pollution of water, see Waters and Water Courses, § 107.

§ 129. In a suit to enjoin the use of lots as a feed and wagon yard, deeds to neighboring lots held admissible, as tending to show dedication of the block involved to residence purposes exclusively.—Lowrance v. Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 551.

(E) COMPETENCY.

Testimony by claimants of homestead as to intent to return thereto after removal, see Homestead, § 181.

V. BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

§ 158. In an action against a railroad company for destruction of a building by fire, plaintiff's testimony held competent evidence of title.—Erhart v. Wabash Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 657.

§ 178. In an action to establish interests in land involving ancient transactions, the primary evidence of which has been lost, where secondary evidence is necessary to establish lost records, deeds, plats, etc., to reconstruct for judicial purposes facts and a situation dimmed by time, rules of evidence will be much relaxed.—Van Felt v. Parry (Mo.) 425.

VII. ADMISSIONS.

(A) NATURE, FORM, AND INCIDENTS IN GENERAL.

§ 213. Evidence held improperly admitted as evidence of an offer to compromise a controversy.—Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 194.

§ 219. That a party induced a witness by threats of a criminal prosecution to return to the state and testify is not admissible in evidence as an admission of such party, since it does not show an attempt to improperly influence the witness or his testimony, in the absence of any proof indicating an evil purpose on the part of the party.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

(C) BY GRANTORS, FORMER OWNERS, OR PRIVIES.

§ 230. Evidence of statements of an alleged grantor held inadmissible to impeach a deed.—Hughes Bros. v. Redus (Ark.) 414.

§ 230. Where a person, alleged to have sold land, has given up possession, his declarations, showing the character of his claim thereto, held self-serving, and inadmissible in evidence.—Hughes Bros. v. Redus (Ark.) 414.

(D) BY AGENTS OR OTHER REPRESENTATIVES.

§ 241. Expressions made by an agent indicating malice, in the absence of the principal, are inadmissible to show motive of the principal.—Little v. Rich (Tex. Civ. App.) 1077.

§ 244. In an action against a carrier for damages to cattle, evidence of certain declarations of the carrier's agent held admissible.—St.

Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 1155.

§ 244. In an action against a carrier for damages to cattle, evidence of certain declarations of the carrier's servant held not admissible.—St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 1155.

§ 253. In an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, a letter written by a third person inclosing a capias to the sheriff of another county, and asking for plaintiff's arrest, held inadmissible.—Little v. Rich (Tex. Civ. App.) 1077.

VIII. DECLARATIONS.

By claimants of homestead on question of abandonment, see Homestead, § 181.

(A) NATURE, FORM, AND INCIDENTS IN GENERAL.

Declarations by claimants of homestead as to intent to return thereto after removal, see Homestead, § 181.

§ 271. Evidence of a conversation between plaintiff and one of the defendants after the accident held inadmissible as self-serving declarations.—Eilerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

(C) AS TO PEDIGREE, BIRTH, AND RELATIONSHIP.

§ 285. Matters of pedigree such as family history may be proved by hearsay testimony, and other facts, not entirely matters of pedigree, may be so intimately connected with pedigree as to permit their proof by the same character of testimony.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

§ 288. Where a witness was the husband of the granddaughter of a person, he could testify as a member of the family to the family history, including the death and time of death of that person, though he did not state that he obtained his information from deceased members of the family.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

§ 288. Where a witness testified that he first became acquainted with the family of a person about sixty years ago, and that the family consisted of a woman, son, and daughter, he could testify that it was generally understood at the time in that community that the person was dead, and that the woman was recognized as a widow.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

(E) PROOF AND EFFECT.

§ 313. Evidence of declarations of a decedent, though admissible, held not to amount to direct proof, and, when unsupported, entitled to but little weight.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

IX. HEARSAY.

§ 317. Evidence in an action on a health and accident policy held inadmissible as hearsay.—United States Health & Accident Ins. Co. v. Jolly (Ky.) 281.

§ 323. A witness was properly allowed to testify as to the state of the cattle market on certain days, and state that he gained his information from market reports.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

§ 323. In a suit for the negligent handling of a shipment of cattle, accounts of sale thereof held not hearsay, and properly admitted to show the correct weights and prices at their destination.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

X. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

(B) EXEMPLIFICATIONS, TRANSCRIPTS, AND CERTIFIED COPIES.

§ 342. Certified copies of transfers of leases in the land office held admissible as prima facie evidence in an action to try title under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2306.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1135.

§ 342. Copies of letters of the land commissioner, preserved in the ordinary way, are copies of records of the land office.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1135.

(C) PRIVATE WRITINGS AND PUBLICATIONS.

§ 354. Original entries in account books made in the course of business are competent evidence in themselves.—Avery v. Tucker (Mo. App.) 672.

§ 359. X-ray photographs properly taken held not objectionable on the ground that without cutting away the intervening tissue, it was impossible to tell whether the pictures correctly represented plaintiff's injured bones.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 363. Medical books may not be read to the jury as independent evidence.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

XI. PAROL OR EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE AFFECTING WRITINGS.

(A) CONTRADICTING, VARYING, OR ADDING TO TERMS OF WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

§ 400. A contract of sale of a farm, showing on its face the number of acres sold, cannot be controlled or altered by oral statements, made before its consummation, as to the number of acres it contained.—Travis v. Taylor (Ky.) 988.

§ 417. Where an entire contract was not placed in writing, the whole contract could be proved by parol testimony.—Allen v. Herrick Hardware Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1157.

§ 419. Under Ky. St. § 470 (Russell's St. § 1775), the vendor of land under a contract cannot show by parol that the amount recited as having been paid was not paid, but in lieu thereof there was an oral promise to convey certain other land on demand.—Richardson v. Isaacs (Ky.) 1003.

§ 419. The consideration of a deed, in suit to set it aside for inadequacy of consideration, may be shown by matters outside the deed.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 419. It is permissible to show that, as an additional consideration for a deed reciting a money consideration only, grantor was to receive rents for her life.—Tipton v. Tipton (Tex. Civ. App.) 842.

(B) INVALIDATING WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

§ 431. In an action by a buyer on a contract of sale exclusion of certain evidence held error.—Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 194.

§ 433. Parol evidence to show facts relieving a party from the obligations of a written contract on the ground of mistake is not objectionable as varying the terms of the contract.—Edwards v. Trinity & B. V. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 572.

§ 434. The rule excluding parol evidence to contradict, vary, or modify written instruments is much relaxed, when fraud is alleged.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

tracking Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 441. In an action by a payee against a maker on a note, held that equity would allow the maker to show that the note was not intended as a full settlement between the parties, but that it was agreed that there should be a further settlement, in which the maker should have the benefit of certain credits.—Allen v. Herrick Hardware Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1157.

§ 441. Evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement between the payee and maker of a note held not to vary the terms of the contract embodied in the note.—Allen v. Herrick Hardware Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1157.

§ 442. Application stated of rule that, where parties reduce their contracts to writing, the writing is to be taken as embodying all previous negotiations about its terms, which cannot be varied by parol.—Allen v. Herrick Hardware Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1157.

XII. OPINION EVIDENCE.

(A) CONCLUSIONS AND OPINIONS OF WITNESSES IN GENERAL.

§ 471. The action of the court in a personal injury action to permit witnesses to express their opinions as to the effect of blows, without confining the same to the case under consideration, held not erroneous.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 471. Witness' statement that he was using a revolving saw in "the usual and customary manner" was a statement of fact and not of opinion.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 471. Plaintiff's statement that she believed she was injured for life held not objectionable as an opinion.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

§ 471. In an action for delay in transporting cattle, the shipper was incompetent to testify as to what would be a reasonable run with cattle from one point to another.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Goldsmith & Garrett (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 471. Evidence, in an action for injuries to an employé, held not inadmissible as being expert testimony.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 471. Question to witness held objectionable as calling for conclusion.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 472. Certain testimony as to market value held not objectionable as invading the province of the jury.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 472. In an action by an engine watcher for personal injuries, testimony of a witness as to plaintiff's duties before going under the engine at the time of his injury held objectionable, on the ground that it was a conclusion for the jury's determination.—Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. McSwain (Tex. Civ. App.) 874.

§ 473. A nonexpert witness should state the facts and leave conclusions to the jury.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

§ 474. A witness held competent to testify as to the reasonable market value of land immediately before and after a fire destroying the timber and grass.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

drunkenness or insanity can only be proved by opinion of witnesses, and their opinion is not admissible unless they are experts or have had an opportunity to form an opinion from observation.—Daniel v. Modern Woodmen of America (Tex. Civ. App.) 211.

§ 474. A shipper of cattle from the North through Texas to Mexico held competent to testify that the cars had the appearance of having been disinfected before the cattle were placed in them.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

§ 474. A witness held incompetent to testify as to the market value of certain mules at a specified time and place.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

§ 474. Market value is largely a matter of opinion; and a witness acquainted with the market value of property at a particular place is competent to state his opinion.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 474. The opinion of a witness as to the market value of horses held proper.—Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 759.

§ 501. A witness cannot testify as to the value of an article, based on information derived from an unidentified and undescribed catalogue.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hillman (Tex. Civ. App.) 158.

§ 501. A question held not objectionable on the ground that the hypothesis on which it was based was not supported by the evidence.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Chilton (Tex. Civ. App.) 779.

(B) SUBJECTS OF EXPERT TESTIMONY.

§ 506. In an action for malpractice in the performance of an operation, physicians held not entitled to give their opinion as to whether an operation performed in the manner described was performed in an ordinarily careful manner.—Sameuls v. Willis (Ky.) 339.

§ 509. Testimony by an expert held admissible.—United States Health & Accident Ins. Co. v. Jolly (Ky.) 281.

§ 509. In a personal injury action against a street railroad, a duly qualified expert, who had examined plaintiff, held entitled to testify to any physical fact he found to exist, if evidence thereof was admissible under the pleadings.—Lexington Ry. Co. v. Woodward (Ky.) 965.

§ 529. An expert may testify that cattle suffering from splenetic fever were infected by having been placed in infected pens and there kept over night, on it appearing that the fever developed a few days later.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. McCullough (Tex. Civ. App.) 558.

(C) COMPETENCY OF EXPERTS.

§ 543. A witness otherwise qualified may testify as to the value of mules described to him which he had never seen.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

(D) EXAMINATION OF EXPERTS.

§ 549. Evidence of an expert held not inadmissible because of his testimony as to the condition of the person injured, where his opinion as an expert is based on a hypothetical question.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 553. A question to an expert witness held to be argumentative.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 558. Counsel on cross-examination of medical witnesses held entitled to read from medical authorities in framing their questions.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

(F) EFFECT OF OPINION EVIDENCE.

§ 570. The testimony of physicians is merely advisory, and the jury can give it credence or not as seems reasonable.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

XIV. WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY.

As to particular facts or issues.

See Dedication, § 44; Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 295-301; Gifts, § 49; Marriage, § 50; Usury, § 117.

Agency, see Principal and Agent, § 23.

Alteration of deed, see Alteration of Instruments, § 29.

Assumption of risk by servant injured, see Master and Servant, § 280.

Contributory negligence of servant injured, see Master and Servant, § 281.

Duress in obtaining note, see Bills and Notes, § 500.

Election between homestead and dower, see Dower, § 59.

Fraud in sale, see Sales, § 52.

Incapacity to execute will, see Wills, § 55.

Negligence of master, see Master and Servant, § 278.

Payment of note, see Bills and Notes, § 527.

Relation of master and servant, see Master and Servant, § 277.

Resulting trust, see Trusts, § 89.

Undue influence in execution of will, see Wills, § 166.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Malicious Prosecution, § 64; Specific Performance, § 121; Trespass, § 46; Trespass to Try Title, § 41.

Election contest, see Elections, § 295.

For breach of covenant of warranty, see Covenants, § 122.

For conversion, see Trover and Conversion, § 40.

For injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 282.

For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 276-281.

For loss of or injury to shipment, see Carriers, § 134.

For price of goods sold, see Sales, § 359.

On bill or note, see Bills and Notes, §§ 520-527.

On foreign judgment, see Judgment, § 944.

On insurance policy, see Insurance, § 665.

§ 590. The court, in weighing the testimony of a witness, must consider his relationship to the parties to the litigation, and his personal interest in the case, and his conduct and connection with the transaction involved.—Childers v. Pickenpauh (Mo.) 453.

§ 593. Hearsay testimony, though not objected to, has no weight or probative force.—Childers v. Pickenpauh (Mo.) 453.

§ 594. The undisputed testimony of an employé of one of the parties, consisting largely of opinions and conclusions, would not necessarily be binding on the jury.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

EXAMINATION.

Of expert witnesses, see Evidence, §§ 549-558.
Of witnesses in general, see Witnesses, §§ 236-306.

EXCEPTIONS.

Necessity for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 253-266.

Taking exceptions at trial, see Trial, §§ 103-105.

To pleading, see Pleading, §§ 192-218.

EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF.

Necessity for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 544-549; Criminal Law, § 1090.
Taking exceptions at trial, see Trial, § 278.

I. NATURE, FORM, AND CONTENTS IN GENERAL.

§ 7. Bills of exceptions should only show what actually occurred in court, and what the court stenographer told the court as to what happened in the jury room, where he had been sent to read testimony, should not have been embodied in the bills of exceptions.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 9. The office of a bill of exceptions is to show the proceedings of the court which do not otherwise appear of record under rule 53 for the government of district and county courts (67 S. W. xxiv).—Alvord Nat. Bank v. Waples-Platter Grocer Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 232.

II. SETTLEMENT, SIGNING, AND FILING.

Presumptions on appeal as to qualification, see Appeal and Error, § 938.

§ 39. Bills of exception filed more than 20 days after the adjournment of court cannot be considered.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 59. Duty of court under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, arts. 1367-1369, as to allowance or qualification of bill of exceptions, stated.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

EXCESSIVE DAMAGES.

See Damages, §§ 130-132.

For causing death, see Death, § 99.

EXCISE.

Regulation of traffic in intoxicating liquors, see Intoxicating Liquors.

EXECUTION.

See Attachment; Garnishment; Judicial Sales.
Exemptions, see Exemptions; Homestead.

V. STAY, QUASHING, VACATING, AND RELIEF AGAINST EXECUTION.

§ 171. Defendant in execution held entitled to enjoin plaintiff in execution from further enforcing execution, where the latter had wrongfully recovered from a defaulting bidder the difference between his bid and the amount received on a resale, which, under the statute, belonged to defendant in execution.—Shanley v. York (Tex. Civ. App.) 146.

§ 171. The failure of the advertisement of sale to state that the execution provided for collection of interest affords no ground for injunction.—Lee v. Broocks (Tex. Civ. App.) 164.

§ 171. Where the amount of an execution as stated in the advertisement of sale exceeds the judgment by only 20 cents, the difference, on an application for injunction against the sale, should be disregarded as too trivial to be considered.—Lee v. Broocks (Tex. Civ. App.) 164.

VII. SALE.

(A) MANNER, CONDUCT, VALIDITY, AND CONFIRMING OR VACATING.

Action by defendant against plaintiff for money recovered from bidder failing to complete purchase, see Money Received, § 7.

§ 238. Under the express provisions of Rev. St. 1895, art. 2381, where property is resold on a bidder's failure to comply with the terms of the first sale, the difference between the amounts for which the property sold on the two sales belongs to defendant in execution.—Shanley v. York (Tex. Civ. App.) 146.

§ 247. Execution sales may be set aside on motion for about the same reason as judicial sales in the strict meaning of the words may be.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

§ 256. In an action between a landowner and the purchaser at execution sale, considering the value of the land and the amount of the judgment to be satisfied, together with the facts that the judgment was one which the purchaser should himself have paid, and that he was attempting to defraud the landowner, who was his aunt, held, that title should be quieted in the landowner.—Bowling v. Bowling (Ky.) 923.

X. SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Review of refusal of stay as dependent on prejudicial nature of error, see Appeal and Error, § 1074.

XII. WRONGFUL EXECUTION.

Assumption by judge as to facts in instruction in action for wrongful execution, see Trial, § 191.

Impeachment of witness in action for wrongful execution, see Witnesses, § 331½.
In justices' courts, see Justices of the Peace, § 135.

§ 465. A wife held entitled to sue for the conversion of corporate stock by a sale thereof, under execution against the husband, without paying a note held by the husband's judgment creditor and secured by stock pledged by the husband.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

§ 472. Certain damages resulting from a wrongful levy under an execution held not too remote.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

See Descent and Distribution; Wills.

Testamentary trustees, see Trusts.

Testimony as to transactions with decedents, see Witnesses, §§ 144-176.

I. ADMINISTRATION IN GENERAL.

§ 3. Under Rev. St. 1890, c. 52, § 4346 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2392), held unnecessary to appoint an administrator for the estate of the mortgagor of a homestead, and to join him in an action to foreclose the mortgage.—Hardy v. Atkinson (Mo. App.) 516.

II. APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE.

§ 19. Under Rev. St. 1890, §§ 7, 8 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 340), the renunciation of the right of administration cannot be made conditionally upon the appointment of one selected by the persons renouncing their right to administer, and, when once made, cannot be recalled.—State ex rel. Burns v. Romjue (Mo. App.) 1188.

§ 20. Where the appointment of an administrator by the probate court, upon the renunciation by heirs of their right to administer, was made in the exercise of sound judgment and not an arbitrary abuse of power, it will not be disturbed by the appellate court.—State ex rel. Burns v. Romjue (Mo. App.) 1188.

§ 21. Where the probate of a will nominating no executor is set aside on appeal after the appointment of an administrator with will an-nexed, letters of administration to him may be revoked, and an administrator may be appointed under Ky. St. 1909, § 3897 (Russell's St. § 3920).—Hamilton v. Williams (Ky.) 358.

III. ASSETS, APPRAISAL, AND INVENTORY.

§ 43. The title to personality at the owner's death vests in the administrator.—Crohn v. Clay County State Bank (Mo. App.) 498.

IV. COLLECTION AND MANAGEMENT OF ESTATE.

(A) IN GENERAL.

§ 115. Neither the administrator nor his attorney can purchase property in the course of litigation, of which property they have the management, or in which litigation they are interested.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

VIII. SALES AND CONVEYANCES UNDER ORDER OF COURT.

(B) APPLICATION AND ORDER.

§ 348. The proper course for a mortgagee to pursue, on sale of decedent's property to pay the mortgage debt under a void judgment, stated.—Roy v. Allen's Adm'r (Ky.) 981.

§ 349. Mortgagee, who was a party to proceedings for sale of a decedent's land to pay the mortgage debt, held entitled to assert the invalidity of the judgment rendered in the proceedings for failure to summon infant defendants.—Roy v. Allen's Adm'r (Ky.) 981.

(C) SALE.

Validity of sale as to infant where appointment of guardian ad litem was invalid, see Infants, § 80.

§ 365. An administrator, who purchased decedent's land at a sale ordered by the court, held required to prove facts necessary to estop the adult heirs from contesting the validity of his purchase.—Baker v. Lane (Ky.) 963.

§ 389. An administrator held entitled to a lien on his decedent's real estate, subject to the homestead right of an infant child of decedent.—Baker v. Lane (Ky.) 963.

§ 389. An administrator, purchasing his decedent's real estate and making improvements thereon payable out of the rents, held not entitled to an allowance on account of the improvements as against the heirs.—Baker v. Lane (Ky.) 963.

X. ACTIONS.

Joinder of executrix of indorser with maker in action on note, see Bills and Notes, § 460.

Venue of action against maker of note and executrix of indorser as dependent on residence of parties, see Venue, § 22.

XI. ACCOUNTING AND SETTLEMENT.

(D) COMPENSATION.

§ 496. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 3883 (Russell's St. § 3914), allowances to administrator held excessive.—Nickell v. Nickell (Ky.) 966.

XII. FOREIGN AND ANCILLARY ADMINISTRATION.

§ 517. Where a court of a sister state had the power, on the discharge of a public administrator, to substitute another as public administrator, an order of substitution was conclusive on the courts of Arkansas in an action by the substituted administrator.—McCarthy v. Troll (Ark.) 416.

foreign domiciliary administrator would not be protected as against the resident administrator on certain grounds.—Crohn v. Clay County State Bank (Mo. App.) 498.

§ 519. The payment of a debt to the foreign domiciliary administrator held no defense as against the resident administrator, though the payment was made before the latter's appointment.—Crohn v. Clay County State Bank (Mo. App.) 498.

§ 524. Where an administrator has recovered a judgment in an action in the jurisdiction of his appointment, he may sue thereon in his own name in another jurisdiction without taking out ancillary letters.—McCarthy v. Troll (Ark.) 418.

EXEMPLARY DAMAGES.

See Damages, § 91.

EXEMPLIFICATIONS.

As evidence, see Evidence, § 342.

EXEMPTIONS.

See Homestead.

From taxation, see Taxation, §§ 217, 251.

IV. PROTECTION AND ENFORCEMENT OF RIGHTS.

§ 141. Where the debtor and creditor are residents of the same state, an attempt by the creditor to evade the exemption law of the state by bringing suit in a sister state may be enjoined by a chancery court.—Greer v. Strozier (Ark.) 400.

§ 147. A complaint in a suit to restrain the prosecution of an action in a sister state held to state a cause of action as against a demurrer.—Greer v. Strozier (Ark.) 400.

EXHIBITS.

As part of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 510, 597, 655.

EXPERT TESTIMONY.

In civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 471-570.
In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 478, 534.

EX POST FACTO LAWS.

Constitutional restrictions, see Constitutional Law, § 191.
Retroactive operation of statutes, see Statutes, §§ 263, 267.

FACTORS.

See Brokers; Principal and Agent.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

See Malicious Prosecution.

I. CIVIL LIABILITY.

(B) ACTIONS.

Declarations by conspirators, see Evidence, § 253.
Pleading matters of fact or conclusions, see Pleading, § 8.

FEDERAL QUESTIONS.

Ground for removal of cause, see Removal of Causes, § 19.

FEES.

Attorney's fees in garnishment, see Garnishment, § 191.
Of attorney, see Attorney and Client, § 143.

FELLOW SERVANTS.

See Master and Servant, §§ 177-202.

FICTITIOUS NAMES.

Chattel mortgage executed under, see Chattel Mortgages, § 150.

FILING.

Assignment of errors, see Appeal and Error, § 744.
Bill of exceptions, see Exceptions, Bill of, §§ 39, 59.
Criminal information or complaint, see Indictment and Information, §§ 52, 54.
Indictment or presentment, see Indictment and Information, § 15.
Record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 622.

FINAL JUDGMENT.

Appealability, see Appeal and Error, §§ 78, 82.

FINDINGS.

Conformity of judgment, see Judgment, § 256.
Review on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1008-1013.
Special findings by jury, see Trial, § 352.

FINES.

Jurisdiction of circuit court to enjoin judgment for, see Courts, § 120.

FIRE INSURANCE.

See Insurance.

FIRES.

Caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 454-485.

FLOWAGE.

See Waters and Water Courses, §§ 168, 178.

FOOD.

For live stock in transportation, see Carriers, § 211.

FORCIBLE DEFILEMENT.

See Rape.

FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER.

Recovery of possession of land from vendee and their contracts of sale, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 298.

I. CIVIL LIABILITY.

Judgment in action for forcible entry as no bar to action for forcible detainer, see Judgment, § 585.

§ 5. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 452, subsec. 4, one entering premises with or without the consent of the tenant and refusing to vacate on demand of the landlord after the tenant's term expires is guilty of forcible detainer.—Johnson v. Gordon (Ky.) 872.

§ 32. Under the express provisions of Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2529, the question of title cannot be adjudicated in an action of forcible detainer.—Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.

FORECLOSURE.

Of mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, § 261; Mortgages, §§ 420-534.

FOREIGN ADMINISTRATION.

See Executors and Administrators, §§ 517-524.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

See Corporations, § 690.

FOREIGN JUDGMENTS.

See Judgment, § 944.

FORFEITURES.

For nonpayment of tax, see Taxation, § 848.
Of franchise, see Corporations, §§ 592½, 596.
Of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 161-181.
Of insurance, see Insurance, §§ 330, 335, 388, 750, 755.

FORGERY.

§ 4. Essentials to forgery stated, and that a forged bond to stay judgment was not filed held immaterial.—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

§ 7. Under Kirby's Dig. § 1714, held an offense to forge a bond to stay judgment.—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

§ 16. "Uttering forged instrument" defined.—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

§ 34. Variance between a bond pleaded in an indictment for forgery and a bond proven held immaterial, being manifestly a clerical error.—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

§ 44. Evidence held insufficient to connect accused with forgery of a bond staying judgment.—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

§ 44. Where forgery is established, accused may be connected therewith by circumstances.—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

FORMER ADJUDICATION.

See Judgment, §§ 570-622, 651-739.

FORMS OF ACTION.

See Trespass, §§ 44-52; Trover and Conversion.

FORNICATION.

See Incest; Seduction, §§ 36, 39.

FRANCHISES.

Forfeiture, see Corporations, §§ 592½, 596.

FRAUD.

See Fraudulent Conveyances.

Effect on limitation, see Limitation of Actions, § 100.

Parol or extrinsic evidence, see Evidence, § 434.

By particular classes of persons, or persons in particular relations.

Agent, see Principal and Agent, § 71.

In particular classes of conveyances, contracts, transactions, or proceedings.

See Deeds, § 70; Insurance, §§ 255-282, 723; Release, § 55.

Contract of sale, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 33-34.

Particular remedies.

See Cancellation of Instruments, § 52.

Equitable relief against judgment, see Judgment, § 443.

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.III. PROMISES TO ANSWER FOR DEBT, DEFAULT OR MISCAR-RIAGE OF ANOTHER.

§ 23. An oral promise to pay for hauling timber held one to answer for another's debt, and unenforceable under Ky. St. 1909, § 470 (Russell's St. § 1775).—Sealey v. Combs (Ky.) 972.

V. AGREEMENTS NOT TO BE PERFORMED WITHIN ONE YEAR.

§ 44. A verbal contract for hire for a term of four years held unenforceable under St. 1909, § 470, subsec. 7 (Russell's St. § 1775, subsec. 7).—Garnes v. Frazier & Foster (Ky.) 998.

§ 50. An oral agreement for the payment of rents as a portion of the consideration for the conveyance of land held impossible of performance within a year, and hence not within the statute of frauds.—Tipton v. Tipton (Tex. Civ. App.) 842.

VI. REAL PROPERTY AND ESTATES AND INTERESTS THEREIN.

§ 56. Contract of sale of standing timber held required to be in writing.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 58. A conveyance extending time to remove timber, if considered a lease, held good only for a year, unless in writing.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 60. An irrevocable license to enter land held to be in the nature of an easement, and so required to be in writing.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 60. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 624, a permanent right to use another's lands for a particular purpose can only be conveyed by writing.—Menczer v. Poage (Tex. Civ. App.) 863.

VIII. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF WRITING.

§ 100. In order to pass a permanent right to use another's lands for a particular purpose, the writing must show with reasonable certainty, either in itself or by reference to other writing, the parties, consideration, and subject-matter of the contract.—Menczer v. Poage (Tex. Civ. App.) 863.

§ 103. A memorandum is sufficient if it relieves the court of the necessity of relying on parol evidence to ascertain the subject of the contract.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

§ 103. A contract for the sale of land held sufficient if there is a written memorandum signed by the party to be charged.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

§ 103. The execution of a deed to land and a tender thereof to the grantee as a compromise of a dispute between the parties, which the grantee refused, held not sufficient to take from the operation of the statute of frauds an alleged oral contract to convey land so as to entitle such grantee to a specific performance.—Richardson v. Isaacs (Ky.) 1003.

§ 104. A memorandum of a contract for the sale of land, to satisfy the statute of frauds, need not be contemporaneous.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

§ 108. Terms of a contract, so far as they constitute part of the consideration, need not be stated in the memorandum to satisfy the statute of frauds.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

§ 118. A memorandum of a contract, within the statute of frauds, may be contained in more than one instrument.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

§ 118. Certain writings, construed together, held a sufficient memorandum of a contract for the sale of land.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

IX. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF STATUTE.

§ 119. The statute of frauds pertains only to the evidence of a contract, and not to its validity.—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 373.

§ 120. The statute of frauds of Kentucky applies to a contract made in another state to be performed in Kentucky.—Garnes v. Frazier & Foster (Ky.) 998.

§ 126. The fact that one party to an oral contract unenforceable under the statute of frauds promised the other to reduce the contract to writing, and did not do so, would not change the rights of the parties.—Garnes v. Frazier & Foster (Ky.) 998.

X. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, TRIAL, AND REVIEW.

§ 150. The defect in a petition in an action on a contract from a failure to allege that it is in writing may be raised by demurrer.—Fiscal Court of Breckenridge County v. Board of Trustees of Town of Hardinsburg (Ky.) 298.

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES.

By bankrupt, see Bankruptcy, § 188.

I. TRANSFERS AND TRANSACTIONS INVALID.

(C) PROPERTY AND RIGHTS TRANSFERRED.

§ 46. Ky. St. 1909, § 1907 (Russell's St. § 2100), providing that every gift, conveyance, etc., by a debtor of his estate without valuable consideration shall be void as to creditors, etc., does not apply to real estate alone; the word "estate" including personalty.—Patton v. Walker's Trustees (Ky.) 312.

(D) INDEBTEDNESS, INSOLVENCY, AND INTENT OF GRANTOR.

§ 61. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 1907 (Russell's St. § 2100), the setting aside by an insolvent of the greater part of his estate and income to his daughters held a fraud on his creditors, though there was no actual intention to defraud.—Patton v. Walker's Trustees (Ky.) 312.

(E) CONSIDERATION.

§ 74. A gift by an insolvent is a fraud in law on his creditors.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

§ 74. A gift by a debtor to defraud his creditors is a fraudulent disposition of his property.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

(J) KNOWLEDGE AND INTENT OF GRANTEE.

§ 159. A bill of sale of corporate stock by a husband to his wife, made to defraud his creditors, and not in satisfaction of a valid debt, does not pass the title to the wife if she knew of his fraudulent purpose.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

II. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES AND PURCHASERS.

(A) ORIGINAL PARTIES.

§ 172. Conveyance by debtor to defraud creditors held binding between the parties.—Robertson v. Hefey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

III. REMEDIES OF CREDITORS AND PURCHASERS.

(A) PERSONS ENTITLED TO ASSERT INVALIDITY.

§ 216. One having a claim for unliquidated damages, as for slander, held entitled to protection against fraudulent conveyances.—Robertson v. Hefey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

(F) PLEADING.

§ 263. The allegation that certain property was given by an insolvent to his children "free of charge as advancements" sufficiently charged that the gifts were voluntary.—Patton v. Walker's Trustees (Ky.) 312.

§ 269. A general denial to the petition seeking to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent against creditors held to authorize proof of the fact that the land conveyed was a homestead.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 478.

(G) EVIDENCE.

§ 271. Representatives of grantor asserting that deed was simulated transaction held to have the burden of proof.—Robertson v. Hefey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 273. The presumption was that advancements by an insolvent to his child to whom he was indebted were made to liquidate the debt, whether such was his actual intention or not.—Patton v. Walker's Trustees (Ky.) 312.

§ 295. Evidence held to warrant a finding that a debtor conveyed property with intent to defraud his creditors.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

§ 295. Evidence held to show that a conveyance by a father to his son was fraudulent as against creditors.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

§ 298. Certain testimony of grantor held insufficient to show that the transaction was simulated, or that vendee should hold legal title in trust.—Robertson v. Hefey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 299. Where a husband and wife lived together, the fact that he retained possession of land which he conveyed to her is of little force in determining whether the transaction was simulated.—Robertson v. Hefey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 301. Evidence held to show that a grantee participated in the fraud of the grantor in conveying land to defraud creditors.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 453.

FREIGHT.

See Carriers, § 193.

FRUIT.

Duties and liabilities of carriers, see Carriers, §§ 110, 134.

GAMING.

Amendment of complaint setting up different cause of action, see Pleading, § 248.

GARNISHMENT.

See Attachment; Execution.

Procedure in justices' courts, see Justices of the Peace, §§ 128, 174.

II. PERSONS AND PROPERTY SUBJECT TO GARNISHMENT.

§ 38. A draft, while retained by a garnishee pending delivery and indorsement to defendants pursuant to a contract to lend them the money called for, held not "effects" of the defendants subject to a garnishment previously served.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

V. LIEN OF GARNISHMENT AND LIABILITY OF GARNISHEE.

§ 118. Garnishees held not indebted in any amount to defendants under a contract for the sale of an interest in timber land.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

VI. PROCEEDINGS TO SUPPORT OR ENFORCE.

§ 191. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 253, on the dismissal of a garnishment, the garnishee may recover reasonable attorneys' fees for preparing and defending the answer after it is controverted.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

§ 191. Seven hundred fifty dollars held a reasonable fee to be awarded garnishees on the dismissal of a garnishment for the services of their attorney in filing and defending their answer.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

GAS.

§ 21. Measure of recovery for the wrongful removal and destruction of the fixtures and connections with plaintiff's house of a rival gas company, stated.—Kentucky Heating Co. v. Hood (Ky.) 337.

§ 21. Exemplary damages held properly allowed, in an action against a gas company for wrongfully removing and destroying the fixtures and connections with plaintiff's house of a rival gas company.—Kentucky Heating Co. v. Hood (Ky.) 337.

GIFTS.I. INTER VIVOS.

§ 19. A daughter of the donor, having possession of notes, cannot defeat a gift of such notes to a son by refusing to surrender possession.—Simmonds v. Simmonds' Adm'r (Ky.) 304.

§ 49. Evidence held to show a gift of personality by a mother to her son and a delivery in her lifetime.—Simmonds v. Simmonds' Adm'r (Ky.) 304.

GOOD FAITH.

Of party asking equitable relief, see Specific Performance, § 97.

Of purchaser, see Bills and Notes, §§ 333-370; Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 229-245.

GRAND JURY.

See Indictment and Information.

GRANTS.

Of public lands, see Public Lands.

GROWING TREES.

Application of statute of frauds to contract for sale of growing trees, see Frauds, Statute of, § 56.

GUARANTY.

See Principal and Surety.

Damages for negligence of carrier in placing cattle in quarantine pens, see Carriers, § 229. Requirements of statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, § 23.

GUARANTY INSURANCE.

See Insurance, §§ 432, 511.

GUARDIAN AND WARD.III. CUSTODY AND CARE OF WARD'S PERSON AND ESTATE.

§ 54. Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 2639, 2648, a guardian who invested the ward's funds for his own personal use held liable for the highest legal rate of interest from the time he could have properly invested them by exercising reasonable diligence.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 58. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 2034 (Russell's St. § 4151), a guardian held not entitled to charge his ward's interest in the land of the deceased ancestor with any amount expended as guardian for the ward's benefit.—Baker v. Lane (Ky.) 963.

§ 58. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2630, amounts expended for a ward's education and maintenance held properly allowed the guardian on accounting, though not expended under order of court.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

VI. ACCOUNTING AND SETTLEMENT.

Limitation of action in action for accounting, see Limitation of Actions, § 39.

§ 137. The purpose of a final settlement of a guardian, stated.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 137. Under the statute, a guardian must render final settlement when the ward becomes 21 years old, and until he submits the same, is not entitled to an absolute discharge.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 144. The probate court retains jurisdiction to require final settlement though the ward has become of age.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 145. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3357, does not limit the time for bringing proceedings under article 2766 to compel a guardian to file a final account.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 148. Where intestate, on being displaced as plaintiff's guardian, did not validly surrender the estate to the new guardian, intestate's estate, on being required to account, could not have credit for payments for plaintiff by the new guardian's surety without the guardian's direction, authority, or consent.—Burton's Adm'r v. Selph (Ky.) 286.

§ 158. When a guardian renders his final account, the probate court can inquire into it to determine whether it is fair and correct.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 159. In proceedings against a guardian for a final accounting, in which the bondsmen made

§ 161. A finding in proceedings to compel a guardianship accounting, which was supported by the evidence, will not be disturbed on appeal.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 162. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2785, a guardian's sureties who voluntarily become parties in opposition to proceedings for an accounting may be taxed with the costs of appeal.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 163. The decree of the probate court upon final accounting of a guardian, operates as an account stated between the guardian and ward, as well as the formal discharge of the trust relationship.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

HABEAS CORPUS.

II. JURISDICTION, PROCEEDINGS, AND RELIEF.

§ 113. On habeas corpus to be admitted to bail, the judgment denying the application should not be set aside, where the proof shows guilt to be evident.—Ex parte King (Tex. Cr. App.) 1032.

HAND CARS.

Liability of master for injuries to servant caused by defects, see Master and Servant, § 112.

HARMLESS ERROR.

In civil actions, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1027-1074.

In criminal prosecutions, see Homicide, § 340.

HAWKERS AND PEDDLERS.

Peddling on street as a nuisance, see Nuisance, § 61.

§ 3. "Peddler" defined.—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.

§ 3. That defendant sold his own book made him no less a peddler within Kirby's Dig. § 5438.—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.

§ 3. The words "peddler" and "hawker," within Kirby's Dig. § 5438, authorizing cities to license, etc., hawkers and peddlers, are used in the ordinary and common-law acceptance of the term and the sense in which the words are used in Const. art. 16, § 5.—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.

§ 4. Kirby's Dig. § 5438, held to authorize cities and towns to tax hawkers and peddlers for revenue.—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.

§ 4. A city ordinance taxing hawkers and peddlers held void as being unreasonable.—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.

HEARING.

In probate proceedings, see Wills, § 321.

HEARSAY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 317, 323.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 412, 418.

HEIRS.

See Descent and Distribution.

Accidents at railroad crossings, see Railroads, §§ 305-351.

Mandatory injunction to compel landowner to open highway across his property, see Injunction, §§ 5, 130, 189.

Mandatory injunction to compel property owner to open highway across his property, right to jury trial, see Jury, § 14.

I. ESTABLISHMENT, ALTERATION, AND DISCONTINUANCE.

(B) ESTABLISHMENT BY STATUTE OR STATUTORY PROCEEDINGS.

§ 68. Where the existence of a highway is established, its width may be proved by the record, or in its absence by the testimony of witnesses or by the extent of travel.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

II. HIGHWAY DISTRICTS AND OFFICERS.

Mandamus to highway officers, see Mandamus, §§ 23, 154.

III. CONSTRUCTION, IMPROVEMENT, AND REPAIR.

Mandamus to compel letting of contract at competitive bidding, see Mandamus, §§ 23, 154.

§ 113. Ky. St. 1894, § 4315, as amended by Acts 1906, p. 431, c. 118, and Acts 1908, p. 107, c. 42, does not authorize the supervisor of roads of a county, with the consent of the county judge, to exempt all the roads of the county from the provisions in the statute concerning the letting of work at competitive bidding.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

IV. TAXES, ASSESSMENTS, AND WORK ON HIGHWAYS.

§ 151. A complaint under Pen. Code 1895, art. 491, for failure to work on the public roads, held insufficient.—Goodrich v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

V. REGULATION AND USE FOR TRAVEL.

(B) USE OF HIGHWAY AND LAW OF THE ROAD.

§ 184. Under Civ. Code Prac. §§ 129, 130, evidence that an accident alleged to have occurred in a public county highway in fact took place in a village street did not constitute a material variance.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

§ 184. In an action for injuries by an alleged obstruction of a highway, the circumstances under which the highway was created held not in issue.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

HOLIDAYS.

See Sunday.

HOMESTEAD.

Fraudulent conveyance of, pleading, see Fraudulent Conveyances, § 269.

I. NATURE, ACQUISITION, AND EXTENT.

(C) ACQUISITION AND ESTABLISHMENT.

§ 51. Under St. 1909, § 1702 (Russell's St. § 4661), an owner held not entitled to a homestead unless he occupies the property, unless he is temporarily absent from it.—Eversole v. First Nat. Bank (Ky.) 981.

(E) LIABILITIES ENFORCEABLE AGAINST HOMESTEAD.

§ 103. A judgment against one occupying land in excess of his homestead exemption becomes a lien on the surplus from the rendition of the judgment.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 478.

II. TRANSFER OR INCUMBRANCE.

§ 118. Mortgage held sufficient under Kirby's Dig. § 3901, avoiding a mortgage of the homestead of a married man, unless his wife joins therein.—Gantt v. Hildreth (Ark.) 255.

§ 121. Where property held as a homestead is of greater value than the homestead and the mortgage combined, the widow is entitled to the surplus on the foreclosure sale of the property after the death of her husband.—Hardy v. Atkinson (Mo. App.) 516.

§ 128. A warranty deed of a homestead executed by a husband only held not to convey the wife's interest and to operate only by virtue of the covenant of warranty.—Vickers v. Peddy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1110.

III. RIGHTS OF SURVIVING HUSBAND, WIFE, CHILDREN, OR HEIRS.

§ 145. An infant cannot abandon his homestead rights to the use and enjoyment of the land of the deceased ancestor, worth less than $1,000.—Baker v. Lane (Ky.) 983.

§ 145. Where a surviving wife executes a deed of the homestead under an agreement allowing her to return and use the property as her home, such agreement is not a substitute for the homestead user after it becomes evident that she will not return.—Vickers v. Peddy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1110.

§ 146. The conveyance by a widow of her homestead to the remainderman held to merge the entire fee in the remainderman.—Hardy v. Atkinson (Mo. App.) 516.

IV. ABANDONMENT, WAIVER, OR FORFEITURE.

Declarations by claimants as to intent, see Evidence, § 271.

§ 161. Where a husband and wife abandoned a homestead, a husband's conveyance, held valid without wife joining therein.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 162. The abandonment of a homestead by removal therefrom depends on whether the removal was with the fixed intention of not returning to the place as a home.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

§ 162. That the claimants of homestead received a deed of other property held not to show abandonment, if they at all times intended to return to the homestead.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

§ 162. An offer to sell a homestead was not necessarily inconsistent with the claimants' intention to return thereto and reoccupy it as a home, if they did not sell.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

§ 170. A contract respecting a homestead held not void because not joined in by the wife under St. 1909, § 1706 (Russell's St. § 4665), providing that no release or waiver of the homestead shall be valid unless in writing and subscribed by the husband and his wife.—Meadows v. Bryant (Ky.) 306.

§ 181. Declarations of claimants of homestead, as to their intention to return thereto, are admissible on the question of abandonment, though they may be self-serving.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

§ 181. The testimony of claimants of a homestead, from which they had removed, as to their intention to return thereto, is admissible.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

§ 181. On an issue as to the abandonment of a homestead, evidence held to show that a deed of other property upon which the claimants lived was intended to give them a life interest therein.—Thigpen v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 1080.

V. PROTECTION AND ENFORCEMENT OF RIGHTS.

§ 191. Mortgagors submitting to a judgment foreclosing the mortgage lien could not thereafter claim that the mortgage was void because of the homestead character of the property.—Blair v. Guaranty Savings, Loan & Investment Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

§ 200. A judgment debtor held entitled to relieve himself of the preliminary act of appraisers in setting out to him a homestead by appealing to the court.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 478.

§ 201. The assignment of homestead to a judgment debtor held complete on the filing of the execution with report of appraisers and report of sale.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 478.

§ 201. A judgment debtor paying the execution before sale and return held to relieve his land from the levy and from all the incidents thereof, including the act of the appraisers in setting out to him a homestead.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 478.

§ 201. An execution debtor who takes no steps to set aside the setting off to him of a homestead by the officer holding an execution against him and the appraisers cannot collaterally attack the setting aside of the homestead.—Childers v. Pickenpaugh (Mo.) 478.

HOMICIDE.

II. MURDER.

§ 7. "Murder" defined.—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.

§ 7. It is always unlawful for one to intentionally kill another, unless the act is in self-defense or is justified in law, such as in case of a legal execution.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 13. The law implies malice from the unlawful killing, where there is nothing to reduce the homicide to manslaughter or to some lesser degree.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 14. "Aforethought" defined.—Freeman v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 917.

§ 23. If accused did not shoot decedent in self-defense, and there was no provocation to reduce the killing to manslaughter, and the evidence did not make out murder in the first degree, the killing was murder in the second degree.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 23. Statement of what constitutes murder in the second degree.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

III. MANSLAUGHTER.

§ 33. Facts held to justify a conviction of voluntary manslaughter.—Smith v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 368.

§ 34. Facts held to justify a conviction of involuntary manslaughter.—Smith v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 368.

§ 43. Every killing upon a rash and inconsiderate impulse is not manslaughter, an adequate cause which renders the mind incapable of cool reflection being essential to reduce an unlawful killing to manslaughter.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

V. EXCUSABLE OR JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.

§ 122. A person attempting to excuse his killing as done in the defense of a third person must show that the third person was without blame and entitled to rely on self-defense.—Wheat v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 264.

VI. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION.

§ 127. The form of indictment for manslaughter prepared by the Code commissioners held not to conform to Cr. Code Prac. §§ 122-124.—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.

§ 189. An indictment held not to charge involuntary manslaughter.—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.

§ 189. Under Cr. Code Prac. § 122, subsec. 2, and section 124, an indictment held not to charge the offense of voluntary manslaughter punished as provided by Ky. St. § 1150 (Russell's St. § 3628).—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.

VII. EVIDENCE.

(A) PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

§ 146. Implied malice may be presumed, where there is an intentional killing without just cause or excuse.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

(B) ADMISSIBILITY IN GENERAL.

Acts and declarations of conspirators and co-defendants, see Criminal Law, § 423.
Expert testimony, see Criminal Law, § 478.
Res gestæ, see Criminal Law, § 366.

§ 169. On a trial for homicide, certain conduct of accused prior to the difficulty resulting in the killing held competent to explain the conduct of decedent.—Wheat v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 264.

§ 174. A witness held entitled to testify as to the results of an experiment as to the position of the body of decedent.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 183. On a trial for homicide, the refusal to permit accused to show that a third person had authority to commission men to carry arms, and that he had deputized accused to carry arms on the day after the homicide, held not erroneous.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 190. Under Pen. Code 1895, art. 713, held that, on prosecution for assault with intent to murder, the state could prove reputation of the person assaulted, where defendant gave evidence of such person's threats to kill defendant.—Smith v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 145.

(C) DYING DECLARATIONS.

Declarations by decedent as part of res gestæ, see Criminal Law, § 366.

(E) WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY.

§ 252. Evidence held to sustain a conviction of willful murder.—Freeman v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 917.

§ 253. Evidence held to justify a conviction of murder in the first degree, on the theory that accused was a guilty participant in the assassination of decedent.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 254. Evidence in a murder case held to sustain a verdict of murder in the second degree.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 255. Evidence held to justify a conviction for voluntary manslaughter.—Wheat v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 264; Cox v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 282.

VIII. TRIAL.

(B) QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

§ 268. In a murder case, evidence held sufficient to go to the jury.—Gipson v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 834.

(C) INSTRUCTIONS.

Instructions as to circumstantial evidence, see Criminal Law, § 784.

Instructions on weight of evidence, see Criminal Law, § 763.

Requests for instructions, see Criminal Law, § 829.

§ 286. An instruction in a homicide case held not erroneous, as presenting a phase of the law not raised by the evidence.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 295. In a homicide case, the court held authorized to charge on provoking the difficulty.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 300. On a trial for homicide, a requested charge on self-defense held properly refused.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 300. An instruction held to sufficiently submit the issue of self-defense.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 300. The court, in charging on murder in the second degree and on manslaughter, held required to charge as to an attack about to be made by decedent, and thereby give accused the benefit of reasonable apprehension of danger.—Benson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1049.

§ 301. Evidence held to require an instruction upon the issue of homicide in another's defense.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 301. A charge held to have correctly and sufficiently submitted the issue of homicide in another's defense.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 308. In a murder prosecution, evidence held not to raise the issue of murder in the first degree as to require a charge thereon.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

§ 308. An instruction on second degree murder held not reversible error.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 308. An instruction on second degree murder held sufficient, in view of the other instructions on the subject.—Puryear v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1042.

§ 309. The court was not required to instruct upon manslaughter where that issue was not raised by the evidence.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

X. APPEAL AND ERROR.

§ 340. Where accused was acquitted of murder in the first degree, he cannot complain of error in submitting that issue or of errors committed in connection with its submission.—Potts v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 535.

HORSE THEFT.

See Larceny, §§ 3, 70.

HOUSEBREAKING.

See Burglary.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

See Divorce; Dower; Marriage.

Competency as witnesses, see Witnesses, §§ 52, 61.

Rights of survivor, see Homestead, §§ 145, 146.

III. CONVEYANCES, CONTRACTS, AND OTHER TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Deed by wife defectively acknowledged as evidence, see Acknowledgment, § 6.

IV. DISABILITIES AND PRIVILEGES OF COVERTURE.

(B) PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCES.

§ 69½. Coverture subsequent to the beginning of adverse possession does not interrupt it.—Hoencke v. Lomax (Tex. Civ. App.) 817.

(C) CONTRACTS.

Action by wife for wrongful levy of execution on separate property pledged for debt of husband, see Execution, § 465.

V. WIFE'S SEPARATE ESTATE.

(A) WHAT CONSTITUTES.

§ 133. Evidence held to show that money lent a husband and wife was not used for the improvement or benefit of the wife's separate property.—Stroter v. Brackenridge (Tex. Civ. App.) 632.

(B) RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF HUSBAND.

§ 138. To render a wife personally liable for money lent, under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2970, she must herself have contracted the debt for which suit is brought.—Stroter v. Brackenridge (Tex.) 634.

(C) LIABILITIES AND CHARGES.

§ 150. To hold a married woman liable upon a contract under Rev. St. 1895, art. 2970, etc., it must be shown that some improvement has been made upon or labor furnished to utilize her separate property.—Stroter v. Brackenridge (Tex. Civ. App.) 632.

VI. ACTIONS.

Action by wife for wrongful levy of execution on separate property for debts of husband, see Execution, § 465.

VII. COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

Partition of community property by heirs, see Partition, § 13.

§ 262. A wife, whose separate property, acquired during marriage by gift, has undergone various changes, must, in a controversy as to whether the property last acquired is separate or community property, trace the property all the changes made, and clearly show that the last-acquired property is her separate property.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

§ 266. A pretended sale of a stock of merchandise by one to his wife held ineffectual.—Dawson v. Baldrige (Tex. Civ. App.) 593.

§ 274. In view of conveyances of land to a married man, a child on the death of the wife inherited an undivided one-half of the property conveyed.—Colville v. Colville (Tex. Civ. App.) 870.

§ 276. A circumstance held no defense to liability on the bond of a deceased husband as administrator of the community estate.—Belt v. Cetti (Tex. Civ. App.) 241.

§ 276. Evidence held insufficient to sustain a finding that an administrator paid specified sums for releases of specified vendor's lien notes.—Belt v. Cetti (Tex. Civ. App.) 241.

HYPOTHETICAL QUESTIONS.

To expert witness, see Evidence, § 553.

ICE.

Duty of carrier as to icing cars on shipment of perishable freight, see Carriers, §§ 110, 117, 184.

IMPAIRING OBLIGATION OF CONTRACT.

See Constitutional Law, § 187.

IMPANELING JURY.

See Jury, § 149.

IMPEACHMENT.

Of record, see Appeal and Error, § 664.
Of witness, see Witnesses, §§ 331½-405.

IMPLIED CONTRACTS.

See Covenants, § 20; Money Received; Work and Labor.

IMPRISONMENT.

See Arrest; Bail; False Imprisonment.
Habeas corpus, see Habeas Corpus.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Liens, see Mechanics' Liens.
Public improvements, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 330-567.

INADEQUACY OF PRICE.

Ground for setting aside tax sale, see Taxation, § 689.

INCEST.

§ 14. Evidence in a prosecution for incest held to sustain a conviction.—Baker v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 542.

INCOMPETENT PERSONS.

See Insane Persons.

INCUMBRANCES.

On homestead, see Homestead, §§ 118-128.
On property of intestate, see Descent and Distribution, § 152.

INDEBTEDNESS.

Of fraudulent grantor, see Fraudulent Conveyances, § 61.

INDEMNITY.

See Principal and Surety.

For particular offenses.

See Conspiracy, § 43; Homicide, §§ 127, 139; Rape, § 25; Robbery, § 20.
Against Sunday law, see Sunday, § 29.

II. FINDING AND FILING OF INDICTMENT OR PRESENTMENT.

§ 15. It is a sufficient defense in a criminal prosecution that an appeal from a conviction under a prior information is pending.—State v. Biesemeyer (Mo. App.) 1197.

IV. FILING AND FORMAL REQUISITES OF INFORMATION OR COMPLAINT.

§ 52. An affidavit, that the facts stated in an information are true according to the best "knowledge, information, and belief" of affiant, held insufficient as a basis for the information.—State v. Simpson (Mo. App.) 1187.

§ 52. Accused could not be convicted of wife abandonment, where the information was not accompanied by an affidavit.—Mendez v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1031.

§ 54. The jurat of the swearing officer is essential to a complaint.—Carroll v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1031.

V. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF ACCUSATION.

§ 110. An indictment for defacing a recorded brand from railroad ties in violation of St. 1909, § 1409, subsec. 11 (Russell's St. § 5867), held sufficient.—Bennett v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 332.

§ 111. Under Cr. Code Prac. §§ 122, 136, an indictment charging seduction in the language of Ky. St. 1909, § 1214 (Russell's St. § 3790), held sufficient.—Commonwealth v. McNutt (Ky.) 978.

VI. JOINDER OF PARTIES, OFFENSES, AND COUNTS, DUPLICITY, AND ELECTION.

§ 132. An indictment for theft held to state but one offense.—Robinson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1037.

§ 132. The state held not required to elect between counts, where the same transaction is embraced in any number of distinct counts.—Robinson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1037.

VII. MOTION TO QUASH OR DISMISS, AND DEMURRER.

Writ of error to review order, see Criminal Law, § 1024.

§ 140. The trial judge is not bound to quash an indictment because of defects therein, even on motion of accused.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

VIII. AMENDMENT.

§ 162. The signing of the jurat to a complaint by the county attorney the day after he administered the oath to affiant, without the knowledge or consent of the court or accused, held to make the complaint insufficient to sustain a conviction.—Carroll v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1031.

IX. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE.

§ 169. The evidence must be limited to establishing the charge made in the indictment.—Commonwealth v. Ellis (Ky.) 973.

ment are generally waived by going without calling the attention of the trial judge to them.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

INDORSEMENT.

Of bill of exchange or promissory note, see Bills and Notes, § 299.

INFANTS.

See Guardian and Ward; Parent and Child.

VI. CRIMES.

§ 68. Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 138, c. 65, § 4, relating to the control of delinquent children, held not to oust the courts of their power to confine prisoners under 16 years of age in a jail to await trial.—Ex parte Thomas (Tex. Cr. App.) 1053.

§ 68. Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 140, c. 65, § 9, held to confer on the district court discretion to require the dismissal of a prosecution of a child under 16 years of age charged with a felony.—Ex parte Thomas (Tex. Cr. App.) 1053.

§ 68. The action of the district court held to show that it exercised its discretion, conferred by Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 137, c. 65, regulating the control of delinquent children, not to order a dismissal of the case.—Ex parte Thomas (Tex. Cr. App.) 1053.

VII. ACTIONS.

§ 80. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 38, the appointment of a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant who is not summoned and for whom no person is summoned, as authorized by section 52, is void.—Roy v. Allen's Adm'r (Ky.) 981.

§ 80. A judgment for the sale of lands belonging to a decedent's estate to pay a debt, rendered in a suit in which decedent's children are parties and represented by a guardian ad litem whose appointment is void because of failure to summon the infants, or some one for them, is invalid.—Roy v. Allen's Adm'r (Ky.) 981.

§ 89. A return of service on certain infants held to show valid service under the Code of Practice as it then existed.—Feltner v. Huff (Ky.) 936.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Of animals, liability of carrier for infection, see Carriers, §§ 215, 217, 228.

INFORMATION.

Criminal accusation, see Indictment and Information.

Penalties for failure of railroad company to furnish information required by railroad commission, see Railroads, §§ 6, 9.

INHERITANCE.

See Descent and Distribution.

INJUNCTION.

Relief against particular acts or proceedings. See Execution, § 171; Nuisance, § 23.

Consolidation of insurance associations, see Insurance, § 694.

Establishment or enforcement of right of exemption, see Exemptions, §§ 141-147.

Wrongful use of corporate name, see Corporations, § 49.

I. NATURE AND GROUNDS IN GENERAL.

(A) NATURE AND FORM OF REMEDY.

§ 5. Though a decree that a party open a public highway across its property made no provision for the contingency of noncompliance, the court is not powerless to extend relief and a mandatory order will lie.—Santa Fé Townsite Co. v. Norvell (Tex. Civ. App.) 762.

§ 7. An injunction against maintaining an action cannot be made to serve the purpose of an appeal.—Turner v. Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 565.

II. SUBJECTS OF PROTECTION AND RELIEF.

(A) ACTIONS AND OTHER LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

§ 26. Where the interpretation of a will is involved in difficulty, counsel are allowed latitude in hypotheses and theories, and persons having interests thereunder may litigate in regard to them on different hypotheses so long as they act in good faith, and the fact that they have brought three suits respecting the will would not justify an injunction restraining further suits.—Stewart v. Jones (Mo.) 1.

§ 28. Negligent failure to interpose defenses in an action held not ground for restraining the prosecution of the action.—Turner v. Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 565.

§ 26. That a note executed by plaintiff was obtained through the fraudulent representations of defendant is available as a defense in an action on the note, and therefore is not ground for the issuance of a writ of injunction restraining the enforcement of the note.—Turner v. Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 565.

§ 28. Petitioner held entitled to enjoin defendant from maintaining an action in a justice's court for loss of property of the value of $20, which property was covered by a judgment against petitioner in a former action by defendant.—Engleman v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1089.

III. ACTIONS FOR INJUNCTIONS.

Jurisdiction dependent on amount in controversy, see Courts, § 120.

Right to jury trial, see Jury, § 14.

§ 111. Under Rev. St. art. 1194, subd. 17, a proceeding for an injunction held properly dismissed because brought in the wrong county.—Turner v. Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 565.

§ 130. A verdict in a suit for a mandatory injunction to compel obedience to a decree that defendant open a highway across its property, while it might have been more specific, held sufficient.—Santa Fé Townsite Co. v. Norvell (Tex. Civ. App.) 762.

IV. PRELIMINARY AND INTERLOCUTORY INJUNCTIONS.

(A) GROUNDS AND PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE

§ 145. The requirement of Rev. St. 1895, art. 2992, of a sworn application for a temporary injunction, held not to be evaded, as was done in a particular case, in so far as the injunction rested on the allegations of an unsworn petition referred to.—Lee v. Broocks (Tex. Civ. App.) 164.

§ 145. An affidavit for a temporary writ of injunction under Act April 16, 1907 (Acts 30th

§ 171. On motion to dissolve a temporary injunction, the bill must be taken as true, in the absence of a sworn answer traversing the equity of the bill.—Dawson v. Baldrige (Tex. Civ. App.) 593.

§ 172. Rule as to when a temporary injunction will be dissolved stated.—Dawson v. Baldrige (Tex. Civ. App.) 593.

§ 172. On motion to dissolve an injunction on bill and answer, the answer, when sworn to in so far as responsive to the bill, is taken as true.—Dawson v. Baldrige (Tex. Civ. App.) 593.

V. PERMANENT INJUNCTION AND OTHER RELIEF.

§ 189. A decree in a suit for a mandatory injunction to compel obedience to a decree that defendant open a public highway across its property granting such relief held required to incorporate a certain provision in the latter decree.—Santa Fé Townsite Co. v. Norvell (Tex. Civ. App.) 762.

VII. VIOLATION AND PUNISHMENT.

§ 219. Parties against whom an injunction is issued are bound to obey it, whether it has been rightfully or wrongfully obtained.—Green v. Quisenberry (Ky.) 361.

VIII. LIABILITIES ON BONDS OR UNDERTAKINGS.

§ 250. A petition on an injunction bond held to state cause of action.—Green v. Quisenberry (Ky.) 361.

§ 252. Plaintiff held entitled to recover reasonable fees paid or incurred for attorney's services in dissolving an injunction, where such services were separate and apart from the defense of the action.—Green v. Quisenberry (Ky.) 361.

§ 252. Plaintiff in an action on an injunction bond is limited to the damages alleged.—Green v. Quisenberry (Ky.) 361.

IX. WRONGFUL INJUNCTION.

§ 261. In an action for wrongful injunction restraining plaintiff from removing a building, plaintiff held entitled to recover damages from the date of defendant's refusal to surrender, and not from the date of the writ.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

§ 261. That the submission of an appeal from a judgment perpetuating an injunction was postponed by stipulation held not to restrict defendant therein in an action for wrongful injunction to damages for the detention of his property which accrued subsequent to the final judgment of reversal on the appeal.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

§ 261. In an action for withholding possession of a building by wrongful injunction, the measure of damages was the reasonable rental value, and not interest on the value of the building.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

IN PAIS.

Estoppel, see Estoppel, § 75.

INNKEEPERS.

§ 8. A guest is a traveler or transient comer who puts up at an inn for a lawful purpose to receive its customary lodging and entertainment.—De Lapp v. Van Closter (Mo. App.) 120.

Topics, divisions, & section (§) NUMBERS in this Index, & Dec. & Amer. Digs. & Reporter Indexes agree

§ 8. A person held to have become a guest of a hotel when he registered and paid for his lodging.—De Lapp v. Van Closter (Mo. App.) 120.

§ 11. An innkeeper held liable for the loss of valuables left in his charge by his guest for safe-keeping.—De Lapp v. Van Closter (Mo. App.) 120.

§ 11. It is immaterial as affecting an innkeeper's liability for loss of a guest's property whether the guest was such upon the American or European plan.—De Lapp v. Van Closter (Mo. App.) 120.

§ 11. Evidence held to show that a guest deposited money for safe-keeping until he should be ready to take a trip, and while he might be a guest.—De Lapp v. Van Closter (Mo. App.) 120.

INQUISITION.

Of lunacy, see Insane Persons, §§ 26, 98.

INSANE PERSONS.

Insane delusions affecting capacity to execute will, see Wills, § 38.

II. INQUISITIONS.

§ 26. An adjudication of insanity held not admissible in a suit to set aside a prior deed of the insane person.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

IX. ACTIONS.

§ 98. Allegations in a pleading of a judgment held properly stricken out; it also appearing therefrom that the judgment had been appealed by certiorari still pending.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

INSOLVENCY.

See Bankruptcy.

Of fraudulent grantor, see Fraudulent Conveyances, § 61.

INSTRUCTIONS.

In civil actions, see Trial, §§ 191-296.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 780-822; Homicide, §§ 286-306.

INSURANCE.

V. THE CONTRACT IN GENERAL.

(B) CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

§ 168. Rule for construction of policy of credit insurance, stated.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

VI. PREMIUMS, DUES, AND ASSESSMENTS.

§ 183. Under an accident policy, covering the drivers of defendant transfer company, plaintiff held entitled to premiums based on the entire compensation paid the drivers, though part of the time they acted as stablemen.—Palmer Transfer Co. v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. (Ky.) 870.

IX. AVOIDANCE OF POLICY FOR MISREPRESENTATION, FRAUD, OR BREACH OF WARRANTY OR CONDITION.

(A) GROUNDS IN GENERAL.

§ 255. Misrepresentations held to avoid health and accident policy of insurance.—United States Health & Accident Ins. Co. v. Jolly (Ky.) 281.

(B) MATTERS RELATING TO PROPERTY OR INTEREST INSURED.

§ 282. A fire policy stipulating that it shall be void on the interest of insured becoming other than unincumbered held void because of a vendor's lien on the property.—Wright v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 191.

§ 282. A purchaser of real estate receiving a deed retaining a vendor's lien for the unpaid part of the price held to acquire the entire, unconditional, and sole ownership within a fire policy.—Wright v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 191.

X. FORFEITURE OF POLICY FOR BREACH OF PROMISSORY WARRANTY, COVENANT, OR CONDITION SUBSEQUENT.

(B) MATTERS RELATING TO PROPERTY OR INTEREST INSURED.

§ 330. A policy of insurance, which is to be void if the "subject of insurance" be mortgaged, held not rendered void by a mortgage on a part of the property.—Mecca Fire Ins. Co. of Waco v. Wilderspin (Tex. Civ. App.) 1131.

§ 335. The inventory of goods on hand taken two or three days before the fire cannot take the place of the accounts of cash sales kept by insured, as required by the policy.—Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. v. Weeks Drug Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1086.

§ 335. The provision that insured shall keep books of account held material, so that Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1897-1904, art. 3096aa, as to the materiality of misrepresentations, does not apply.—Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. v. Weeks Drug Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1086.

§ 335. The failure of insured to keep an account of his cash sales of goods, as required by his policy, is a forfeiture of the insurance as a matter of law.—Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. v. Weeks Drug Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1086.

XI. ESTOPPEL, WAIVER, OR AGREEMENTS AFFECTING RIGHT TO AVOID OR FORFEIT POLICY.

§ 388. A forfeiture of the policy by failure of insured to keep an account of cash sales held not waived by requiring insured to submit to several examinations.—Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. v. Weeks Drug Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1086.

XII. RISKS AND CAUSES OF LOSS.

(C) GUARANTY AND INDEMNITY INSURANCE.

§ 432. The term "experience," as used in a policy of credit insurance, construed.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

§ 432. Whether return of goods by customer affects experience which would justify the indemnified in again extending credit to an old customer, within the policy of credit insurance, held to depend upon the circumstances surrounding the return.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

§ 432. The execution of a note in payment for goods sold on credit did not, until payment of the note, close the transaction, so as to render it an "experience" which would justify the creditor in again extending credit to an old customer.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

(E) ACCIDENT AND HEALTH INSURANCE.

§ 460. Provision in an accident policy held to prevent recovery for injury during intoxica-

(C) GUARANTY AND INDEMNITY INSURANCE.

§ 511. Policy of credit insurance and rider thereto held to antedate the operation of the policy six months.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

§ 511. "First bill," within policy of credit insurance, construed.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

§ 511. Person insured by policy of credit insurance held entitled to make such application of salvage as is beneficial to his interests, where policy makes no provision as to the application to be made.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

XIV. NOTICE AND PROOF OF LOSS.

§ 538. Proof of loss, executed by insured in a fire policy and delivered to an agent of insurer, held received by insurer within the policy.—Johnson v. Lumber Ins. Co. of New York (Mo. App.) 112.

§ 539. A provision in an accident policy held not to necessarily mean that affirmative proof of loss of time cannot be given till after recovery of insured.—Mossop v. Continental Casualty Co. (Mo. App.) 680.

§ 548. Where a fire insurance policy is an Illinois contract Rev. St. 1890, § 7976 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3792), requiring the examination of insured for the adjustment of a loss to be conducted where the loss occurred, will not be applied.—Johnson v. Lumber Ins. Co. of New York (Mo. App.) 112.

§ 560. An insurer, dissatisfied with the proof of loss furnished by insured, must notify insured of the objections, and afford him an opportunity to make corrections, provided enough time is left in which proof is to be furnished for notice to be given.—Johnson v. Lumber Ins. Co. of New York (Mo. App.) 112.

§ 561. Insurer in a fire policy held estopped from asserting that the proof of loss furnished is unsatisfactory.—Johnson v. Lumber Ins. Co. of New York (Mo. App.) 112.

§ 561. Insurer in a fire policy held deprived of the right to complain of the proof of loss furnished by insured, in view of its conduct.—Johnson v. Lumber Ins. Co. of New York (Mo. App.) 112.

XVII. PAYMENT OR DISCHARGE, CONTRIBUTION, AND SUBROGATION.

§ 598. Interest on the amount due on an insurance policy will begin to run at the expiration of the time given it in the policy in which to pay the amount of the loss.—Mecca Fire Ins. Co. of Waco v. Wilderspin (Tex. Civ. App.) 1131.

XVIII. ACTIONS ON POLICIES.

Competency of plaintiff as witness as to statements in application where agent taking the application is dead, see Witnesses, § 164. Construction and operation of stipulations as question for jury, see Stipulations, § 18.

§ 626. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 8092 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3843), requiring service of process on town mutual fire insurance companies to be made at defendant's "principal office," service at defendant's "usual business office" is insuf-

—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

§ 665. Plaintiff, in action on policy of credit insurance, held to have established a prima facie case.—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

§ 668. Whether the risk was increased by the fact that some one undertook to burn the property held a question for the jury.—Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. v. Weeks Drug Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 1086.

XX. MUTUAL BENEFIT INSURANCE.

(A) CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.

§ 694. Members of a mutual beneficial association held entitled to sue to set aside an ultra vires merger of another association, and as incidental relief to have an account taken and the merged society's assets returned to it.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

§ 696. Acts 1887, p. 329, c. 198, held not to authorize the consolidation of a fraternal beneficiary association, organized under Shannon's Code, § 2524, with another similar society.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

§ 696. A consolidation or merger of two beneficiary associations held unsustainable as a sale or lease of the merged association's franchise.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

(B) THE CONTRACT IN GENERAL.

§ 723. Statements of the applicant in an application for insurance held statements of opinion merely, and, where the applicant in good faith believed them to be true, their falsity did not vitiate the policy notwithstanding its stipulations.—Daniel v. Modern Woodmen of America (Tex. Civ. App.) 211.

§ 726. Language of an insurance policy fairly susceptible of an interpretation which will prevent a forfeiture will be so construed.—Daniel v. Modern Woodmen of America (Tex. Civ. App.) 211.

§ 726. The language of an insurance policy must be construed according to the intent of the parties, derived from the words used, the subject-matter to which they relate, and the matters naturally incident thereto.—Daniel v. Modern Woodmen of America (Tex. Civ. App.) 211.

§ 726. An insurance policy will be strictly construed against insurer and liberally in favor of insured, and, where the words thereof admit of two constructions, the one most favorable to insured will be adopted.—Daniel v. Modern Woodmen of America (Tex. Civ. App.) 211.

(D) FORFEITURE OR SUSPENSION.

§ 750. A by-law of an insurance order providing for a forfeiture of the benefit certificate held by the member as a penalty for his failure to pay dues and assessments provided by his contract is reasonable, and will be enforced by the courts.—Burke v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., of Missouri (Mo. App.) 493.

§ 755. Where a custom of a subordinate lodge of allowing members to remain delinquent in the payment of dues in violation of the general law, or in advancing such dues from the § 755. A custom of a subordinate lodge, without the knowledge of the officers of the grand lodge, permitting members to remain delinquent, and advancing from the lodge treasury the amount of their dues, does not operate as a waiver of a forfeiture of membership for non-payment of dues.—Burke v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Missouri (Mo. App.) 493.

INTENT.

Fraudulent, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 61, 159.

INTEREST.

See Usury.

On funds in estate of ward, see Guardian and Ward, § 54.

On insurance, see Insurance, § 598.

INTERLOCKING DEVICES.

Maintenance near railroad crossing as constituting negligence, see Railroads, § 314.

INTERLOCUTORY INJUNCTION.

See Injunction, § 145.

INTERLOCUTORY JUDGMENT.

Appealability, see Appeal and Error, §§ 78, 82.

INTERPRETATION.

Of contracts, instruments or judicial acts and proceedings.

See Chattel Mortgages, § 150; Contracts, §§ 143-231; Deeds, §§ 96-99; Statutes, §§ 181-267; Wills, §§ 439-707.

Insurance policy, see Insurance, § 726.

INTERROGATORIES.

To jury, see Trial, § 352.

To witnesses, see Depositions.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Regulation, see Carriers, §§ 23-35; Commerce.

INTERVENTION.

In actions in general, see Parties, § 52.

INTESTACY.

See Descent and Distribution.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

III. LOCAL OPTION.

§ 30. Words "from time to time," in Const. art. 16, § 20, held not to prevent the Legislature authorizing a local option election in a subdivision of a county in part only of which local option is in force.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

§ 30. Even if Const. art. 16, § 20, does not authorize the commissioners' court to combine arbitrarily subdivisions of a county for a local option election, this does not prevent its ordering one in a commissioners' precinct embracing several justices' precincts.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

commissioners' precinct, though local option is in force in a justice's precinct therein, and not in the rest of it.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

§ 34. Statement of how ballots shall read in a local option election.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

§ 36. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3031 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1737), the record of the county court relating to the adoption of the local option law, need not show a return of the publication of the result.—State v. Bush (Mo. App.) 670.

§ 36. The order of the commissioners' court held a sufficient performance of its sole duty in a local option election to declare the result of a local option election.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

§ 37. In a local option election contest, that only one of two tickets bearing the same number was counted for prohibition did not show any injury, in the absence of an allegation that the other ticket was voted against prohibition.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 37. In a local option election contest, allegations of the complaint held sufficient to admit proof that contestants were prejudiced by a violation of Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 535, c. 11, § 64, requiring the polls to be open during certain hours.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 37. One may contest a local option election where a temporary injunction restraining the publication of the result has been dissolved.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 37. In the absence of statute, the court was not bound, in a local option election contest, to have certain challenged ballots removed from the boxes, and then direct the clerk to recount the remaining ballots and announce the result to the court.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 37. In an election contest, the action of the commissioners' court in counting the ballots may not be impeached by the testimony of one present at the count as to how the duty was performed.—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

§ 40. Declaration against prohibition in a local option election in a commissioners' precinct held not to effect the status in a justice's precinct therein in which prohibition was in effect.—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.

IV. LICENSES AND TAXES.

§ 49. The manufacture of Buchu gin held a compounding or adulterating of distilled spirits within St. 1909, § 4114A (Russell's St. § 6157), imposing a license tax thereon.—Dr. C. Bouvier Specialty Co. v. James (Ky.) 381.

§ 49. Single-stamp spirits within St. 1909, § 4114A (Russell's St. § 6157), held not confined to whisky.—Dr. C. Bouvier Specialty Co. v. James (Ky.) 381.

§ 59. Where the premises which petitioner intended to occupy as a saloon had been so used for 50 years, it was an abuse of discretion to deny a license because a church had been erected in the meantime on the opposite side of the street.—City of Louisville v. Gagen (Ky.) 947.

§ 75. Unreasonable exercise of discretion in the refusal of an application for a liquor license held an "arbitrary" exercise thereof within the rule authorizing an appeal.—City of Louisville v. Gagen (Ky.) 947.

VI. OFFENSES.

Conviction of offense as affecting competency of person convicted to testify in criminal cases, see Witnesses, § 48.

VIII. CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

Hearsay evidence, see Criminal Law, § 419.
Proof of venue, see Criminal Law, § 564.

§ 233. In an action for selling intoxicants in violation of the local option law, certain testimony held admissible to show that accused was selling whisky, and not objectionable as an attempt to show a system or prove the offense of having whisky in his possession.—Myers v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1032.

INTOXICATION.

Care required as to intoxicated licensee on premises, see Negligence, § 32.

ISSUES.

In civil actions, see Pleading, §§ 376, 380.
In criminal prosecutions, see Indictment and Information, § 169.
Presented for review on appeal, see Appeal and Error, §§ 169-173.

JOINDER.

Of causes of action, see Action, § 43.

JUDGES.

See Courts; Justices of the Peace.
Death of trial judge prior to making up statement of facts for appeal as ground for new trial in criminal prosecution, see Criminal Law, § 913.
Libel of county judge, see Libel and Slander, § 7.
Mandamus to judge, see Mandamus, § 51.
Remarks and conduct of judge at trial, see Trial, § 29.

III. RIGHTS, POWERS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

Filing of affidavit in forma pauperis in vacation of court, see Appeal and Error, § 389.

JUDGMENT.

Decisions of courts in general, see Courts, §§ 69-116.
Enforcement by creditors' suit, see Creditors' Suit.
In justice court, see Justices of the Peace, §§ 124-130.
Sales under judgment, see Judicial Sales.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Partition, § 95; Quietting Title, § 52; Trespass to Try Title, § 47.
Foreclosure, see Mortgages, § 497.
For price of goods sold, see Sales, § 366.
For usurious payments, see Usury, § 142.
Probate proceedings, see Wills, § 354.

Review.

On appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1106-1193.

I. NATURE AND ESSENTIALS IN GENERAL.

Mandamus to compel setting aside of order dismissing a cause entered after death of party, see Mandamus, § 8.

§ 17. A judgment obtained without service of process was void.—Womble v. Harsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 764.

IV. BY DEFAULT.(A) REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

§ 118. Upon suit on a note and for foreclosure of a lien given to secure it, and judgment by default against one defendant, plaintiff was entitled as against that defendant to the full amount of the debt claimed and to foreclosure of the lien, and it was error to grant a credit in favor of the defendant.—Brant v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 229.

§ 122. If there was no reply to a cross-bill so that defendants were entitled to have it taken as confessed, they should have asked for entry of a default.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

(B) OPENING OR SETTING ASIDE DEFAULT.

§ 143. The refusal to set aside a default judgment and to permit the filing of an answer held error.—Bowman v. Straight Creek Coal & Coke Co. (Ky.) 344.

§ 143. The court held to have abused its discretion in refusing to set aside the default.—Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Faulkner (Tex. Civ. App.) 747.

§ 170. Under Kirby's Dig. § 6259, a defendant against whom a decree has been rendered on constructive service held authorized to move for a retrial, but the decree will not be set aside until on the retrial it is found to be erroneous.—West v. Burks (Ark.) 397.

VI. ON TRIAL OF ISSUES.(A) RENDITION, FORM, AND REQUISITES IN GENERAL.

§ 199. A judgment non obstante veredicto must be based on what the pleadings show, and not from deductions from the evidence.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

§ 217. A decree in a suit to adjudge that deeds were mortgages held not final.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 217. "Final judgment" defined.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

(B) PARTIES.

§ 235. A judgment in favor of one person for title to land and for another for damages, in the same action, is not necessarily inconsistent in itself.—Knox v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1142.

(C) CONFORMITY TO PROCESS, PLEADINGS, PROOFS, AND VERDICT OR FINDINGS.

§ 249. If redress ex delicto is desired, there must be no averment of an express promise.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 250. Plaintiff must recover, if at all, on the contract alleged.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 251. In partition and for the removal of a cloud on the title, the court held without authority to render judgment for plaintiffs for the part of the land disclaimed by defendants filing a cross-petition for the balance.—Gray v. Tribue (Tex. Civ. App.) 808.

§ 251. In partition and for the removal of a cloud on the title, the court held authorized to enter judgment for defendants on their cross-petition.—Gray v. Tribue (Tex. Civ. App.) 808.

§ 251. In trespass to try title, where defendant simply pleads not guilty, the appropriate judgment for defendant is that plaintiff take nothing by his suit, but a further adjudication of title and right of possession would add nothing thereto.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1135.

§ 251. In trespass to try title, where defendant simply pleaded not guilty, an award to de-it is error to include interest from the date of their infliction, when the jury do not find for such interest.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

VII. ENTRY, RECORD, AND DOCKETING.

Mandamus to compel entry, see Mandamus, § 51.

VIII. AMENDMENT, CORRECTION, AND REVIEW IN SAME COURT.

§ 334. A writ of error coram nobis can only be procured by one who is a party or privy to the record or injured thereby.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

IX. OPENING OR VACATING.

Remedy by a motion to vacate as affecting right to mandamus to compel a setting aside judgment, see Mandamus, § 3.

§ 336. A motion to vacate a judgment on the ground that it was rendered after the death of the party against whom it was rendered held to take the place of the common-law writ of error coram nobis.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 354. A motion to set aside a judgment under Rev. St. 1899, § 795 (Ann. St. 1903, p. 758), must be based on an irregularity patent on the record.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 382. A motion to set aside a judgment dismissing a cause rendered after the death of plaintiff suing to have a deed adjudged a mortgage, and after he had obtained a judgment granting the relief, held properly filed by his heirs at law.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

X. EQUITABLE RELIEF.

(A) NATURE OF REMEDY AND GROUNDS.

§ 443. The fraud which entitles a party to impeach a judgment must be fraud practiced on the court in the procurement thereof.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

§ 443. Certain acts held not to constitute a fraud on the court in the procurement of decrees foreclosing a mortgage, and confirming the sale under the foreclosure.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

(B) JURISDICTION AND PROCEEDINGS.

§ 455. County court has jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of a void judgment recovered therein, regardless of the amount of damages sought to be recovered.—Womble v. Harsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 764.

XI. COLLATERAL ATTACK.

(A) JUDGMENTS IMPEACHABLE COLLATERALLY.

§ 470. Where a court had jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter, its judgment was not subject to collateral attack.—Feltner v. Huff (Ky.) 936.

(B) GROUNDS.

§ 486. A judgment rendered against a party after his death held voidable only, and not subject to collateral attack.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 486. A judgment against a party who is dead at the time of the institution of the suit attack for lack of proper service.—Gibbs v. Scales (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

(C) PROCEEDINGS.

§ 518. A motion to vacate a judgment in lieu of the common-law writ of error coram nobis is in the nature of an independent and direct attack on the judgment.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 521. A suit to enjoin the further enforcement of an execution, on the ground that the execution plaintiff had recovered sufficient from a defaulting bidder to satisfy his judgment which the execution defendant should have recovered, held not a collateral attack on the judgment, in the action against the bidder.—Shanley v. York (Tex. Civ. App.) 146.

XIII. MERGER AND BAR OF CAUSES OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

(A) JUDGMENTS OPERATIVE AS BAR.

§ 570. A judgment dismissing a petition because not stating a cause of action is no bar to a new action on a good petition.—Standard Lumber Co. v. Coldwell (Ky.) 990.

(B) CAUSES OF ACTION AND DEFENSES MERGED, BARRED, OR CONCLUDED.

§ 585. A judgment for defendant in forcible entry proceedings held not a bar to a forcible detainer proceeding.—Johnson v. Gordon (Ky.) 372.

§ 622. A prior judgment in an action by defendant to recover damages from plaintiff for breach of contract held not res judicata against plaintiffs' right to sue defendant on an account.—Kerr v. Blair (Tex. Civ. App.) 791.

XIV. CONCLUSIVENESS OF ADJUDICATION.

(A) JUDGMENTS CONCLUSIVE IN GENERAL.

§ 651. A judgment by agreement, under which land in controversy was conveyed to plaintiff, held conclusive on defendant until opened or modified.—Howard v. Howard (Ky.) 367.

§ 655. An investigation of the matter of rent and the tenant's liability on a plea in abatement in an attachment suit held not res judicata on a subsequent trial of the principal cause on the merits.—Sessinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.

§ 664. A judgment perpetuating an injunction reversed on appeal held not res judicata against a claim for damages because of the wrongful suing out of the injunction.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

(C) MATTERS CONCLUDED.

§ 717. "Matter in issue" defined.—Kerr v. Blair (Tex. Civ. App.) 791.

§ 720. Where a jury improperly considered an account by plaintiffs against defendant which was not pleaded as an offset to defendant's claim against plaintiffs in a prior action, the verdict held not res judicata of plaintiffs' right of action on the account.—Kerr v. Blair (Tex. Civ. App.) 791.

§ 720. Judgment in an injunction suit held res judicata of a claim that defendant was required to make certain repairs to plaintiff's property under a contract for the erection of a building on plaintiff's land in case of removal.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

XIX. SUSPENSION, ENFORCEMENT, AND REVIVAL.

Forgery of bond to stay judgment, see Forgery, §§ 4, 7, 34, 44.

XXI. ACTIONS ON JUDGMENTS.

(B) FOREIGN JUDGMENTS.

§ 944. To maintain an action on a foreign judgment against a plea of nul tiel record, a certified copy of the judgment, together with the pleadings and proceedings in which the judgment was founded, held necessary.—McCarthy v. Troll (Ark.) 416.

§ 944. In an action on a foreign judgment, evidence held to show that the judgment sued on was rendered in the action in which the complaint, answer, and summons introduced in evidence were filed.—McCarthy v. Troll (Ark.) 416.

XXII. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE OF JUDGMENT AS ESTOPPEL OR DEFENSE.

Judgment as evidence in action for breach of covenant, see Covenants, § 121.

§ 949. The question of res judicata held not raised under the circumstances.—Holland v. Western Bank & Trust Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 218.

JUDICIAL NOTICE.

In civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 9-35.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 304.

JUDICIAL SALES.

Appealability of order of confirmation, see Appeal and Error, § 115.

Of property of decedent, see Executors and Administrators, §§ 348-389.

On execution, see Execution, §§ 238-256.

§ 31. Irregularities and misconduct and unfairness in a judicial sale may be shown before the confirmation to set aside the sale, but after confirmation irregularities in the conduct of the sale are cured.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

§ 31. An order confirming a judicial sale held to have the force of a final judgment, and not to be collaterally attacked except for fraud.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

§ 61. Confirmation of a judicial sale without conveyance held to vest title in the purchaser.—Feltner v. Huff (Ky.) 936.

JURAT.

Of county attorney to criminal complaint, see Indictment and Information, §§ 54, 162.

JURISDICTION.

Amount in controversy, see Appeal and Error, §§ 61, 64.

Effect of appearance, see Appearance.

Objections to jurisdiction as ground for abatement, see Abatement and Revival, § 3.

Of interstate commerce commission, see Commerce, § 85.

Jurisdiction of particular actions or proceedings.

See Divorce, §§ 104, 197; Mandamus, §§ 153-164.

Foreclosure, see Mortgages, § 420.

Relief against judgment, see Judgment, § 455.

Jurisdiction of particular classes of persons.

See Guardian and Ward, § 144.

Special jurisdictions and jurisdiction of particular classes of courts.

See Courts.

Appellate jurisdiction, see Appeal and Error, §§ 19, 20; Criminal Law, §§ 1020, 1024.

Justices' courts in civil cases, see Justices of the Peace, § 47.

JURY.

Custody and conduct, see Criminal Law, §§ 853, 864.

Disqualification or misconduct ground for new trial, see New Trial, § 42.

Grounds for reference instead of trial by jury, see Reference, § 8.

Instructions in civil actions, see Trial, §§ 191-206.

Instructions in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 780-822.

Questions for jury in civil actions, see Trial, §§ 139-143.

Questions for jury in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 753-763.

Taking case or question from jury at trial, see Trial, §§ 139-156.

Verdict in civil actions, see Trial, § 352.

I. NATURE AND CONSTITUTION OF JURIES.

§ 2. Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 269, c. 139, providing for a particular jury system for all counties having a city containing a population of 20,000 or more according to a census, is not unconstitutional.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chase (Tex. Civ. App.) 783.

II. RIGHT TO TRIAL BY JURY.

§ 14. Where an interplea and answer stated a cause of action for specific performance, a jury trial held properly refused.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 14. In a suit for a mandatory injunction to compel obedience to a decree that defendant open a public highway across its property, it was not error to grant a jury trial.—Sante F6 Townsite Co. v. Norvell (Tex. Civ. App.) 762.

IV. SUMMONING, ATTENDANCE, DISCHARGE, AND COMPENSATION.

§ 58. Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 269, c. 139, relating to the selection of a jury in counties with cities having a certain population, is constitutional.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 851.

V. COMPETENCY OF JURORS, CHALLENGES, AND OBJECTIONS.

Review of questions of fact, see Appeal and Error, § 1024.

§ 88. Stockholders in a bank are not disqualified to sit as jurors in a case in which the bank's teller alone is interested.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

§ 92. The rejection of a juror because of business connections with defendant held an abuse of judicial discretion.—Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 21.

leged sales in the two cases were made to different persons and the state relied on different witnesses.—Ross v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1034.

§ 97. Bias or prejudice by a juror in favor of or preconceived ideas of the rights of one of the parties, are incompatible with a fair trial by an impartial jury.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 100. Under Acts 1899, p. 891, c. 883, newspaper statements, to disqualify a juror, must be such as purport to detail the facts by those professing to know them.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 100. Nature of opinions disqualifying a juror determined.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 100. A juror, who on his voire dire states that he has read the accounts of the crime in newspapers, but has not formed nor expressed any opinion, is not disqualified.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 103. A juror held not disqualified because he had formed an opinion on mere rumor.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 116. A challenge to the entire panel will lie for bias or partiality on the part of the officer who summoned the jury.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 116. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 662, providing that article 661, allowing a challenge to the array, shall not apply where the jury is selected by jury commissioners, held that, in the absence of a showing as to how the jury was selected, it will be presumed that it was selected by the commissioners, so that a challenge to the array will not be allowed.—Ross v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1034.

§ 126. Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3208, 3209, a challenge for cause is proper upon any ground which unfits one to act as a juror.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 132. In the examination of a juror as to his competency, the refusal to permit accused's counsel to exhibit to the juror newspaper articles referring to the offense was proper.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 132. The burden is on the challenger of a juror to show the actual existence of a disqualifying opinion.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

§ 136. Each defendant is entitled to six peremptory challenges when there is a controversy between them.—Hogsett v. Northern Texas Traction Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 807.

§ 142. An objection that a juror is disqualified because he had served more than six days within the six months preceding the trial comes too late after verdict.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1094.

VI. IMPANELING FOR TRIAL AND OATH.

In criminal prosecutions, necessity of objection for purpose of review, see Criminal Law, § 1035.

In criminal prosecutions, presumptions on appeal, see Criminal Law, § 1144.

§ 149. Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3221, 3224, 3229, held, that filling a jury by calling talesmen, where pending a trial a juror was incapacitated by sickness, was error.—Waggoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

THORITY.

§ 47. A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction of a suit for the cancellation of notes and for an order for their surrender.—Snyder v. Crutcher (Mo. App.) 489.

IV. PROCEDURE IN CIVIL CASES.

Mandamus to compel entry of judgment, see Mandamus, § 51.

§ 73. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1585, subds. 4, 8, and article 1677, and Acts 1907, 30th Leg., p. 249, c. 133, arts. 1194b, 1194c, held, that a suit before a justice on a contract for the payment of money which did not specify a place of payment brought against a nonresident, should be transferred to the county and precinct in which plaintiff is a resident.—Kramer v. Lilley (Tex. Civ. App.) 735.

§ 86. In an action for wrongful attachment, the intentions of the officer making the levy held immaterial.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 86. In an action for wrongful attachment, plaintiff held entitled to show the falsity of the grounds stated in the affidavit of attachment.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 124. Where a verdict in a justice's court was for plaintiff without assessing any amount of recovery, held, that entry of a judgment for the sum demanded in plaintiff's statement was void.—State ex rel. Vanderburg v. Bidwell (Mo. App.) 122.

§ 124. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4008 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2189), held, that a judgment for defendant must be entered on a verdict for plaintiff without assessing any amount of recovery.—State ex rel. Vanderburg v. Bidwell (Mo. App.) 122.

§ 124. Justice's duty to enter judgment on a verdict held ministerial, and his failure to enter the right judgment does not deprive the verdict of any of its force.—State ex rel. Vanderburg v. Bidwell (Mo. App.) 122.

§ 128. In an action to set aside a justice's judgment in garnishment proceedings for fraud, the question of the validity of the affidavit for garnishment could not be raised after judgment finding the judgment based on the affidavit to be valid.—Alvord Nat. Bank v. Waples-Platter Grocer Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 232.

§ 128. A justice of the peace held to have jurisdiction of a petition in the nature of a bill of review to set aside a former judgment by default and hear the case on the merits, where the judgment debtor was prevented by fraud from defending; Rev. St. 1895, art. 1651, not applying to a proceeding in the nature of a new suit.—Alvord Nat. Bank v. Waples-Platter Grocer Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 232.

§ 130. A judgment quashing an attachment on specified grounds held conclusive as against plaintiff therein when sued for wrongful attachment.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 135. In an action for wrongful levy of execution, the intentions of the officer making the levy held immaterial.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

V. REVIEW OF PROCEEDINGS.

(A) APPEAL AND ERROR.

§ 141. A controversy beyond the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace is beyond the JUSTIFICATION.

Of homicide, see Homicide, § 122.

KNOWLEDGE.

By grantee of fraud in conveyance, see Fraudulent Conveyances, § 159.

By servant of danger, see Master and Servant, § 217.

LACHES.

Affecting right to restrain operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 222.

Effect in equity, see Equity, § 67.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Lease of public lands, see Public Lands, § 178.

Mining leases, see Mines and Minerals, §§ 62, 66.

Application of statute of frauds to leases, see Frauds, Statute of, § 44.

I. CREATION AND EXISTENCE OF THE RELATION.

§ 1. "Tenant" defined.—Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.

II. LEASES AND AGREEMENTS IN GENERAL.

Application of statute of frauds to leases, see Frauds, Statute of, § 44.

III. LANDLORD'S TITLE AND REVERSION.

§ 63. Neither a tenant nor one entering under him can deny the landlord's title in a proceeding by the latter to recover possession.—Johnson v. Gordon (Ky.) 372.

V. TENANCIES FROM YEAR TO YEAR AND MONTH TO MONTH.

§ 116. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4110 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2234), a tenant from month to month who vacates without giving one month's notice held liable for rent for the succeeding month.—Sessinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.

VII. PREMISES, AND ENJOYMENT AND USE THEREOF.

(F) EVICTION.

§ 173. In an action for rent, a defense that the tenant had been evicted held not sustained.—Pearce v. Hoyt (Mo. App.) 656.

VIII. RENT AND ADVANCES.

(B) ACTIONS.

§ 229. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4123 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2239), the fact that the landlord called at the premises with the intention of demanding the rent and found the same wholly unoccupied held not equivalent to a demand on the tenant for the rent, or, in his absence, on the person occupying the premises, and insufficient to render the mere default in payment a ground for attachment.—Sessinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.

§ 231. In an action for rent, an admission by defendant held to cast on him the burden of § 233. In an action for land occupied by a canal across plaintiff's land, instructions held not to make defendant liable for the rental value of the canal, in addition to the land on which it was situated.—Houston Land & Irrigation Co. v. Bradford (Tex. Civ. App.) 158.

LANDS.

See Public Lands.

LARCENY.

See Robbery.

I. OFFENSES AND RESPONSIBILITY THEREFOR.

§ 3. Facts held to constitute horse stealing.—Walklate v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 314.

§ 36. An indictment held sufficient to sustain a conviction of theft as a bailee.—Collins v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1038.

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

(A) INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION.

Election between counts, see Indictment and Information, § 132.

(B) EVIDENCE.

Admissibility of confessions, see Criminal Law, § 534.

§ 55. Evidence in a prosecution for stealing chickens held not sufficient to authorize a conviction.—Brown v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 945.

§ 59. Circumstantial evidence that defendant as bailee sold property for $5 and converted the same to his own use is sufficient to sustain a conviction of theft by the bailee.—Collins v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1038.

(C) TRIAL AND REVIEW.

§ 70. Held, that the words "with force and arms" in an instruction on a trial for horse stealing ought to have been omitted.—Walklate v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 314.

LAW OF THE CASE.

Decision on appeal, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1097, 1099.

LAW OF THE ROAD.

See Highways, § 184.

LEASES.

See Landlord and Tenant.

LEGACIES.

See Wills.

LEGISLATIVE POWER.

See Constitutional Law, § 52.

LETTERS PATENT.

For public lands, see Mines and Minerals, § 49.

I. WORDS AND ACTS ACTIONABLE, AND LIABILITY THEREFOR.

§ 2. It is immaterial to one's liability for slander what meaning he intended to convey by the language used if it is, in fact, slanderous.—Greer v. White (Ark.) 258.

§ 7. A charge that plaintiff had burnt defendant's house charged the crime of arson, and was slanderous per se.—Greer v. White (Ark.) 258.

§ 7. A newspaper article, charging a county judge with grafting, held libelous per se.—Dixon v. Chappell (Ky.) 929.

II. PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS, AND MALICE THEREIN.

§ 45. A statement confidentially and in good faith, by a person whose property has been burned, of whom he suspects as the incendiary, held privileged.—Edwards v. Kevil (Ky.) 273.

IV. ACTIONS.

(A) RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

Right of one holding unliquidated claim for damages to protection against fraudulent conveyance by wrongdoer, see Fraudulent Conveyances, § 218.

(B) PARTIES, PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS, AND PLEADING.

§ 93. Answer in slander held good within the rule that a defendant pleading that the words spoken were privileged must admit that he spoke the words charged, or words of similar import in themselves actionable.—Edwards v. Kevil (Ky.) 273.

(C) EVIDENCE.

§ 108. In slander wherein the defense of privileged communication was made, evidence by plaintiff that he had not, in fact, made the threats to burn the building testified to by witnesses for defendant as having been made and communicated to defendant held properly excluded as immaterial.—Edwards v. Kevil (Ky.) 273.

(D) DAMAGES.

§ 120. In circumstances stated, exemplary damages held not recoverable for slander.—Greer v. White (Ark.) 258.

(E) TRIAL, JUDGMENT, AND REVIEW.

§ 123. Whether a charge of having set fire to a building was made under such circumstances as to constitute it a privileged communication held for the jury.—Edwards v. Kevil (Ky.) 273.

VI. CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY.

(B) PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

§ 159. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2262 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1426), an instruction, in a prosecution for criminal slander, that certain words constituted a charge of fornication, and that if they were spoken by accused the jury should convict, held erroneous.—State v. Simpson (Mo. App.) 1187.

LICENSES.

For mining, see Mines and Minerals, §§ 62, 66.
For sale of intoxicating liquors, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 49-75.
Injuries to licensees, see Railroads, §§ 273½-282.

I. FOR OCCUPATIONS AND PRIVILEGES.

Liability of street railroad for occupation taxes, see Street Railroads, § 81.

§ 7. The exaction of occupation taxes on street railway companies as levied by Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 5049, subd. 54, and Acts 30th Leg. (Gen. Laws 1907, c. 18) pp. 479-489, held not double taxation.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 879.

§ 42. In the prosecution of a corporation for engaging in a specified business without an occupation license, it is no defense that in engaging in such business defendant exceeded its corporate powers.—United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 1000.

LIENS.

Effect of proceedings in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, §§ 188, 195.

Liens acquired by particular remedies or proceedings.

See Garnishment, § 113.

Particular classes of liens.

See Mechanics' Liens.

Attorney's lien, see Attorney and Client, § 182.
Conclusions in pleading in action to enforce, see Pleading, § 8.

Mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, § 150.

Pledge, see Pledges.

Vendor's lien on lands sold, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 284, 298.

§ 8. An agreement between a bank and a borrower, by which the bank was to have a lien on cattle purchased by the borrower for its advances, held valid as to the parties and volunteers and persons having notice thereof.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

LIFE ESTATES.

See Dower.

Authority of life tenant to dedicate land, see Dedication, § 13.

Life estate of bankrupt acquired by will after adjudication as not passing to trustee, see Bankruptcy, § 148.

§ 11. A life tenant held a trustee for the remaindermen as to all that part of the estate which such life tenant did not require for her support.—Emert v. Blair (Tenn.) 685.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

See Adverse Possession.

In trespass to try title, see Trespass to Try Title, § 25.

Laches, see Equity, § 67.

I. STATUTES OF LIMITATION.

(A) NATURE, VALIDITY, AND CONSTRUCTION IN GENERAL.

Validity of retrospective laws, see Constitutional Law, § 191.

§ 5. Rev. St. 1899, § 4285 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2357), relating to limitations in personal actions, held, in view of section 4292 (page 2360), not to apply to actions for torts under chapter 17 (pages 1637-1658).—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.

(B) LIMITATIONS APPLICABLE TO PARTICULAR ACTIONS.

§ 18. The words "action" and "suit," as used in statutes of limitation requiring every action or suit to be brought within a stated time, are generally synonymous.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

§ 36. The statutes of limitation are available as a bar in suits in equity the same as at law.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

§ 39. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3358, held not to apply to proceedings under articles 2766, 2770, to compel a guardianship accounting.—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

II. COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

(A) ACCRUAL OF RIGHT OF ACTION OR DEFENSE.

§ 55. The right of action for damages to land by overflow of water through ditches dug on a right of way held to accrue when land was overflowed, and not when the ditches were dug.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Clayton (Tex. Civ. App.) 248.

(F) IGNORANCE, MISTAKE, TRUST, FRAUD, AND CONCEALMENT OF CAUSE OF ACTION.

§ 100. Where fraud sued for was not secret, and could have been discovered by an examination of the public records, an action therefor, not brought within five years, was barred.—Scott v. Boswell (Mo. App.) 521.

(H) COMMENCEMENT OF ACTION OR OTHER PROCEEDING.

§ 127. If an amended petition be filed after the period of limitations, changing the cause of action, it will be barred.—Wasson v. Boland (Mo. App.) 663.

§ 127. Failure to object to amendment of a petition is a waiver only of the question of plaintiff's right to amend and does not affect the running of the statute of limitations.—Wasson v. Boland (Mo. App.) 663.

§ 127. An amendment held to state a new cause of action within the statute of limitations, though both pleadings sought to hold defendant as a partner on a certificate of deposit.—Wasson v. Boland (Mo. App.) 663.

§ 127. A test as to whether an amendment states a new cause of action within the statute of limitations is whether evidence to prove the one will support the other.—Wasson v. Boland (Mo. App.) 663.

§ 127. That a cause of action set up in an amendment might have been joined as a separate count in the petition does not determine that the cause of action is not new within the statute of limitations.—Wasson v. Boland (Mo. App.) 663.

IV. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF BAR BY LIMITATION.

§ 167. Two-year limitation bars an action on a constable's official bond.—Phillips v. Hail (Tex. Civ. App.) 190.

V. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, TRIAL, AND REVIEW.

Review of sufficiency of pleading on appeal or writ of error as dependent on objections raised in lower court, see Appeal and Error, § 194.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

Of carrier, see Carriers, § 150.

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

See Damages, § 80.

LIQUOR SELLING.

See Intoxicating Liquors.

LIS PENDENS.

Pendency of other action ground for abatement, see Abatement and Revival, § 14.

LIVE STOCK.

Carriage of, see Carriers, §§ 207-230. Injuries from operation of railroads, see Railroads, §§ 411-446.

LOCAL ACTIONS.

See Venue, § 7.

LOCAL OPTION.

Traffic in intoxicating liquors, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 30-40.

LOGGING RAILROADS.

Application of fellow servant laws, see Master and Servant, § 180.

LOGS AND LOGGING.

Application of statute of frauds to sale of timber, see Frauds, Statute of, § 56.

Assignment of conveyance of timber, acknowledgment as prerequisite to registration, see Acknowledgment, § 53.

Cutting timber as trespass, see Trespass, § 52. Evidence of other offenses in prosecution for defacing brand, see Criminal Law, § 369.

Indictment in language of statute for defacing brand, see Indictment and Information, § 110.

§ 3. Where plaintiff purchased trees 12 inches in diameter at the stump where cut it was not liable for trees cut at a point where their diameter was less than 12 inches, if their diameter was sufficient at the point where trees are usually cut.—Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith (Ky.) 307.

§ 3. Instruments held to transfer interest in land, and so required to be registered.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 9. The paper for adoption of a brand by a timber dealer according to St. 1909, § 1409, subsec. 7 (Russell's St. § 5863), may be executed by the manager of a company.—Bennett v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 332.

§ 35. Where a third person bought a certain number of trees of plaintiff and sold them to defendant, who hired the third person and others to cut the trees, and they cut in addition other trees belonging to plaintiff, defendant was liable to plaintiff for the other trees, though plaintiff did not own the land upon which some of them stood.—Ford Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Griggs (Ky.) 920.

§ 35. A verdict of $725 held not excessive in an action for cutting and removing trees.—Ford Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Griggs (Ky.) 920.

§ 51. Sawing off the end of a railroad tie containing the owner's brand held to constitute the offense denounced by St. 1909, § 1409, subsec. 11 (Russell's St. § 5867).—Bennett v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 332.

LOOKOUT.

On trains, duty as to trespassers, see Railroads, § 369.

LOST INSTRUMENTS.

§ 3. Equity will not establish a lost deed where it would convey no estate, but merely tend to show that the grantor thereby removed an apparent claim on the land under an entry afterwards canceled by the United States.—Morris v. Parry (Mo.) 430.

§ 7. In an action to restore a lost deed, it was sufficient to allege that defendant executed and delivered the alleged lost deed to plaintiff, without specifying the manner of the delivery.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 8. In an action to restore a lost deed claimed to have been executed by defendants' ancestor to plaintiff's husband, to land which the former held in trust for the latter, evidence held to prove plaintiff's case beyond a reasonable doubt.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 8. One seeking to restore an alleged lost deed must prove his case by a high standard of evidence.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

LUMBER.

See Logs and Logging.

LUNATICS.

See Insane Persons.

MACHINERY.

Liability of employer for defects, see Master and Servant, §§ 101-129, 234-236.

MAINTENANCE.

See Champerty and Maintenance.

MALICE.

See Malicious Prosecution, § 32.

Element of liability for libel or slander, see Libel and Slander, § 45.

Element of murder, see Homicide, § 13.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

See False Imprisonment.

I. NATURE AND COMMENCEMENT OF PROSECUTION.

§ 10. An action for damages will lie where one has been compelled to defend himself against a civil action of a defamatory nature, maliciously brought and maintained without probable cause.—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 506.

II. WANT OF PROBABLE CAUSE.

§ 25. "Probable cause" defined as used in connection with "malicious prosecution."—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 506.

V. ACTIONS.

Declarations by conspirators, see Evidence, § 253.

§ 64. Evidence held to show that defendant instituted and prosecuted suits against plaintiff without probable cause.—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 506.

§ 64. In an action for malicious prosecution, that defendant did not believe plaintiff guilty, or that defendant sought false evidence against plaintiff, need not be established by direct testimony.—Cramer v. Barmon (Mo. App.) 1179.

§ 67. One suing for malicious prosecution may recover for the mental distress suffered during the continuance of the criminal case obtained at his request to enable him to prepare his defense.—Cramer v. Barmon (Mo. App.) 1179.

§ 68. The awarding of exemplary damages in an action for malicious prosecution lies within the discretion of the jury.—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 506.

§ 71. In an action for malicious prosecution, where the facts are not in dispute, the question of a want of probable cause is one of law for the court; otherwise it is a mixed question of law and fact.—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 506.

MANDAMUS.

I. NATURE AND GROUNDS IN GENERAL.

§ 1. The writ of mandamus is a statutory writ, and is granted as a matter of right in a proper case.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

§ 3. Mandamus held not to lie to compel the court to set aside a judgment dismissing a cause entered after the death of plaintiff.—State ex rel Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

§ 12. Mandamus lies only to compel the performance of an existing legal duty and cannot be the means of imposing that duty.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 19. On the retirement from office of the defendant in a mandamus proceeding, the writ must abate in the absence of statute permitting a substitution of his successor.—Carpenter v. Kone (Tex. Civ. App.) 203.

§ 23. A citizen may sue out a writ of mandamus when the right or duty in question affects the general public, as distinguished from the state.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

§ 23. A citizen may sue out a writ of mandamus to compel a road supervisor to let work on public roads at competitive bidding, and it is not necessary that plaintiff show a special interest or that the public will sustain damage if the act is not done.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

II. SUBJECTS AND PURPOSES OF RELIEF.

(A) ACTS AND PROCEEDINGS OF COURTS, JUDGES, AND JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

§ 51. Mandamus held a proper remedy to compel a justice to enter judgment on a verdict.—State ex rel. Vanderburg v. Bidwell (Mo. App.) 122.

(C) ACTS AND PROCEEDINGS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS.

§ 133. As Rev. St. 1895, art. 322, providing for the issuance of a written receipt or bill of lading by a carrier when demanded, does not require it to specify the route desired by the shipper, there is no legal duty to incorporate the route in a bill of lading, and mandamus will not lie to compel it.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 133. There being no statutory requirement imposing on a carrier the duty of delivering to a connecting carrier the routing instructions of the shipper, and the common-law duty, when delivering a through shipment to a connecting carrier, to also deliver a waybill or the routing instructions under which the shipment is to be made, not requiring such act, mandamus will not lie to enforce performance of such an act.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

§ 133. Mandamus held not to lie to enforce an abstract right of which the person asking it intended in the future to avail himself.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

III. JURISDICTION, PROCEEDINGS, AND RELIEF.

Review of ruling on demurrer to petition as dependent on finality of determination, see Appeal and Error, § 78.

§ 153. There is no statute in Texas permitting a successor in office to be substituted for his predecessor in a mandamus proceeding against the latter to compel the performance of an official duty, such as ordering an election under Acts 1903, p. 118, c. 93, art. 812, to determine the location of a county seat.—Carpenter v. Kone (Tex. Civ. App.) 203.

§ 154. A petition for a writ of mandamus need not expressly ask for the issuance of the writ.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

§ 154. A petition for a writ of mandamus to compel a road supervisor to let work on public roads at competitive bidding held to charge that the county worked its roads by taxation.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

§ 157. The notice of motion for the writ of mandamus, as provided by Civ. Code Prac. § 474, is unnecessary when the defendant voluntarily appears and demurs to the petition.—Gay v. Haggard (Ky.) 299.

§ 164. The matters well pleaded by relator in mandamus and not denied by respondent in express terms are admitted as true.—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

MANDATE.

See Mandamus.

To lower court or decision on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 1195.

MANSLAUGHTER.

See Homicide, §§ 33-43.

MARKET VALUE.

Of property, opinion evidence, see Evidence, §§ 472, 474.

MARRIAGE.

See Divorce; Husband and Wife.

License and return as documentary evidence in criminal prosecution, see Criminal Law, § 429.

§ 48. Marriage is a fact that may be proved by reputation, as well as by record, or by the testimony of those who saw the rites performed.—Caldwell v. Williams (Ky.) 932.

§ 50. Reputation of a marriage coupled with a man holding himself out as the husband and father of the family, is sufficient.—Caldwell v. Williams (Ky.) 932.

MARRIED WOMEN.

See Husband and Wife.

MASTER AND SERVANT.

See Work and Labor.

I. THE RELATION.

(A) CREATION AND EXISTENCE.

§ 1. Where a master gives the labor of his servant to a third person without losing the control of him, the servant does not become a servant of the third person.—Walker v. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 554.

§ 1. An agreement between two employers held not to make an employé of one of them an employé of the other.—Walker v. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 554.

§ 3. A contract of employment held to bind the employé to return advancements made by the employer.—Chicago Crayon Co. v. McNamara (Mo. App.) 118.

II. SERVICES AND COMPENSATION.

(B) WAGES AND OTHER REMUNERATION.

Jurisdiction of particular courts of action for conversion of property of employer thereby defeating lien for wages, see Courts, § 121.

§ 79. The redemption by the employer at bi-monthly pay days of checks issued to employes for services at a reduction of 10 per cent. of their face value is a violation of Const. § 244.—Kentucky Coal Mining Co. v. Mattingly (Ky.) 350.

§ 82. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 3339a, a superintendent of a brick company held not to have a lien for his wages.—Lindale Brick Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 568.

III. MASTER'S LIABILITY FOR INJURIES TO SERVANT.

(A) NATURE AND EXTENT IN GENERAL.

Release after accrual of liability, evidence of fraud, see Release, §§ 55, 56.

§ 85. An employé suing his employer for negligence must show that the employer failed in the performance of some duty owing him as his employer.—Courter v. Tootle, Wheeler & Motter Mercantile Co. (Mo. App.) 506.

§ 88. A decedent held not to be an employé of an independent contractor but of defendant.—Keen's Adm'r v. Keystone Crescent Lumber Co. (Ky.) 356.

(B) TOOLS, MACHINERY, APPLIANCES, AND PLACES FOR WORK.

Power of Congress to legislate as to liability of employers in territories, see Territories, § 11.

§ 101. A master held required to exercise ordinary care in the selection of reasonably safe machinery and in keeping it in proper condition.—Wilcox v. Hebert (Ark.) 402.

§ 101. The liability of a master furnishing unsafe machinery, proximately causing an injury to a servant, held to depend on the care a man of ordinary prudence would exercise un-

§ 101. The master must use ordinary care to furnish the servant a reasonably safe place in which to work.—Bruton's Adm'r v. Eddington-Griffiths Const. Co. (Ky.) 1001.

§ 101. A master is not an insurer of the servant, nor is he required to exercise more than ordinary care to guard the servant against risk of injury.—Reickert v. Hammond Packing Co. (Mo. App.) 525.

§ 102. A master held required to exercise ordinary care in the selection of reasonably safe machinery and in keeping it in proper condition.—Wilcox v. Hebert (Ark.) 402.

§ 102. The liability of a master furnishing unsafe machinery, proximately causing an injury to a servant, held to depend on the care a man of ordinary prudence would exercise under similar circumstances.—Wilcox v. Hebert (Ark.) 402.

§ 102. Statement of master's duty as to furnishing safe appliances.—Williams Coal Co. v. Jones (Ky.) 342.

§ 102. The master must use ordinary care to furnish the servant a reasonably safe place in which to work.—Bruton's Adm'r v. Eddington-Griffiths Const. Co. (Ky.) 1001.

§ 107. In an action for injuries to a servant in a packing plant, by caustic soda solution burning his foot, defendant held negligent in permitting the floor of the room to fall into disrepair.—Reickert v. Hammond Packing Co. (Mo. App.) 525.

§ 108. The right of an employé to recover for damages arising from defective machinery stated.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 111. Duty of railroad company to keep in repair oil boxes on freight cars, so that they may be safely used as a step in mounting the car, stated.—Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Day (Tex. Civ. App.) 739.

§ 112. The furnishing of a defective hand car to sectionmen held negligence.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Browning (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 112. A street car company's duty to exercise care to have its track in proper condition for use by its employes, and make necessary inspection thereof, stated.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 113. A railroad company must use reasonable care to have its roadbed free of obstructions calculated to injure its employes.—Ft. Worth & D. O. Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1113.

§ 125. It was a street car company's duty to exercise ordinary care to discover a railroad car dangerously near its track, and remove it, and it could not escape liability for injuries to employes caused by the proximity of the car, on the ground that it had no actual notice thereof, and could not control the movement of the railroad car.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 128. Negligence in permitting the drawhead of a flat car to become out of repair held not ground for recovery by an employé whose foot was caught between the drawheads.—McGrory v. Ultima Thule, A. & M. Ry. Co. (Ark.) 710.

§ 129. A railroad company held not liable for injuries to a brakeman after his fall from the top of a moving car, where he ran along the track until he stepped into a hole and was run over.—At-

§ 131. In an action for injuries to an employé, evidence held, as a matter of law, to show that the employer was not guilty of actionable negligence.—Courter v. Tootle, Wheeler & Motter Mercantile Co. (Mo. App.) 505.

§ 137. Trainmen held to have right to assume that brakeman, sent to flag train, will be watchful.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Finley (Tenn.) 692.

(D) WARNING AND INSTRUCTING SERVANT.

§ 150. In an action for injuries to a servant, defendant held negligent in failing to warn plaintiff of danger of his work.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Malloy (Tex. Civ. App.) 721.

§ 153. In an action for injuries to a servant in a packing plant by caustic soda solution burning his foot, defendant held negligent in failing to warn plaintiff of the danger.—Reickert v. Hammond Packing Co. (Mo. App.) 525.

§ 157. Timely warning of danger is a defense to action for injury to an employé.—Wagoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

(E) FELLOW SERVANTS.

§ 177. Master held not responsible to a vice principal for the negligence of another servant who is the latter's subordinate.—McGrory v. Ultima Thule, A. & M. Ry. Co. (Ark.) 710.

§ 180. A sectionman, while using a push car, held not engaged in the work of operating a car, within the exception of the fellow servant rule of Batts' Ann. Civ. St. art. 4560ea.—Texarkana & Ft. S. Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Tex.) 127.

§ 180. The word "railroad" as used in Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4560h, held, to include a logging railroad.—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.

§ 180. The statute on the subject of fellow servants, relating to railway employes, held not applicable to the case of an injury to a sawmill employé by a co-employé.—Quinn v. Glenn Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 733.

§ 180. Fellow servants held to be operating cars within Rev. St. 1895, art. 4560f, exempting persons engaged in operating the cars from the fellow-servant rule.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1117.

§ 181. One employed by a lumber company to cut and scale timber was not a fellow servant of employes operating a logging train.—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.

§ 189. Certain proof held not to show that an employé was a vice principal of the employer.—Quinn v. Glenn Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 733.

§ 201. An act of an employé held not the direct and proximate cause of an injury to a co-employé.—Quinn v. Glenn Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 733.

§ 202. Duty of trainmen, on discovery of fellow servant on track, stated.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Finley (Tenn.) 692.

(F) RISKS ASSUMED BY SERVANT.

§ 203. Where the manner of doing the work is ordinarily a reasonably safe one, the risks of danger attending the work are assumed by the employé.—Courter v. Tootle, Wheeler & Motter Mercantile Co. (Mo. App.) 505.

§ 204. Act April 24, 1905 (Laws 1905, p. 386, c. 163), relating to assumption of risk, held not limited to cases of defective machinery, but applicable to a brakeman's action for injuries caused by slipping in a hole in the track while coupling cars.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 205. Where a servant, who was firing a defective boiler, called the foreman's attention to escaping steam and was assured that there was no danger, he had a right to rely upon the assurance.—Keen's Adm'r v. Keystone Crescent Lumber Co. (Ky.) 355.

§ 210. A section hand held not to assume the risk of injury from a defective hand car.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 213. In an action for injuries to a servant, plaintiff held not to have assumed the risk.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Malloy (Tex. Civ. App.) 721.

§ 217. Where a master knows that machinery is defective, the servant continuing to work with knowledge of the defect held not precluded from recovery for injuries sustained.—Keen's Adm'r v. Keystone Crescent Lumber Co. (Ky.) 355.

§ 217. Servant held to have assumed risk of his injury.—Wallace v. South Covington & C. St. Ry. Co. (Ky.) 962.

§ 217. An employé in a sawmill, injured while adjusting a guide pin of a circular saw, held to have assumed the risk as a matter of law.—Quinn v. Glenn Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 733.

§ 217. An employé, voluntarily and knowingly attempting to use defective appliances, assumes the risk of injury.—Quinn v. Glenn Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 733.

§ 217. An employé who knows of the negligent act of his employer, and who appreciates the danger arising therefrom, assumes the risks of the situation.—Mt. Marion Coal Mining Co. v. Holt (Tex. Civ. App.) 825.

§ 217. An employé in a mine killed by falling into a shaft held to have assumed the risk as a matter of law.—Mt. Marion Coal Mining Co. v. Holt (Tex. Civ. App.) 825.

§ 217. A lineman of a telephone company, shocked, while climbing a telephone pole, by a city wire coming in contact with an iron on the pole, and the wire of another company being in contact with the city wire, held to have assumed the risk.—Ft. Worth Light & Power Co. v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.) 831.

§ 217. A servant held not to have assumed the risk of the danger he was subjected to by a set screw projecting from a revolving shaft.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1094.

§ 219. A switchman held not to have assumed the risk of injury from the use of a defective oil box as a step in mounting a freight car.—Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Day (Tex. Civ. App.) 739.

§ 219. Where a street car conductor did not have actual knowledge of the dangerous proximity of a railroad car, which struck him as his street car passed it, he did not assume the risk of injury, unless its nearness to the street car track was so obvious that he could have seen it by reasonable observation.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

(G) CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE OF SERVANT.

§ 229. It is the duty of a switchman to exercise ordinary care to avoid injury to himself.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1113.

§ 234. An employé is not charged with knowledge of defects in machinery because the use of ordinary care would disclose them.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 234. A street car conductor must use that care for his safety while engaged in his work which a person of ordinary prudence would use under similar circumstances, and is chargeable with knowledge of what he could have learned by such care.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 235. A servant held not required to exercise diligence to discover defects in appliances furnished by the master.—Waggoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

§ 236. A servant must use reasonable care to avoid danger to be apprehended from defects which are open to observation, and which can by the use of ordinary care be avoided by him, as well as by his master.—Courter v. Tootle, Wheeler & Motter Mercantile Co. (Mo. App.) 505.

§ 236. Duty of brakeman, ordered to flag train, stated.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Finley (Tenn.) 692.

§ 236. That a conductor could have discovered by investigation the dangerous proximity of a coal car to the street car track held not to prevent his recovery for injuries sustained from coming in contact with it, unless the danger was obvious.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 240. It is negligence for a switchman to attempt to ride on the break beam of an approaching car, instead of using the steps on the side.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1113.

§ 245. The act of a servant in obeying the command of his superior held not negligence per se where the danger is not patent.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Malloy (Tex. Civ. App.) 721.

§ 245. An employé held not guilty of contributory negligence in tying a rope to a brace for the purpose of moving it in the manner directed by the master's foreman.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 248. Brakeman sent forward to flag train, on going to sleep on track, cannot complain that crew of such train were negligent in failing to keep lookout.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Finley (Tenn.) 692.

(H) ACTIONS.

Application of instruction to case, see Trial, § 253.

Assumption by judge as to facts and instructions, see Trial, § 191.

Instructions excluding or ignoring issues or evidence, see Trial, § 253.

Instructions on weight of evidence, see Trial, § 194.

Opinion evidence, see Evidence, § 472.

Pleading foreign statutes, see Statutes, § 281.

Removal of cause from state to federal court, see Removal of Causes, § 19.

§ 256. A petition against a railroad company for injuries to a railroad employé, if he gives "notice in writing of the injury so sustained," is insufficient if it fails to allege the giving of such notice.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

§ 257. A petition, in an action for personal injuries, held not to show that plaintiff at the time of the accident was an employé of defendant.—Walker v. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 554.

§ 264. In an action by an engine watcher for personal injuries, held, that the rejected rules of defendant included in his application for employment were relevant, and should have been admitted.—Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. McSwain (Tex. Civ. App.) 874.

—Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. McSwain (Tex. Civ. App.) 874.

§ 285. The fact that a switchman is injured by having his foot caught in a wire on the track is not sufficient evidence of negligence on the part of the railroad company.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1113.

§ 287. Evidence, in an action by a railroad employe for injuries of the amount for which he had settled a similar claim against another railroad company, held inadmissible.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 270. Where a servant was injured from a projecting set screw on a shaft, the exclusion of evidence to show whether the screw could be produced in court held not error.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1094.

§ 274. Evidence of a servant's knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the presence of a set screw by which he was injured held admissible.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1094.

§ 276. The furnishing of a defective hand car held to be the proximate cause of defendant's injury.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Browning (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 276. Evidence held insufficient to justify a finding that a switch was closed by a brakeman and afterwards forcibly opened by an unauthorized person.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 696.

§ 276. In a conductor's action against a street car company for injuries by being struck by a coal car on a railroad switch near the street car track, evidence held to show that defendant's negligence in not discovering the proximity of the car and having it removed, concurring with the negligence of the railroad company, proximately caused plaintiff's injury.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 277. In an action for personal injuries, evidence held to warrant a verdict for defendant, on the theory that plaintiff was defendant's servant and a fellow servant of the one guilty of the negligence resulting in the injury.—Walker v. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 554.

§ 278. In a conductor's action against a street car company for injuries by being struck by a coal car on a railroad switch near the street car track, evidence held to show negligence of defendant in not discovering the proximity of the railroad car to its tracks, and having it removed.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 290. In a conductor's action for injuries sustained by striking a railroad car on a switch near the street car track, evidence held to show that plaintiff did not assume the risk of injury.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 281. Evidence held insufficient to show that plaintiff, a switchman, was guilty of contributory negligence.—Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Day (Tex. Civ. App.) 739.

§ 281. In a conductor's action for injuries by striking a railroad car on a switch near the street car track, evidence held to show that plaintiff was not negligent in not discovering the dangerous proximity of the car.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 281. Evidence, in an action for injury to an employe, held sufficient to justify a finding that plaintiff was not negligent.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

—Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. McSwain (Tex. Civ. App.) 874.

§ 286. In an action for the death of a servant, whether the master used ordinary care to furnish a reasonably safe place to work, held, under the evidence, to be for the jury.—Bruton's Adm'r v. Eddington-Griffiths Const. Co. (Ky.) 1001.

§ 286. Evidence in an action by a servant for personal injuries held to require a directed verdict for defendant.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Finley (Tenn.) 692.

§ 286. Evidence, in an action for the death of a trapper by the derailment of coal cars in defendant's mine, held sufficient to go to the jury as to defendant's negligence.—Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Kowsikowski (Tex. Civ. App.) 829.

§ 286. Whether a master was negligent in permitting a set screw to project from a revolving shaft, resulting in the servant's injury, held for the jury.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1094.

§ 289. Under the evidence in an action for injury to an employe, held, there should have been a peremptory instruction for defendant for insufficient evidence.—Williams Coal Co. v. Jones (Ky.) 342.

§ 289. Whether one employed by a lumber company was guilty of contributory negligence in being on the engine of a logging train held a jury question.—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.

§ 289. A street car conductor was not negligent as a matter of law by stepping down onto the running board without looking to see whether he was in danger from a railroad car standing on a switch within 12 inches of the perpendicular handles of the street car.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 289. Evidence as to a servant's contributory negligence held for the jury.—Waggoner v. Porterfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 1094.

§ 291. Under the facts, held, an instruction as to duty of master to furnish safe appliances should have been omitted as not within the case made by the pleadings and evidence.—Williams Coal Co. v. Jones (Ky.) 342.

§ 291. An instruction in an action for a servant's injuries held not objectionable as placing the burden of proving absence of negligence on defendant.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 291. In an action for injuries to an employe, an instruction as to negligence held authorized by the pleadings.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 291. An instruction, in an action for injuries to an employe, as to the burden of proof as to contributory negligence, held not erroneous.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 293. In an action for injury to a minor employe while operating a revolving saw, allegations held to justify an instruction.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 293. An instruction, in an action for injury to a minor employe while operating a revolving saw, held not erroneous as disregarding the employer's knowledge or means of knowledge of a danger.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

to a minor employee held properly refused as ignoring his youth and inexperience.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 293. In an action for injuries to a servant, an instruction held not objectionable as presenting the issue of defendant's negligence in not "properly" closing a switch.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 293. In a brakeman's action for injuries by stepping in a hole in the track while coupling cars, an instruction that the company must keep its "approaches" in a safe condition held to mean those places where employes must approach the track to work, and not such approaches as crossings.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 293. In a street car conductor's action against the company for injuries caused by coming in contact with a coal car on a railroad switch near the street car track, a requested instruction held properly refused as tending to mislead the jury.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 293. In an action for injuries to a servant, an instruction held not to be erroneous.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 295. An instruction in an action for injuries to a servant held objectionable as imposing on the master too high a degree of care.—Reickert v. Hammond Packing Co. (Mo. App.) 525.

§ 295. Rights of an employer sued for injury to an employe on the theory that the injury was caused by dangers arising from defects in a machine, stated.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 295. The defense that a servant knew or should have known of defects in an appliance by which he was injured cannot be more fairly presented than by the ordinary charge of assumed risk.—Waggoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

§ 296. In an action for death of a servant, an instruction requiring that the engineer should have used all the means at his command to have stopped the engine after being notified of deceased's perilous situation held not objectionable as imposing too high a degree of care.—San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Hodges (Tex. Civ. App.) 767.

§ 296. An instruction as to contributory negligence of an employe held not erroneous.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

MATERIALITY.

Of alteration of written instrument, see Alteration of Instruments.

MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

See Damages, §§ 95, 112.

MECHANICS' LIENS.

I. NATURE, GROUNDS, AND SUBJECT-MATTER IN GENERAL.

§ 5. The rule calling for a strict construction of statutes in derogation of the common law does not apply to mechanic's lien statutes.—Braeckel v. Shade (Mo. App.) 1196.

§ 13. Creditors of a contractor constructing a public building held not entitled to a lien un-

§ 124. Under Rev. St. 1899, §§ 4207, 4221 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 2290, 2311), a mechanic's lien is not lost by a mistake in the first name of the owner in the notices of lien, where the owner was not misled, and no rights of third persons intervened.—Braeckel v. Shade (Mo. App.) 1196.

MEDICAL BOOKS.

As documentary evidence, see Evidence, § 363.

MEMORANDA.

Required by statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, §§ 100-118.

MENTAL SUFFERING.

Element of damages, see Damages, §§ 48-54.

Element of damages for malicious prosecution, see Malicious Prosecution, § 67.

MERCANTILE AGENCIES.

§ 1. A corporation held engaged in reporting on the credit of persons engaged in business within Ky. St. 1906, § 4224 (Russell's St. § 6157), requiring persons or concerns so engaged to secure a license.—United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 1000.

MERGER.

Of beneficial associations, sufficiency of service of process by publication in action to restrain, see Process, § 87.

Of cause of action in judgment, see Judgment, §§ 570-622.

Of insurance associations, see Insurance, §§ 694, 696.

MILITIA.

Right of member of national guards employed in service of United States Army to vote, see Elections, § 74.

MINES AND MINERALS.

Presumptions as to laws of other states, see Evidence, § 80.

II. TITLE, CONVEYANCES, AND CONTRACTS.

(A) RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF OWNERS.

§ 49. The possession, by a grantor of a mineral interest and mining rights in property, of the surface, inures to the benefit of the grantee of such rights as against third parties.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

(B) CONVEYANCES IN GENERAL.

Right of grantee of minerals to way of necessity over land of stranger, see Easements, § 18.

§ 55. Conveyance of minerals held not to create a distinct estate.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

§ 55. Conveyance of particular mineral by specific term held to pass only that mineral.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

§ 55. Where a mineral which has been conveyed is removed from the land, the owner of such mineral ceases to have any other rights in the land.—McBurney v. Glenmary Coal & Coke Co. (Tenn.) 694.

(C) LEASES, LICENSES, AND CONTRACTS.

§ 62. Plaintiffs, suing on a contract to sublease land to them for mining, held entitled to recover for defendants' failure to comply with the contract caused by the subsequent forfeiture of their lease, though at the date of the contract they had a good and sufficient lease.—Ragland v. Conqueror Zinc Cos. (Mo. App.) 1194.

§ 62. A covenant for quiet enjoyment held to be inferable from a contract to sublease land for mining.—Ragland v. Conqueror Zinc Cos. (Mo. App.) 1194.

§ 62. For breach of contract to sublease on the contingency that sublessees found paying ores, held, that they might recover for expenditures.—Ragland v. Conqueror Zinc Cos. (Mo. App.) 1194.

§ 62. In an action for breach of contract to sublease for mining on the contingency of finding paying ores, an instruction that the measure of damages was plaintiffs' actual expense incurred for work held proper.—Ragland v. Conqueror Zinc Cos. (Mo. App.) 1194.

§ 63. Where a lease of mineral rights contained a provision for forfeiture, lessors were entitled to sue for possession on breach of such condition.—Trumbo v. Persons (Ky.) 916.

MINORS.

See Infants.

MISCARRIAGE

As element of damage resulting from injuries to female, see Damages, § 32.
Excessive damages for injuries, see Damages, § 130.

MISJOINDER.

Of parties, see Parties, § 92.

MISREPRESENTATION.

By insured, see Insurance, §§ 255-282.

MISTAKE.

In contract, see Contracts, § 93.
In contract of sale, see Sales, § 36.
Parol or extrinsic evidence, see Evidence, § 433.

MITIGATION.

Of damages, see Damages, §§ 62, 64.

MIXED TRAIN.

Care required of carrier, see Carriers, § 280.

MODIFICATION.

Of contract, see Contracts, § 247; Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 84-87.
Of judgment or order on appeal, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1151, 1152.

MONEY RECEIVED.

Recovery of tax paid, see Taxation, § 529.

§ 7. Where plaintiff in execution recovered from a defaulting bidder the difference between his bid and the price obtained on resale, which, under the statute, belonged to defendant in execution, the execution defendant, not being a party to the action against the defaulting bidder, could recover from plaintiff in execution, in a proper proceeding, the amount wrongfully recovered by him.—Shanley v. York (Tex. Civ. App.) 146.

§ 19. Instructions as to defendant's liability for money retained out of the proceeds of a loan made to plaintiff held sufficient.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

MONOPOLIES.

II. TRUSTS AND OTHER COMBINATIONS IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

Fees of prosecuting attorneys in action for penalties, see District and Prosecuting Attorneys, § 5.

MONTH.

Tenancy from month to month, see Landlord and Tenant, § 116.

MORTGAGES.

Of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 118, 191.

Of personal property, see Chattel Mortgages.

Sale of decedent's land to pay mortgage debt, right of mortgagee to assert invalidity of judgment, see Executors and Administrators, § 349.

Sale of decedent's land to pay mortgage debt, setting aside invalid judgment, see Executors and Administrators, § 348.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

(A) NATURE AND ESSENTIALS OF CONVEYANCES AS SECURITY.

Finality of decree adjudging deeds to be mortgages, see Judgment, § 217.

§ 27. The provision in a deed charging the grantee with the support of a person named as a part of the consideration for the deed creates a lien on the land for the payment of such support.—Webster v. Cadwallader (Ky.) 327.

§ 27. Under the provision in a deed, held, that the obligation to furnish support therein provided for does not exist and become a lien on the premises conveyed until the support is asked for.—Webster v. Cadwallader (Ky.) 327.

VII. PAYMENT OR PERFORMANCE OF CONDITION, RELEASE, AND SATISFACTION.

§ 298. A mortgage creditor, who collected on insurance on the improvements more than enough to extinguish the principal of the debt, held not entitled to collect more interest than that which had accrued at the collection of the policy.—Dallas Trust & Savings Bank v. Story (Tex. Civ. App.) 781.

X. FORECLOSURE BY ACTION.

(C) JURISDICTION AND VENUE.

§ 420. A decree foreclosing a real estate mortgage in the county court held void.—Womble v. Harsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 764.

(E) PARTIES AND PROCESS.

Necessity of appointment of administrator to represent deceased mortgagor, see Executors and Administrators, § 3.

§ 427. The widow of a mortgagor is a necessary party in foreclosure.—Hardy v. Atkinson (Mo. App.) 516.

(F) PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

§ 445. That a petition to foreclose a mortgage failed to set up an assignment to the mortgagee of certain vendor's lien notes, of the

(I) JUDGMENT OR DECREE AND EXECUTION.

§ 497. A mortgage foreclosure judgment establishes conclusively both the debt and the lien.—Blair v. Guaranty Savings, Loan & Investment Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

(J) SALE.

§ 516. The heirs of a deceased mortgagor held entitled to purchase the mortgaged premises at a foreclosure sale.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

§ 518. Where there is an error in the apportionment of a walk improvement, the property owner is not liable for interest until the error has been corrected.—Jackson's Adm'rs v. McHargue (Ky.) 944.

§ 529. The price paid by the purchaser at a mortgage foreclosure sale held not sufficiently inadequate to justify setting aside the sale on the original hearing of the report of the commissioner.—Bank of Pine Bluff v. Levi (Ark.) 250.

§ 534. A mortgage foreclosure held to pass the fee to the purchaser.—Hardy v. Atkinson (Mo. App.) 516.

(L) DISPOSITION OF PROCEEDS AND SURPLUS.

Homestead right of widow of mortgagor, see Homestead, § 121.

Right of widow of mortgagor to dower in surplus proceeds, see Dower, § 48.

XL REDEMPTION.

Right to contribution as against heirs of mortgagor on redemption by widow to satisfy dower, see Descent and Distribution, § 152.

§ 504. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 2364 (Russell's St. § 80), a mortgagor's widow who joined in the mortgage and was entitled to dower in the surplus proceeds of the sale of mortgaged property held entitled to redeem from the foreclosure sale.—Hiller v. Nelson (Ky.) 292.

§ 605. Where one entitled to redeem mortgaged property has paid over to the county clerk the full amount of the redemption money, it is the purchaser's duty to accept it, and the court should require her to do so if she refuses.—Hiller v. Nelson (Ky.) 292.

MOTIONS.

Relating to pleadings, see Pleading, § 364.

For particular purposes or relief.

Arrest of judgment in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 972, 974.

Change of venue in civil actions, see Venue, §§ 32, 71.

Dissolution of injunction, see Injunction, §§ 171, 172.

New trial in civil actions, see New Trial, §§ 119-151.

New trial in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 905-974.

Opening or setting aside default judgment, see Judgment, §§ 143, 170.

Presentation of objections for review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 193-237.

Quashing indictment or information, see Indictment and Information, § 140.

Quashing or vacating execution, see Execution, § 171.

Intersecting tracks.
Street railroads, see Street Railroads.
Water supply, see Waters and Water Courses, §§ 183-206.

I. CREATION, ALTERATION, EXISTENCE, AND DISSOLUTION.

(B) TERRITORIAL EXTENT AND SUBDIVISIONS, ANNEXATION, CONSOLIDATION, AND DIVISION.

§ 35. In action for death at railroad crossing, evidence tending to show ordinance including territory within city limits and exercise of municipal functions over the territory held admissible.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

§ 35. In action for death at railroad crossing, evidence held to show exercise of jurisdiction over place of accident by municipal corporation under color of law.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

§ 35. Right of municipal corporation to exercise functions of government over certain territory held not subject to collateral attack.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

II. GOVERNMENTAL POWERS AND FUNCTIONS IN GENERAL.

§ 57. A municipal corporation held authorized to exercise only such powers as are granted in express words, or are necessarily fairly implied in or incident to such as are expressly granted.—City of Chillicothe ex rel. Meek v. Henry (Mo. App.) 486.

V. OFFICERS, AGENTS, AND EMPLOYÉS.

Right of alderman to act as election judge, see Elections, § 51.

VII. CONTRACTS IN GENERAL.

§ 243. The board of trustees of a town cannot bind itself by parol.—Fiscal Court of Breckenridge County v. Board of Trustees of Town of Hardinsburg (Ky.) 298.

§ 247. An obligation in excess of $50, incurred by a town without complying with St. 1909, § 3699 (Russell's St. § 1698), held invalid and nonenforceable.—Fiscal Court of Breckenridge County v. Board of Trustees of Town of Hardinsburg (Ky.) 298.

IX. PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

(C) CONTRACTS.

§ 330. The selection by the board of public works of bricks of a particular manufacturer, to the exclusion of all others, held illegal.—Glennon v. Gates (Mo. App.) 98.

§ 362. The time stated in a contract for street improvements held to be of the essence of the contract, but that the city council may extend the time.—Jones v. Paul (Mo. App.) 521.

(E) ASSESSMENTS FOR BENEFITS, AND SPECIAL TAXES.

Priority of lien as against bona fide purchaser, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 233.

§ 414. The macadamizing on a street held under the evidence, reconstructed, and not merely repaired, rendering a division of the street into sections for assessment purpose, as re-

1900, pp. 8133, 8184), construed, and held to contemplate that the property to be charged with a street improvement is the property with its frontage on the street improved.—City of Chillicothe ex rel. Meek v. Henry (Mo. App.) 486.

§ 444. Under Ann. St. 1906, § 5859, it is an essential to the power to assess for street paving that plans and specifications for the work be on file with the city clerk when the contract is let.—Jones v. Plummer (Mo. App.) 109.

§ 450. Statement of what, under Ky. St. 1909, § 2833 (Russell's St. § 895), should be the assessment district for a street improvement.—Bullitt v. Gosnell (Ky.) 329.

§ 506. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 2984 (Russell's St. § 897), held, that error of the general council in laying off an assessment district for a street improvement could be corrected.—Bullitt v. Gosnell (Ky.) 329.

§ 511. Error in making an assessment district, under Ky. St. 1909, § 2833 (Russell's St. § 895), for a street improvement, held prejudicial.—Bullitt v. Gosnell (Ky.) 329.

§ 519. The court held without authority to postpone the lien of a contractor for a street improvement in favor of a subsequent purchaser, but the older equity must prevail.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

(F) ENFORCEMENT OF ASSESSMENTS AND SPECIAL TAXES.

§ 538. The presumption being that plans and specifications for street paving, etc., were on file with the city clerk when the contract was let, as required by Ann. St. 1906, § 5859, the burden is on one seeking to restrain the enforcement of tax bills issued in payment for the work to remove the presumption.—Jones v. Plummer (Mo. App.) 109.

§ 538. In an action to restrain the enforcement of tax bills issued in payment for street paving, certain testimony held insufficient to show that plans and specifications for the work were not on file with the city clerk when the contract was let as required by Ann. St. 1906, § 5859.—Jones v. Plummer (Mo. App.) 109.

§ 564. Laches held not to bar the right to enforce a lien for a street improvement as against a subsequent purchaser of the property.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

§ 567. The defense to an action to enforce the lien of a special tax bill for a street improvement that the power to impose a tax never existed is available under the general denial.—City of Chillicothe ex rel. Meek v. Henry (Mo. App.) 486.

§ 567. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 5986 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 3022), a petition on a special tax bill held not defective for failure to state facts showing the city's authority to pass the ordinance providing for the improvement in question.—Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Kihlberg Karlsbad Bath Co. (Mo. App.) 519.

XI. USE AND REGULATION OF PUBLIC PLACES, PROPERTY, AND WORKS.

(A) STREETS AND OTHER PUBLIC WAYS.

Acquisition of rights by prescription, see Easements, § 8.

§ 668. The rights of an abutting owner as to use of street stated.—Button v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 977.

§ 669. The court, in determining whether the obstruction of a street by an abutting owner improving his property is unreasonable, will give weight to the judgment of the city authorities and to the universal custom in the erection of buildings in cities.—Button v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 977.

§ 671. Evidence held to show title in plaintiff, entitling him to maintain action to remove building in street obstructing entrance to his premises.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

XII. TORTS.

(A) EXERCISE OF GOVERNMENTAL AND CORPORATE POWERS IN GENERAL.

§ 739. A city owning its own waterworks held not liable for failure to furnish sufficient water supply to extinguish a fire.—Greenville Water Co. v. Beckham (Tex. Civ. App.) 889.

(C) DEFECTS OR OBSTRUCTIONS IN STREETS AND OTHER PUBLIC WAYS.

§ 755. Duty of city stated as to keeping streets free from defects caused by itself or third persons.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 759. While the existence of sewer or water mains, a curb line established, or paving are evidence which may conclusively show acceptance of a dedication for street purposes, their absence or presence does not affect the city's liability for defects in the premises if they are shown to be a public street.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 762. Where street lamps and poles of public service corporations had been in existence for a long time on a strip of land claimed to be a public street, the city will be held to have acquiesced in such public use of the strip, whether they were so placed in strict accordance with city charter regulations or not.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 770. If a city negligently allowed water from a broken main to escape into the street, forming ice, which remained so long that the city had sufficient notice to have repaired the condition, it would be liable for an injury therefrom.—Town of Belleview v. England (Ky.) 994.

§ 803. A person using a city street must exercise such care for his own safety as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under the same or similar circumstances.—Town of Belleview v. England (Ky.) 994.

§ 807. If there are other ways safer than the one plaintiff travels, he will be negligent if, with knowledge of the conditions, he voluntarily assumes the more hazardous.—Town of Belleview v. England (Ky.) 994.

§ 818. In an action against a city for the death of a child caused by a defect in a street, evidence of subsequent repairs by the city held admissible as tending to show that the city recognized the locus as being in a public street.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 819. In an action for the death of a child drowned in a hole near a defective sidewalk, evidence held to show the city's negligence in maintaining the sidewalk, and that the negligence was the proximate cause of the death, if the sidewalk was in a public street.—Benton v. City of St. Louis (Mo.) 418.

§ 822. Evidence, in an action against a city for injuries from falling into a hole in a public street, held to make the question whether the street was reasonably safe for travel by persons using ordinary care one for the jury.—City of Latonia v. Ebenschweiger (Ky.) 946.

§ 822. In an action for injuries by a defect in a city street, the city held not prejudiced by the court's failure to charge that it was entitled to reasonable time to make needed repairs after knowledge of the defect.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Downey (Ky.) 284.

(D) DEFECTS OR OBSTRUCTIONS IN SEWERS, DRAINS, AND WATER COURSES.

§ 827. To hold a city liable for grading a street with insufficient culverts, obstructing the surface water, it is necessary to show that the work was directed by ordinance.—Gleason v. City of Kirksville (Mo. App.) 120.

XIII. FISCAL MANAGEMENT, PUBLIC DEBT, SECURITIES, AND TAXATION.

(D) TAXES AND OTHER REVENUE, AND APPLICATION THEREOF.

§ 978. A mortgage held not a sale or alienation within Ky. St. § 4021 (Russell's St. § 5913), relating to the right to enforce a lien on land for taxes notwithstanding a sale or alienation thereof.—Rissberger v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 319.

§ 978. Where a city's right to enforce a lien for taxes was barred under Ky. St. § 2515 (Russell's St. § 224), the mortgagee of the land could defeat an action by the city.—Rissberger v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 319.

§ 981. Under Houston City Charter (Sp. Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 147, c. 17), art. 3, § 8, an incumbrancer not made a party to a tax suit held to have the same right to redeem from the tax lien as he had before the tax sale.—Blair v. Guaranty Savings, Loan & Investment Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

§ 981. Houston City Charter (Sp. Acts 29th Leg. 1905, p. 149, c. 17) art. 3, § 11, requiring an owner redeeming from a tax sale to pay double the amount paid by the purchaser, held applicable solely to summary sales by the tax collector, and to have no application to a sale under a judgment of foreclosure of the tax lien, the procedure for which is prescribed by section 8.—Blair v. Guaranty Savings, Loan & Investment Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

§ 981. A purchaser at a tax sale made under certain provisions of a city charter held not liable to account for rents while in the possession to one subsequently held entitled to redeem from the tax lien.—Blair v. Guaranty Savings, Loan & Investment Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

MURDER.

See Homicide, §§ 7-23.

MUTILATION.

Of ballots, see Elections, § 190.

MUTUAL BENEFIT INSURANCE.

See Insurance, §§ 694-755.

Execution of chattel mortgage under assumed name, see Chattel Mortgages, § 150.
Of corporations, see Corporations, §§ 49, 56.

NAVIGABLE WATERS.

See Waters and Water Courses.

NEGLIGENCE.

Causing death, see Death, §§ 9-99.

Measure of damages, see Damages, § 95.

By particular classes of persons.

See Carriers, §§ 104-106, 110-137, 150, 169-185, 280-321; Municipal Corporations, §§ 739-827; Railroads, §§ 222-485.

Employers, see Master and Servant, §§ 85-296.
Telegraph or telephone companies, see Telegraphs and Telephones, §§ 31-74.

Condition or use of particular species of property, works, machinery, or other instrumentalities.

See Railroads, §§ 222-485; Street Railroads, §§ 69-118.

Production, supply, and use of gas, see Gas.

I. ACTS OR OMISSIONS CONSTITUTING NEGLIGENCE.

(A) PERSONAL CONDUCT IN GENERAL.

§ 2. The rule that if defendant knew, or by ordinary care might have known, of plaintiff's peril in time to avoid the accident by ordinary care, only applies where defendant has reason to expect persons to be in danger.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 3. "Utmost care" defined.—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.

§ 4. An instruction, in an action for injuries to a passenger, defining "ordinary care," held not erroneous.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ford (Tex. Civ. App.) 1137.

§ 6. The failure to perform a plain statutory duty resulting in injury to another is negligence.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Suter (Tex. Civ. App.) 215.

§ 15. If the concurrent negligence of different persons is the efficient cause of an injury, each of them is liable.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

(C) CONDITION AND USE OF LAND, BUILDINGS, AND OTHER STRUCTURES.

§ 32. Owners of a steamboat moored to a bank held not liable for death of a person boarding the boat to obtain employment, where he was not employed, and fell overboard and was drowned.—Cunningham v. Ayer & Lord Tie Co. (Ky.) 948.

II. PROXIMATE CAUSE OF INJURY.

§ 58. When a negligent act or omission is the proximate cause of an injury, stated.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 58. An injury is not actionable unless it is the natural, ordinary, and reasonable result of defendant's conduct.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Wiley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1127.

§ 60. A prior and remote cause doing nothing more than furnishing the condition or oc-

Appeal and Error, § 1199.
Of passenger, see Carriers, §§ 328-348.
Of servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 229-248, 274, 281, 296.
Of owner of live stock shipped, see Carriers, § 217.
Of person injured by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 282, 327, 330, 351, 381, 385.
Of person injured in operation of street railroad, see Street Railroads, § 98.
Of sender of telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 74.

(A) PERSONS INJURED IN GENERAL

§ 83. "Humanitarian doctrine" defined.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

IV. ACTIONS.

(B) EVIDENCE

§ 121. The rule of evidence as to the shifting of the burden of proof held not to create a presumption of negligence as against defendant.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rankin (Tex. Civ. App.) 823.

(C) TRIAL, JUDGMENT, AND REVIEW.

Instructions on contributory negligence, in action for injuries from failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 74.

§ 136. The question of negligence should be submitted to the jury, where the thing causing the injury is under defendant's management, and the accident is such as in the ordinary course of things does not happen if proper care is used.—Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Kowalski (Tex. Civ. App.) 829.

§ 136. Where duties are prescribed by statute, whether the question of negligence is one of law or of fact, stated.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 851.

§ 138. In an action for injuries to plaintiff by falling down an elevator shaft, an instruction held not misleading as authorizing a recovery, even if the only invitation given plaintiff to enter the shaft was that given when he entered the store.—Eilerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

§ 138. In an action for injuries, the refusal of an instruction as to plaintiff's defective eyesight held proper.—Eilerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

§ 139. In an action for injuries to plaintiff by falling down an elevator shaft, the refusal of an instruction distinguishing between the care required in the operation of freight and passenger elevators held not error.—Eilerman v. Farmer (Ky.) 289.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

See Bills and Notes.

NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE.

Ground for new trial in civil actions, see New Trial, §§ 102-108.

Ground for new trial in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 941.

NEW TRIAL.

Costs, see Costs, §§ 232-238.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 905-974.

II. GROUNDS.

(D) DISQUALIFICATION OR MISCONDUCT OF OR AFFECTING JURY.

§ 42. Where a juror had stated before trial that plaintiff ought to recover the full amount of his demand, but stated on his voir dire that he had formed or expressed no opinion on the merits, held reversible error to deny defendant's motion for a new trial.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

(G) SURPRISE, ACCIDENT, INADVERTENCE, OR MISTAKE.

§ 86. The denial of a new trial for unavoidable absence of defendant and his counsel held erroneous on the showing made.—Hargrove v. Cothran (Tex. Civ. App.) 177.

§ 97. A motion for a new trial on the ground of surprise held properly overruled.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

(H) NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE

§ 102. A motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is properly overruled where no excuse for not knowing of the witness sooner is shown.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

§ 103. Newly discovered evidence as to immaterial testimony in a former suit, held not ground for new trial.—Hermann v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 794.

§ 108. Newly discovered evidence which could have been given by numerous other persons held not ground for new trial.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

III. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE NEW TRIAL.

§ 119. Notwithstanding the statute, the judge trying the cause has the discretion to consider a motion for new trial filed more than two days after judgment.—Hargrove v. Cothran (Tex. Civ. App.) 177.

§ 140. Evidence on motion for new trial on the ground of prejudice by a juror held to show that the juror was prejudiced, so that defendant had not had a trial before a fair and impartial jury.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 150. A refusal of a new trial for lack of diligence in procuring the evidence on which the motion was based held not error.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

§ 151. A motion for a new trial held properly refused where the newly discovered witness give a counter affidavit qualifying the original so as to leave it of no probable importance, and the excuse for not sooner discovering the evidence is incredible.—Bond v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 867.

NEXT OF KIN.

See Descent and Distribution.

NONSUIT.

Before trial, see Dismissal and Nonsuit.

NOTES.

Promissory notes, see Bills and Notes.

Bona fide purchaser, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 229-232.
Surety, see Principal and Surety, § 139.

Of particular facts, acts, or proceedings not judicial.

See Mechanics' Liens, § 124.

Chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, § 150.
Election on question of issuing school district bond, see Schools and School Districts, § 97.
Loss insured against, see Insurance, §§ 538-561.
Special damages to shipper from loss of or injury to goods, see Carriers, § 135.
Termination of tenancy, see Landlord and Tenant, § 116.

To refuse payment of check, see Banks and Banking, § 333.

Of particular judicial proceedings.

Action or process, see Process, § 87.
Appeal, see Appeal and Error, § 401.

NUISANCE

Wrongful operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 222.

I. PRIVATE NUISANCES.

(A) NATURE OF INJURY, AND LIABILITY THEREFOR.

§ 10. One not originally responsible for the erection of a nuisance is not liable for its continuance, in the absence of notice or request to abate it.—Gleason v. City of Kirksville (Mo. App.) 120.

(C) ABATEMENT AND INJUNCTION.

§ 23. Injury to the business of keeping a hotel occasioned by a nuisance held susceptible to ascertainment and satisfaction in money so that an injunction would not lie to restrain the nuisance.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. De Groff (Tex.) 134.

II. PUBLIC NUISANCES.

(A) NATURE OF INJURY, AND LIABILITY THEREFOR.

§ 61. Peddling on the streets is not necessarily a nuisance in itself.—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.

OATH.

Of juror, see Jury, § 149.

Of jurors in criminal prosecutions, necessity of objection for purpose of review, see Criminal Law, § 1035.

Of jurors in criminal prosecutions, presumptions on appeal, see Criminal Law, § 1144.

OBLIGATION OF CONTRACT.

Laws impairing, see Constitutional Law, § 137.

OFFER.

Of proof, see Trial, §§ 41-105.

OFFICERS.

Particular classes of officers.

See District and Prosecuting Attorneys; Justices of the Peace.

Bank officers, see Banks and Banking, § 102.
Corporate officers, see Corporations, §§ 281, 432.
Election officers, see Elections, § 51.

In civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 471-570.
In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 478, 534.

OPINIONS.

Of courts, see Courts, §§ 89-116.

ORAL CONTRACTS.

Authority of board of trustees of municipality to make, see Municipal Corporations, § 243.
By fiscal court, validity, see Counties, § 121.

ORDER OF PROOF.

At trial, see Trial, § 61.

ORDERS.

Review of appealable orders, see Appeal and Error.

Declaring result of election on question of removing county seat, see Counties, § 35.

Election to determine question of establishment of graded school, see Schools and School Districts, § 42.

PARENT AND CHILD.

See Guardian and Ward; Infants.

Declarations as to birth or pedigree, see Evidence, §§ 285, 288.

§ 3. A parent is bound by positive law to protect, educate, and support the child.—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

§ 5. A parent is entitled to the earnings of the child during minority.—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

§ 5. A father's right to a child's earnings may be surrendered by a failure to provide the child a home, by ill treatment, neglect, or cruel conduct, by becoming dissolute and degraded, or by emancipation.—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

§ 6. An employer of a nonemancipated minor, when sued by the father for the minor's wages, is entitled to have deducted the amount paid by the minor for board and clothes not furnished by the father.—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

§ 16. "Emancipation" defined.—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

§ 16. Delay of a parent held so great as to bar his right to revoke an implied emancipation of his minor son.—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

PAROL AGREEMENTS.

Authority of board of trustees of municipality to make, see Municipal Corporations, § 243.
By fiscal court, validity, see Counties, § 121.

PAROL EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 400-442.
In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 429.

PARTIES.

Death ground for abatement, see Abatement and Revival, § 58.

Domicile or residence as affecting venue, see Venue, §§ 21-26.

New parties in mandamus, see Mandamus, § 153.

In actions by or against particular classes of persons.

See Partnership, § 199.

Trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 299.

In particular actions or proceedings.

For causing death, see Death, § 42.

Foreclosure, see Mortgages, § 427.

Intervention by trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 156.

On bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 460.

Judgment and relief as to parties, and parties affected by judgments or proceedings thereon.

See Judgment, § 235.

Collateral attack on judgment, see Judgment, §§ 518, 521.

Persons concluded by judgment, see Judgment, § 675.

Review as to parties, and parties to proceedings in appellate courts.

Parties entitled to allege error, see Appeal and Error, § 382.

To conveyances, contracts, or other transactions.

See Fraudulent Conveyances, § 172; Usury, §§ 100-117.

I. PLAINTIFFS.

(A) PERSONS WHO MAY OR MUST SUE.

Attorney's lien in action by taxpayer on behalf of taxpayers of county, see Attorney and Client, § 182.

§ 6. Plaintiff held the real party in interest so as to entitle her to bring an action to quiet title, etc.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

II. DEFENDANTS.

(B) JOINDER.

In action to quiet title, see Quieting Title, § 30.
On intervention by trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 156.

III. NEW PARTIES AND CHANGE OF PARTIES.

In action for dissolution and accounting of partnership, see Partnership, § 322.

Intervention by trustee in bankruptcy in action involving property or right of bankrupt, see Bankruptcy, § 156.

Review of rulings as dependent on presentation of questions in record, see Appeal and Error, § 500.

§ 52. A pleading asking that defendant's agent be made a party held too late.—Dayton Lumber Co. v. Stockdale (Tex. Civ. App.) 805.

V. DEFECTS, OBJECTIONS, AND AMENDMENT.

§ 92. An objection to two counts for misjoinder of parties defendant should be made by special demurrer, as authorized by Rev. St. 1899, § 598 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 624), and not by motion to elect.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

PARTITION.

II. ACTIONS FOR PARTITION.

(A) RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

§ 13. On the death of a wife, her children are entitled to a partition of community land.—Massie v. Massie (Tex. Civ. App.) 219.

§ 21. An equitable proceeding by partition of land devised by a will held governed by Rev.

St. 1899, §§ 4383, 4650 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 2415, 2418).—Stewart v. Jones (Mo.) 1.

(B) PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.

Right to jury trial, see Jury, § 14.

§ 53. On an intervening petition in partition to enforce a charge on land for support, a decree held to have properly appointed a receiver to rent the land, and, after paying charges and providing for petitioner's support, to pay the remainder to parties interested, with an alternative provision for a sale.—Webster v. Cadwallader (Ky.) 327.

§ 55. A proceeding held to be in effect a proceeding for equitable partition.—Stewart v. Jones (Mo.) 1.

§ 95. A judgment in partition should be so specific as to show on its face without the aid of the pleadings the land intended to be partitioned.—Massie v. Massie (Tex. Civ. App.) 219.

PARTNERSHIP.

I. THE RELATION.

(B) AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

§ 34. Liability as a partner, by holding out as such to third persons where no partnership in fact exists, is imposed, on the theory that by his conduct persons dealing with the purported partner were led to believe that a partnership existed.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 34. Matters leading one to believe that a partnership existed must have occurred before such belief was formed and acted upon, in order to create a partnership liability by estoppel.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 41. By the laws of Iowa the stockholders of a corporation which continues to do business after its charter has expired cannot be held as partners in the absence of a statute imposing such liability.—Wasson v. Boland (Mo. App.) 663.

(C) EVIDENCE.

§ 48. In an action against defendants for work claimed to have been done for them as partners, a contract by one of them with the others held admissible to explain his connection with them and show that he was not a partner.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 56. Evidence held not to show a defendant a partner of codefendants, or that he held himself out to plaintiff to be such.—Gillespie v. Beedy (Mo. App.) 513.

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

(A) REPRESENTATION OF FIRM BY PARTNER.

Notice of defenses to check, see Bills and Notes, § 333.

§ 157. A partner who has given the firm's note to pay his individual debt cannot alone ratify it so as to make it binding on the firm.—Blake v. Third Nat. Bank (Mo.) 641.

§ 157. The manager of a private bank conducted by a partnership cannot ratify a note given by a partner in the firm name to pay his individual debt.—Blake v. Third Nat. Bank (Mo.) 641.

(C) APPLICATION OF ASSETS TO LIABILITIES.

§ 181. A partner cannot apply assets of the firm to his individual debt, irrespective of charge thereof out of firm assets was a fraud upon the firm, rendering the person receiving payment liable to return the amount thereof.—Blake v. Third Nat. Bank (Mo.) 641.

§ 186. The claim of the owner of goods transferred to a person subsequently entering a partnership held not to be a partnership liability.—Holder v. Shelby (Tex. Civ. App.) 590.

(D) ACTIONS BY OR AGAINST FIRMS OR PARTNERS.

§ 199. In a suit to collect a debt due to a firm, all partners in interest, except dormant partners, are necessary parties plaintiff.—Allen v. Fleck (Tex. Civ. App.) 176.

§ 216. A partner suing on a firm claim, and alleging that his copartner had transferred his interest in the claim to him, must prove such transfer.—Allen v. Fleck (Tex. Civ. App.) 176.

VII. DISSOLUTION, SETTLEMENT, AND ACCOUNTING.

(A) CAUSES OF DISSOLUTION.

§ 273. Exclusion of a partner from participation in the management and profits of a partnership held ground for dissolution.—Holder v. Shelby (Tex. Civ. App.) 590.

(B) RIGHTS, POWERS, AND LIABILITIES AFTER DISSOLUTION.

§ 279. The dissolution of a partnership held not available as a defense in an action by the partnership.—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Miller & Harris (Ky.) 376.

§ 279. Where both partners are liable on a contract, the dissolution of the firm will not terminate the contract.—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Miller & Harris (Ky.) 376.

(D) ACTIONS FOR DISSOLUTION AND ACCOUNTING.

§ 322. In an action to dissolve a partnership and to appoint a receiver, intervention by partnership creditors held authorized.—Holder v. Shelby (Tex. Civ. App.) 590.

§ 325. A partner excluded from participation in the management of the partnership affairs held entitled to have a receiver appointed.—Holder v. Shelby (Tex. Civ. App.) 590.

PARTY WALLS.

§ 5. A deed construed to confer on the grantor a perpetual easement in a party wall, erected by the grantee.—Frisbie v. Bigham Masonic Lodge No. 256 (Ky.) 359.

§ 5. Evidence held to show that parties to a party wall contract believed that the contract was not terminated by the destruction of the original buildings.—Frisbie v. Bigham Masonic Lodge No. 256 (Ky.) 359.

PASSENGERS.

See Carriers, §§ 246-384.

PASSES.

Act forbidding carriers to give interstate free transportation for passengers, see Carriers, § 23.

PATENTS.

For public lands, see Mines and Minerals, § 49.

Of particular classes of obligations or liabilities. See Bills and Notes, § 527; Chattel Mortgages, § 235; Insurance, § 598; Mortgages, § 298. Price of land sold, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 168-184. Taxes, see Taxation, § 529.

I. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY.

Medium of payment of wages, see Master and Servant, § 79.

IV. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, TRIAL, AND REVIEW.

§ 59. Payment cannot be shown in defense of an action unless pleaded by defendant.—Rutherford v. Gaines (Tex. Civ. App.) 866.

PEDDLERS.

See Hawkers and Peddlers.

PEDIGREE.

Declarations as evidence, see Evidence, §§ 285, 288.

PENAL STATUTES.

Construction in general, see Statutes, § 241.

PENALTIES.

Under contracts, see Damages, § 80.

For particular acts or omissions.

Failure of railroad company to furnish information required by railroad commission, see Railroads, §§ 6, 9.

Failure or refusal of carrier to furnish shipping facilities or means of transportation, see Carriers, § 20.

Nonpayment of tax, see Taxation, § 848.

Violation of regulations by carrier, see Carriers, § 2.

Violations of usury laws, see Usury, §§ 138-146.

PENS.

Care required of carrier as to furnishing of cattle pens, see Carriers, § 210.

Liability of carrier for placing stock in infected pen, see Carriers, §§ 215, 217, 228.

PERCOLATING WATERS.

See Waters and Water Courses, § 107.

PERFORMANCE.

Of contract, see Contracts, § 280.

Of contract of sale, see Sales, §§ 150-181; Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 129-184.

PERISHABLE PROPERTY.

Care required of carrier, see Carriers, §§ 117, 134.

Contributory negligence of shipper, see Carriers, § 121.

Duties and liabilities of carriers, see Carriers, §§ 110, 134.

PERSONAL INJURIES.

Particular causes or means of injury.

See Assault and Battery, §§ 3-43; Negligence.

Failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 67.

Particular classes of persons injured.

Employé, see Master and Servant, §§ 85-296.
Passenger, see Carriers, §§ 280-321.
Person on or near railroad tracks, see Railroads, §§ 355-401.
Traveler on highway, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 755-822.

Remedies.

Measure of damages, see Damages, § 95.

PETITION.

In pleading, see Pleading, § 49.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

As evidence, see Evidence, § 359.
Judicial notice of correctness of X-ray photographs, see Evidence, § 9.
Photographs used as exhibits as part of record, on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 597, 655.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

Expert testimony in action for malpractice, see Evidence, § 506.

§ 18. Plaintiff, in an action for malpractice, held entitled to recover on proving one of the acts of negligence alleged, though failing to prove another act of negligence alleged.—Sameuls v. Willis (Ky.) 339.

§ 18. In an action for malpractice, the court properly submitted the case on the issue of negligence, alleged in the original petition, notwithstanding the allegations in an amended petition.—Sameuls v. Willis (Ky.) 339.

§ 18. In an action for malpractice, the question whether defendant exercised proper care held for the jury.—Sameuls v. Willis (Ky.) 339.

§ 18. A verdict for plaintiff in an action for malpractice held not excessive.—Sameuls v. Willis (Ky.) 339.

PICTURES.

As evidence, see Evidence, § 359.

PIPES.

Prescriptive right to maintain water pipes in street, see Easements, § 8.

PLACE.

Of delivery of shipment, see Carriers, § 84.

PLEA.

In civil actions, see Pleading, §§ 79-121.

PLEADING.

Amendment of pleadings, effect on limitations, see Limitation of Actions, § 127.
Applicability of instructions to pleadings, see Trial, §§ 251-253.
Conformity of judgment to pleadings, see Judgment, §§ 249-251.

Allegations as to particular facts, acts, or transactions.

See Damages, §§ 143, 158; Judgment, § 949; Payment, § 59; Statutes, §§ 279-281.
Statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, § 150.

In particular actions or proceedings.

See Divorce, § 104; False Imprisonment, § 20; Libel and Slander, § 93; Partition, § 55; Quieting Title, §§ 39, 40; Trespass to Try Title, § 33; Trover and Conversion, § 32; Work and Labor, § 22.

For breach of contract, see Contracts, §§ 338, 346; Sales, § 413.

Foreclosure, see Mortgages, § 445.

For ejection of passenger as intruder, see Carriers, § 380.

For failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 65.

For injuries caused by obstruction of highway, see Highways, § 184.

For injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 344, 345.

For injuries caused by operation of street railroad, see Street Railroads, § 111.

For injuries to passenger, see Carriers, § 314.

For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 256-264.

For loss of or injuries to live stock shipment, see Carriers, § 227.

For loss of or injuries to shipment, see Carriers, § 131.

For malpractice, see Physicians and Surgeons, § 18.

Indictment or criminal information or complaint, see Indictment and Information.

On bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 489.

On injunction bond, see Injunction, § 250.

To cancel written instrument, see Cancellation of Instruments, §§ 39-43.

To establish lost instrument, see Lost Instruments, § 7.

To establish or enforce right of exemption, see Exemptions, § 147.

To recover taxes paid, see Taxation, § 643.

To set aside fraudulent conveyances, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 263, 269.

Review of decisions and pleading in appellate courts.

Consideration of unsworn answer on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 837.

Harmless error in rulings on, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1039-1043.

Questions presented for review as to rulings on, see Appeal and Error, § 679.

Review of discretionary rulings on, see Appeal and Error, § 959.

Review of rulings on as dependent on presentation in lower court of grounds of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 193-197.

I. FORM AND ALLEGATIONS IN GENERAL.

§ 8. A petition in an action for false imprisonment held not to show that the warrant under which plaintiff was arrested was illegally issued.—Schooler v. Yancey (Ky.) 940.

§ 8. A petition in an action for false imprisonment held insufficient.—Schooler v. Yancey (Ky.) 940.

§ 8. Allegation of a complaint in an action for conversion of property held merely a conclusion of the pleader.—Lindale Brick Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 568.

§ 32. Date of a contract held to be pleaded.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

II. DECLARATION, COMPLAINT, PETITION, OR STATEMENT.

Complaint in foreclosure, see Mortgages, § 445.
Petition in action for injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 256-257.

§ 49. The character of an action is determined from the express averments of the petition.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 49. A petition held to declare on a written contract of sale of buildings on the grounds of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and to adopt the theory that defendant thereby undertook to clear them away and bring the site back into a state of nature, as the German government and plaintiff had agreed to do.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

III. PLEA OR ANSWER, CROSS-COMPLAINT, AND AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE.

Consideration of unsworn answer on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 837.
In suit to cancel written instruments, see Cancellation of Instruments, § 39.

(A) DEFENSES IN GENERAL.

§ 79. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 604 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 631), defendant is entitled to but one answer which must contain all his matter of defense and counterclaim.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

(B) DILATORY PLEAS AND MATTER IN ABATEMENT.

§ 106. A plea in abatement held not to present the question of the pendency of another suit on the same cause of action.—Holland v. Western Bank & Trust Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 218.

(C) TRAVERSES OR DENIALS AND ADMISSIONS.

§ 121. A denial of knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief is not a good plea as to the facts within defendant's knowledge.—Kentucky Coal Mining Co. v. Mattingly (Ky.) 350.

IV. REPLICATION OR REPLY AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS.

§ 180. Plaintiff must recover, if at all, on the cause of action stated in the petition, and not on one stated in the reply.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

V. DEMURRER OR EXCEPTION.

§ 192. A defect in a pleading arising from its failure to contain a sufficiently definite statement of the cause of action relied on can only be reached by a motion to make more definite and certain, and not by demurrer.—Greer v. Strozler (Ark.) 400.

§ 205. A general demurrer to a petition in intervention filed by a trustee in bankruptcy, claiming an estate created by will, questions the sufficiency of the petition to show that testator died before the adjudication in bankruptcy.—Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 377.

§ 214. The allegations of the complaint must be taken as true on a demurrer thereto.—Greer v. Strozler (Ark.) 400.

§ 218. Under Kirby's Dig. § 6137, a court rendering a decree granting the relief prayed for on overruling a demurrer to the complaint cannot award damages without proof thereof.—Greer v. Strozler (Ark.) 400.

VI. AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS AND REPLEADER.

Effect of abatement of original action on new cause of action set up by amendment, see Abatement and Revival, § 58.

§ 248. In an action under Rev. St. 1899, §§ 3431, 3432 (Ann. St. 1906, pp. 1969, 1970), an amended petition held to be a departure from the original petition, and that it was error to allow recovery under both petitions.—Jones v. Whitney (Mo. App.) 1180.

§ 258. Court held to have acted within its discretion in denying a trial amendment to an answer stating same defense.—Freasier v. Harrison (Mo. App.) 108.

§ 279. A supplemental petition filed in reply to the answer is a part of the pleadings, though a subsequent amendment to the original petition is presented.—Hicks v. Stewart & Templeton (Tex. Civ. App.) 206.

VII. SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION.

Consideration of unsworn answer on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 837.

§ 291. Evidence tending to show that a broker signed a contract without authority may be introduced, though the execution of the contract is not denied under oath.—Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 194.

VIII. PROPERT, OYER, AND EXHIBITS.

Exhibits as part of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 510.

XI. MOTIONS.

§ 364. Refusal to strike matter from an answer as immaterial held not error, where, in view of an issue of ratification raised by the answer, it did not then appear immaterial.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

XII. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE.

In particular actions or proceedings.

For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, § 264.

For malpractice, see Physicians and Surgeons, § 18.

On bill or note, see Bills and Notes, § 489.

To cancel written instrument, see Cancellation of Instruments, § 43.

§ 376 Where the answer pleads the entire statute on which the action is founded, and the reply admits the truthfulness of such plea, the entire statute is before the court.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

§ 380. Evidence, in an action to recover possession of property, held admissible to show that defendants were not innocent purchasers.—Parlin & Orendorff Co. v. Glover (Tex. Civ. App.) 731.

XIII. DEFECTS AND OBJECTIONS, WAIVER, AND AID BY VERDICT OR JUDGMENT.

§ 403. The defect in a pleading held cured by another pleading authorizing the relief awarded.—Wright v. Hooker (Tex. Civ. App.) 765.

§ 408. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 93, a defendant answering to the merits before having his general demurrer to the petition disposed of held not to waive the defects in the petition.—Schooler v. Yancey (Ky.) 940.

§ 409. A defendant going to trial on his cross-complaint without insisting on an answer, and treating the allegations thereof as having been made issues in the cause, waives the filing of an answer.—West v. Burkes (Ark.) 397.

§ 409. A failure to object to an immaterial allegation in an answer or the admission of testimony in support thereof held not to render it material.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

§ 420. An objection to a petition held waived by answering and proceeding to trial.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 433. An objection that a petition fails to state a cause of action held to relate to its sufficiency after verdict, where defendant answers and goes to trial.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

§ 433. Petition, in an action against the carrier for injuries to a passenger, held to sufficiently allege knowledge of defendant's servants that plaintiff was in the act of alighting from the car when the car was started.—Jones v. Springfield Traction Co. (Mo. App.) 675.

PLEDGES.

§ 58. One held the legal owner of a note entitled to sue the maker and the independent executrix of the deceased payee on his indorsement of the note.—Goodwin & McFarland v. Burton (Tex. Civ. App.) 587.

POLICY.

Of insurance, see Insurance.

POLITICAL RIGHTS.

Suffrage, see Elections.

POLLUTION.

Of subterranean waters, see Waters and Water Courses, § 107.

POSSESSION.

See Adverse Possession.

POWERS.

Creation by will, see Wills, §§ 681, 693.
Of attorney, see Principal and Agent.

PRACTICE.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.
See Divorce, §§ 104, 197; Habeas Corpus, § 113; Mandamus, §§ 153-164; Trespass to Try Title, §§ 25-47; Trover and Conversion, § 32.

Particular proceedings in actions.

See Abatement and Revival; Appearance; Costs; Damages, §§ 143-228; Depositions; Dismissal and Nonsuit; Evidence; Execution; Judgment; Judicial Sales; Jury; Limitation of Actions; Parties; Pleading; Process; Reference; Removal of Causes; Stipulations; Trial; Venue.

Verdict, see Trial, § 352.

Particular remedies in or incident to actions.
See Attachment; Garnishment; Injunction; Sequestration; Tender.

Procedure in criminal prosecutions.

See Bail, §§ 56-77; Criminal Law.

For offenses against liquor laws, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 233.

Procedure in exercise of special or limited jurisdiction.

In equity, see Equity.

In justices' courts, see Justices of the Peace, §§ 73-135.

Procedure in or by particular courts or tribunals.
See Courts.

Procedure on review.

See Appeal and Error; Exceptions, Bill of; Justices of the Peace, §§ 141, 174; New Trial.

PREFERENCES.

Effect of proceedings in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 188.

Granted by carrier, see Carriers, §§ 13, 32.

PREJUDICE.

Ground for reversal in civil actions, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1027-1074.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

See Injunction, § 145.

PREMIUMS.

For insurance, see Insurance, § 183.

PRESCRIPTION.

Acquisition of easement, see Easements, § 5.

Acquisition of rights, see Adverse Possession, §§ 8, 13.

PRESUMPTIONS.

As to jurisdiction of court, see Courts, § 35.

In civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 66-83.

In criminal prosecutions, see Homicide, § 146.

In favor of constitutionality of statute, see Constitutional Law, § 48.

On appeal or error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 907-939.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

See Mercantile Agencies, § 1.

Admissions by agent, see Evidence, §§ 241-253.

Agency in particular relations, offices, or occupations.

See Attorney and Client; Brokers.

Agency of partner for firm, see Partnership, § 157.

Corporate agents, see Corporations, §§ 281, 432.

I. THE RELATION.

(A) CREATION AND EXISTENCE.

§ 23. Evidence held to show that a person to whom plaintiffs had delivered an account against third persons, and who had promised to pay it, was not acting as agent of defendants.—Mitchell v. Chick (Mo. App.) 517.

§ 24. Evidence held to raise a presumption of fact that a power of attorney was executed, warranting the submission of the question to the jury.—Loughridge v. Ball (Ky.) 321.

(B) TERMINATION.

§ 43. If a person who had authorized another as his agent to convey land died before the agent executed a deed therefor, his death revoked the agent's authority, and his subsequent deed was void, and conveyed no title.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

II. MUTUAL RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

(A) EXECUTION OF AGENCY.

§ 69. An agent's contract held not a fraud on his principal because of the agent's interest in property used by the contractor.—Dayton Lumber Co. v. Stockdale (Tex. Civ. App.) 805.

§ 71. Where defendant, plaintiff's agent for the purchase of land, fraudulently induced plaintiff to pay a certain price therefor, defendant

§ 81. An action against an agent and damages through deceit, plaintiff held entitled to go to the jury on the questions of the existence of a confidential relation between him and defendant, and of the fraudulent breach of the duties of that relation.—Clinkscales v. Clark (Mo. App.) 1182.

(B) COMPENSATION AND LIEN OF AGENT.

§ 82. Compensation allowed to agent having care of realty held excessive.—Nickell v. Nickell (Ky.) 966.

III. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

(A) POWERS OF AGENT.

§ 119. Where a deed in person's chain of title to land was void because the authority of the agent of the owner, who executed it had been revoked by the owner's death, the agent's authority to convey could not be presumed from mere lapse of time.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

§ 121. The testimony of an agent in an action by a third person against the principal as to the extent of his agency is admissible on such issue.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 136. Where agents contracted for the sale of property agreeing to accept as a first payment an assignment of an account against a third person, as cash, the contract to be subject to approval of their principal, and the principal refused to ratify it, the agents were not obliged to repay to the purchaser the face of the account, but only to return the account itself.—Mitchell v. Chick (Mo. App.) 517.

(C) UNAUTHORIZED AND WRONGFUL ACTS.

§ 159. A principal is not responsible for the personal malice of his agent.—Little v. Rich (Tex. Civ. App.) 1077.

(E) NOTICE TO AGENT.

§ 179. Where an agent of the payee of a note received a payment from the maker with knowledge of the insolvency of the maker, the payee was chargeable therewith, though the agent learned of the maker's insolvency prior to the beginning of his agency.—Wright v. Hooker (Tex. Civ. App.) 765.

§ 180. Rule that a principal is chargeable with notice of facts known to his agent held not to apply if an agent sold to his principal land in which he had an interest which would likely lead him to conceal his knowledge.—La Brie v. Cartwright (Tex. Civ. App.) 785.

(F) ACTIONS.

§ 195. Parties held not entitled as matter of law to a judgment upon facts found by the jury.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

Liabilities of sureties on injunction bond, see Injunction, §§ 250, 252.
Liabilities of sureties on bail bond, see Bail.
Liabilities on bonds for performance of duties of trust or office, see Trusts, § 378.

I. CREATION AND EXISTENCE OF RELATION.

(A) BETWEEN INDIVIDUALS.

§ 26. A party who cashed a negotiable note for the maker held not entitled to recover against § 59. A contract of a surety must be construed, like any other contract, according to the intention of the parties.—Chicago Crayon Co. v. McNamara (Mo. App.) 118.

§ 59. Where a contract is susceptible of two constructions, the one most favorable to the secured party should be adopted, if consistent with the object for which the bond is given.—Chicago Crayon Co. v. McNamara (Mo. App.) 118.

III. DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

§ 100. Failure of parties to a building contract to sign agreed changes indorsed on the contract held not to release the surety on the contractor's bond.—Illinois Surety Co. v. Garrard Hotel Co. (Ky.) 967.

§ 117. Where a contractor's bond obligated the surety to protect the owner from liens, the owner was entitled, in good faith, to discharge debts that might have been asserted as liens against the property.—Illinois Surety Co. v. Garrard Hotel Co. (Ky.) 967.

IV. REMEDIES OF CREDITORS.

§ 139. Under a building contract and a contractor's bond, notice of default in the completion of the building held given the surety on the bond in time.—Illinois Surety Co. v. Garrard Hotel Co. (Ky.) 967.

PRIORITIES.

Of mortgages, see Chattel Mortgages, § 150.

PRIVATE NUISANCES.

See Nuisance, §§ 10, 23.

PRIVATE ROADS.

Rights of way, see Easements.

PRIVILEGE.

Of married women, see Husband and Wife, § 69½.
Of witness as to testimony, see Witnesses, §§ 301-309.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.

Defamatory communications, see Libel and Slander, § 45.

PRIVITY.

Admissions by privies, see Evidence, § 230.

PROBABLE CAUSE.

For prosecution, see Malicious Prosecution, § 25.

PROBATE.

Of will, see Wills, §§ 300-354.

PROCEDURE.

See cross-references under Practice.

PROCESS.

Effect of appearance, see Appearance.
Necessity of summoning infant defendant before appointment of guardian ad litem, see Infants, § 80.
To sustain judgment, see Judgment, § 17.

In particular actions or proceedings.
On appeal, see Appeal and Error, § 401.
On insurance policy, see Insurance, § 620.

Particular forms of writs or other process.
See Arrest; Execution; Garnishment; Injunction; Mandamus; Sequestration.

I. NATURE, ISSUANCE, REQUISITES, AND VALIDITY.

§ 1. The office of a summons is to bring the defendant to whom it is directed into court to answer plaintiff's petition.—Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Mansur (Mo. App.) 1193.

§ 45. An alias summons is issued when the original summons has not produced its effect because defective in form or manner of service, and, when issued and served, the second writ supersedes the first, and defects in the first cannot be pleaded in abatement of the second.—Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Mansur (Mo. App.) 1193.

§ 45. Where, after original summons was served, defendant did not appear, and the court made an order of record that an alias summons issue, and no alias summons was issued nor the order set aside, the court had no jurisdiction to hear the case on the original service.—Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Mansur (Mo. App.) 1193.

II. SERVICE.

(C) PUBLICATION OR OTHER NOTICE.

§ 87. Personal service having been obtained on a resident beneficiary association in a suit to restrain a merger with a foreign association, and the resident society's assets being impounded by injunction, the court acquired jurisdiction, though the nonresident society was served by publication only.—Knapp v. Supreme Commandery, United Order of the Golden Cross of the World (Tenn.) 390.

PROFANE LANGUAGE.

See Blasphemy.

PROHIBITION.

Of traffic in intoxicating liquors, see Intoxicating Liquors.

PROMISSORY NOTES.

See Bills and Notes.

PROOF.

Of loss insured against, see Insurance, §§ 538-561.

PROPERTY.

Constitutional guaranties of rights of property, see Constitutional Law, §§ 297, 303.

Particular species of property.

See Mines and Minerals.

Logs or lumber, see Logs and Logging.

Transfers and other matters affecting title.

See Adverse Possession.

Best and secondary evidence as to title, see Evidence, § 158.

Dedication to public use, see Dedication.

Taking for public use, see Eminent Domain.

PROPOSITIONS.

In briefs under assignment of errors, see Appeal and Error, § 742.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

See District and Prosecuting Attorneys.

PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY.

In civil action, see Trial, §§ 191-200.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 753-763.

PROVOCATION.

For homicide, see Homicide, §§ 43, 295.

PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Direct or remote consequences of injury, see Damages, §§ 20-54.

Of injury, see Negligence, §§ 58, 60.

Of injury from telephone pole on highway, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 15.

Proximate or remote consequences of injury from failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 67.

PUBLICATION.

Service of process, see Process, § 87.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

See Counties, §§ 104, 108.

Liens for construction of, see Mechanics' Liens, § 13.

PUBLIC DEBT.

See Counties, § 196; Municipal Corporations, §§ 978, 981; Schools and School Districts, §§ 97-103.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

By municipalities, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 330-567.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Mineral lands, see Mines and Minerals, § 49.

II. SURVEY AND DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF UNITED STATES.

(F) SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS.

Right of dower in land dedicated for county seat before conveyance to husband of claimant, see Dower, § 12.

III. DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF THE STATES.

Certified copies of transfer of lease of school lands as evidence, see Evidence, § 342.

§ 173. Under Laws 1905, p. 160, c. 103, § 2, an application for the purchase of school land before the date fixed by the Land Commissioner for such sale is void.—Fine v. Robison (Tex.) 126.

§ 175. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4269, construed to mean that the calls in a survey of school lands will not be affected by mistakes of the surveyor as to distances.—Lewright v. Travis County (Tex. Civ. App.) 725.

§ 178. A transfer of a lease of public lands is authorized to be filed in the land office, without being acknowledged by the grantor or recorded in the county where the land is.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1135.

PUBLIC NUISANCES.

See Nuisance, § 61.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

See Schools and School Districts, §§ 13-103.

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

See Carriers; Railroads; Street Railroads; Telegraphs and Telephones.

Gas companies, see Gas.

Water companies, see Waters and Water Courses, §§ 183-206.

PUBLIC USE.

Dedication of property, see Dedication.

Taking property for public use, see Eminent Domain.

PUBLIC WATER SUPPLY.

See Waters and Water Courses, §§ 183-206.

PUNISHMENT.

For violation of injunction, see Injunction, § 219.

QUALIFICATION.

Of voters, see Elections, § 60.

QUANTUM MERUIT.

See Work and Labor.

QUARANTINE.

Regulations as to animals, effect on liability of carrier, see Carriers, § 215.

QUASHING.

Attachment, see Attachment, §§ 228, 232.

Execution, see Execution, § 171.

Indictment or information, see Indictment and Information, § 140

QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In civil actions, see Trial, §§ 139-143.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 753-763; Homicide § 268.

QUIETING TITLE.

I. RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

§ 7. Complainant in a suit to quiet title held entitled to question whether an extension of time to remove timber had been given.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 10. In an action to quiet title, plaintiff must succeed, if at all, on the strength of his own title, and not on the weakness of defendant's title.—McMillan v. Morgan (Ark.) 407.

II. PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.

Conformity of judgment to issues, see Judgment, § 251.

Real party in interest, see Parties, § 6.

§ 30. A corporation to whom plaintiff's husband had contracted to sell land held properly joined as a defendant in an action to quiet title and restore a lost deed to the land.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 39. In an action to quiet title, an allegation held not sufficient to support a judgment for defendant.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

tiff to land claimed to have been purchased and paid for by plaintiff's husband, and title taken in the name of defendant's ancestor, proof of facts showing the resulting trust and that plaintiff's husband had been in possession for 21 years was sufficient, without showing that plaintiff was in possession when the action was begun.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 52. In an action to quiet title held not error not to mention defendant's cross-bill in the final decree.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

RAILINGS.

Injuries to passenger caused by railing near track of street railroad, see Carriers, § 317.

RAILROADS.

See Street Railroads.

As employers, see Master and Servant.

Carriage of goods and passengers, see Carriers.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION IN GENERAL.

§ 6. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4571, imposing a penalty for the failure of a railroad company or its officers to furnish information required by the Railroad Commission, is highly penal and must be strictly construed.—State v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 736.

§ 9. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4571, imposing a penalty for the failure of a railroad company or its officers to furnish information requested by the Railroad Commission, construed, and held that the commission must furnish blanks calling for the information desired.—State v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 736.

IV. LOCATION OF ROAD, TERMINI, AND STATIONS.

Legality of contract by section foreman to procure switch track to be constructed at a specified place, see Contracts, § 108.

VI. CONSTRUCTION, MAINTENANCE, AND EQUIPMENT.

Assumption by judge as to facts in instructions in action for injuries from failure to maintain proper culverts, see Trial, § 191.

Right of purchaser of land to sue for injuries caused by diversion of water by railroad prior to purchase, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 218.

§ 113. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4436, the duty of a railroad to maintain culverts necessary for proper drainage held absolute, and not merely to exercise ordinary care to maintain the same.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Suter (Tex. Civ. App.) 215.

§ 114. In an action against a railroad for damages from an overflow resulting from defendant's failure to maintain proper culverts, as required by Rev. St. 1895, art. 4436, an instruction making defendant's duty to maintain the culverts absolute held not erroneous.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Suter (Tex. Civ. App.) 215.

§ 114. In an action against a railroad for damages from an overflow alleged to have resulted from defendant's failure to maintain proper culverts, a special charge as to damages held properly refused; the damages being sufficiently limited by the charge given.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Suter (Tex. Civ. App.) 215.

X. OPERATION.(A) DUTY TO OPERATE

§ 222. One entitled to an injunction restraining a railway company from continuing a nuisance by using streets for switching purposes held required to act within a reasonable time after the creation of the nuisance.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. De Groff (Tex.) 134.

§ 222. The delay in instituting a suit to restrain a railway company from using tracks in a street held unreasonable, requiring the court to deny an injunction.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. De Groff (Tex.) 134.

§ 222. The court, in determining the propriety of restraining a railway company from using its tracks in a street for railway purposes, on the ground that the same creates a nuisance to the injury of an individual, held required to consider the relative injury to the individual and that which would be inflicted on the company and the public by granting the injunction.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. De Groff (Tex.) 134.

§ 222. An individual held not entitled to maintain a suit for an injunction to restrain a railway company from using tracks in a street, but the individual should be remitted to his action for damages.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. De Groff (Tex.) 134.

(B) STATUTORY, MUNICIPAL, AND OFFICIAL REGULATIONS.

Actions for wrongful death, see Death, § 14.

(D) INJURIES TO LICENSEES OR TRESPASSERS IN GENERAL.

§ 273½. A railroad company's duty to a trespasser is only the use of reasonable care not to injure him after discovery that he is in imminent danger.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 275. Where third persons are permitted to load a railroad car, it is negligence for the railroad company to move the car without first notifying them.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Crow (Ky.) 365.

§ 275. The act of a brakeman in directing plaintiff to get upon a moving car and set the brakes held beyond his authority, and not to change the relation of plaintiff to defendant railroad company from trespasser to that of employé or licensee.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 275. Plaintiff held not entitled to recover for injuries sustained by jumping in front of a moving car which he knew could not be stopped by the brake, unless he did so to rescue his fellow servant on the car from a position of danger.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Brooks (Tex. Civ. App.) 744.

§ 282. Instructions held erroneous as failing to present the issue raised.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Crow (Ky.) 365.

§ 282. Plaintiff held not entitled to recover exemplary damages in an action against a railroad company for injuries by its negligence.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Crow (Ky.) 365.

§ 282. In an action against a railroad company for injuries to a trespassing boy while setting the brakes on a car by direction of a brakeman, evidence of the brakeman's knowledge of plaintiff's peril and negligence in failing to avoid the accident by stopping another car held to raise a question for the jury.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 282. In an action against a railroad company for injuries to a trespasser, evidence held to raise a question for the jury whether plaintiff was guilty of such contributory negligence as will bar his recovery.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 282. A petition in an action against a railroad company for personal injuries, held to sufficiently allege the negligence of the brakeman whose acts caused the injury.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 282. An instruction in an action against a railroad company for injuries to a trespasser held to cover the acts of the brakeman whose negligence caused the accident.—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.

§ 282. In an action for injuries to plaintiff by jumping in front of a moving car, evidence held insufficient to warrant a recovery on the theory that plaintiff's act was to rescue his fellow servant.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Brooks (Tex. Civ. App.) 744.

(F) ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS.

§ 305. A railroad company is liable for injuries at a crossing caused by negligently blowing the whistle so as to frighten plaintiff's mules and overturn his wagon.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 309. A railroad company is only required to use ordinary care to prevent crossing accidents.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 313. A railroad company is liable for injuries at a crossing caused by its violation of an ordinance requiring the engine bell to be rung continuously within the corporate limits.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 314. The maintenance of a cut and dump by a railroad 600 feet from a crossing was not negligence rendering it liable for death at the crossing.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

§ 314. Maintenance by railroad company of tower house of interlocking plant held not negligence constituting independent ground of recovery for death at crossing.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

§ 317. A railroad company is liable for injuries at a crossing caused by running its trains through the town at a speed greater than six miles an hour, in violation of an ordinance.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 317. That a speed ordinance was customarily violated, and the train operatives were not prosecuted therefor, was not a defense to an action for injuries at a crossing caused by running the train in violation of the ordinance.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 327. A traveler is not required to stop his team or get off his wagon unless he knows that a train is approaching.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 330. A traveler approaching a public crossing held entitled to presume, in the absence of signals, that he may proceed in safety.—Dunwoody v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 503.

§ 344. Allegations, in an action for injuries at a crossing, that defendant's train failed to blow the whistle on approaching the crossing as required by ordinance, did not allege the violation of the statutory duty to sound the whistle within 80 rods of the crossing.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 345. Where a petition alleged three distinct acts of negligence, proof of either act entitled the crossing held to raise no issue of negligence.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 347. That a traveler on a public street in crossing railroad tracks heard some one shout is immaterial on the issue of his contributory negligence, unless he understood the purport of the shouting.—Dunwoody v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 503.

§ 347. In an action for injuries at a crossing caused by the violation of an ordinance limiting the speed of trains to six miles an hour, testimony that the city had never prosecuted violations of the ordinance held irrelevant and harmful.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 347. In an action for injuries at a crossing, testimony by one who was at a distance from the place of the accident that he heard a whistle blow in that neighborhood, but could not tell on what road the engine was, was immaterial.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 350. Whether a traveler on a public street was negligent in crossing railroad tracks within switchyards held for the jury.—Dunwoody v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 503.

§ 350. In an action for death at a railroad crossing, it was proper to submit the question of negligence in failing to keep a flagman at the crossing.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

§ 351. In an action for injuries at a crossing, an instruction held too restricted.—Boesch v. Texas Cent. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 784.

§ 351. In an action for injuries at a railroad crossing caused by running the train in excess of the speed limit and in failing to ring the bell as required by ordinance, a charge that the company must use ordinary care to avoid accidents held misleading.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 351. In an action for injuries at a street crossing, held error to instruct that plaintiff could not recover if defendant's failure to ring the bell and the running of the train in excess of the six-mile speed limit were not the cause of the accident.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 351. In an action for injuries at a railroad crossing, an instruction held calculated to mislead the jury to believe that plaintiff could not recover if the speed of the train at the time did not exceed the usual speed, though it exceeded the speed of six miles an hour prescribed by ordinance.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

§ 351. In an action for injuries at a crossing caused by plaintiff's horses being frightened by the sudden blast of a whistle, an instruction as to contributory negligence held inapplicable under the evidence.—Garber v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 857.

(G) INJURIES TO PERSONS ON OR NEAR TRACKS.

§ 355. A pedestrian on a railroad track held a trespasser, and the company only bound to exercise ordinary care to prevent injuring him after actually discovering his peril.—Miller's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Ky.) 348.

§ 356. A person on a railroad right of way held a trespasser, to which the railroad only owed the duty of saving him from injury by orto exercise ordinary care to prevent injuring him after actually discovering his peril.—Miller's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Ky.) 348.

§ 369. A railroad reasonably chargeable with knowledge that persons are on the track must exercise ordinary care to discover their presence, and to avoid injuring them.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Longino (Tex. Civ. App.) 198.

§ 370. The rule requiring a railroad company to give warning and keep a lookout for persons on the track where it is used commonly by the public held confined to cities, and thickly populated communities.—Miller's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Ky.) 348.

§ 376. In an action for the death of a person struck by a train, evidence held not to show actionable negligence.—Miller's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Ky.) 348.

§ 376. A pedestrian on a railroad track held a trespasser, and the company only bound to exercise ordinary care to prevent injuring him after actually discovering his peril.—Miller's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Ky.) 348.

§ 376. In determining whether trainmen used ordinary care to prevent injury to a trespasser, the jury should consider the time in which they had to act and all the circumstances.—Johnson's Adm'r v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 383.

§ 376. A person on a railroad right of way held a trespasser, to which the railroad only owed the duty of saving him from injury by ordinary care after discovery of his peril.—Johnson's Adm'r v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 383.

§ 377. Trainmen may presume that a trespasser on the track will hear the repeated whistles and will heed the same, and get off the track, until it becomes reasonably apparent that he is oblivious of the approach of the train.—Miller's Adm'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Ky.) 348.

§ 381. One using a railroad track either as a licensee or under a lawful claim of right must exercise ordinary care for his own safety, and one exercising no care whatever is guilty of contributory negligence.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Longino (Tex. Civ. App.) 198.

§ 385. One on a railroad track may in some measure depend on the company operating its trains in the usual manner, and may rely on the exercise of the usual precautions for the safety of those whose presence on the track is to be anticipated.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Longino (Tex. Civ. App.) 198.

§ 396. One struck by a train at a place long used as a footway by the public held to have presumptively looked and listened for the approach of trains.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Longino (Tex. Civ. App.) 198.

§ 397. One using a railroad track as a footway may show the proximity of crossings, stations, and the like, and the custom of the company to give signals for such places on the issue of contributory negligence.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Longino (Tex. Civ. App.) 198.

§ 400. Whether one struck by a train at a place used by the public as a footway was guilty of contributory negligence is for the jury, unless the undisputed evidence shows that he exercised no care for his own safety.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Longino (Tex. Civ. App.) 198.

§ 401. In an action for the death of a trespasser struck by a train, the instructions held to properly submit the issues.—Johnson's Adm'r v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 383.

(H) INJURIES TO ANIMALS ON OR NEAR TRACKS.

§ 411. A railway company fencing its track is not liable for killing stock, unless it is negligent.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 234.

§ 413. A railway company, placing a gate in its right of way fence for the accommodation of landowners, is not required to see that the gate is closed.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 234.

§ 425. A railroad company held not liable for injury to a horse getting its shoe hung on a spike standing above the flange of the rail.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Dean (Tex. Civ. App.) 804.

§ 443. In an action against a railway company for killing stock, evidence held not to show that the fastening of the gate on the right of way was defective.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 234.

§ 446. In an action against a railroad company for killing a mule at a crossing, it could not be said as a matter of law that the failure of the company to signal was not the cause of the injury.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Dean (Tex. Civ. App.) 804.

(I) FIRES.

Best and secondary evidence of plaintiff's title to buildings burned, see Evidence, § 158.

Instructions as to damages, see Damages, § 210. Instructions on weight and sufficiency of evidence, see Trial, § 194.

Measure of damages for injury to or loss of property in general, see Damages, § 112.

Question for jury as to damages, see Damages, § 208.

§ 454. A railroad company held required to equip its engines with the most approved spark arresters, and to exercise ordinary care to keep the same in repair.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 481. In an action against a railroad company for the destruction of property by fire, the sustaining of an objection to a question asked a witness testifying as to the market value of the land before and after the fire held not erroneous.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 481. In an action for the destruction of timber and grass for pasture and hay by fire set by a railroad engine, the fact of another fire on the same land is inadmissible.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 481. In an action against a railroad for the destruction by fire of grass for pasturage, testimony of the real value of the grass used for pasturage held proper under the allegations of the complaint.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 481. In an action against a railroad company for the destruction of property by fire set by an engine, evidence of the inspection of a particular engine with reference to its spark arrester held properly excluded in the absence of certain other evidence.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 484. In an action against a railroad company, the question whether the fire was communicated by sparks from defendant's engines held for the jury.—Erhart v. Wabash Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 657.

§ 485. In an action against a railroad company for the destruction of property by fire set by an engine, the refusal to charge on the issue of contributory negligence held proper under the evidence.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 485. In an action against a railroad company for the destruction of property by fire, an instruction as to the liability of a railroad company for negligently allowing grass to accumulate on the land inclosed in its right of way held proper under the evidence.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

RAPE.

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

(A) INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION.

§ 25. Under Shannon's Code, §§ 7077, 7080, 7083, an indictment held to charge rape, defined by section 6451.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

(C) TRIAL AND REVIEW.

§ 59. The refusal to charge on the subject of assault with intent to commit rape held proper, in view of the evidence.—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.

RATIFICATION.

Of acts of partner, see Partnership, § 157.

REAL ACTIONS.

See Forcible Entry and Detainer, §§ 5, 32; Partition; Trespass to Try Title.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

See Brokers.

REBUTTAL

Evidence, see Trial, § 61.

RECEIPTS.

Tax receipts in the exhibits as part of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 510.

RECEIVERS.

II. APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE.

Appointment in partition, see Partition, § 53. Appointment in suit to dissolve partnership, see Partnership, § 325.

RECORDS.

Of particular facts, acts, instruments, or proceedings not judicial.

Assignment of contract for sale of standing timber, see Logs and Logging, § 3.

Of judicial proceedings.

See Courts, §§ 114-116.

Abstract for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 585, 590.

Transcript on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 499-713; Criminal Law, §§ 1090-1097.

REDEMPTION.

From mortgage, see Mortgages, §§ 594, 605. From tax sale, see Municipal Corporations, § 981; Taxation, § 709.

REFERENCE.

Harmless error in directing reference, see Appeal and Error, § 1044.

St. 1906, § 3708) held not to involve a long account within the statute relating to reference, and the court cannot direct a compulsory reference.—Snyder v. Crutcher (Mo. App.) 489.

REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

See Cancellation of Instruments.

REFRIGERATION.

Duty of carrier as to perishable freight, see Carriers, §§ 110, 117, 134.

REHEARING.

See New Trial.

RELEASE.

See Compromise and Settlement: Payment.

Of dower, see Dower, §§ 46, 47.

Of mortgage, see Mortgages, § 298.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

§ 29. Where one having a cause of action against three defendants received from one of them as much money as the proof authorized him to recover in any view of the case, the court did not err in instructing the jury to find for the other defendants.—Button v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 977.

III. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, TRIAL, AND REVIEW.

§ 55. In an action by an injured servant on a contract whereby defendant master agreed to pay a stated sum daily until defendant's physician certified that he was able to resume work, the burden of showing that a certificate given was fraudulently made was on plaintiff.—Camden Interstate Ry. Co. v. Lester (Ky.) 268.

§ 56. In an action by an injured servant on a contract whereby defendant agreed to pay a stated sum daily until defendant's physician certified that he was able to resume work, certain evidence held admissible on the issue as to whether the certificate was falsely made.—Camden Interstate Ry. Co. v. Lester (Ky.) 268.

RELEVANCY.

Of evidence in civil actions, see Evidence, §§ 121, 129.

Of evidence in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 349-366.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

§ 1. Incorporated religious societies are, in this country, civil bodies politic, and are amenable to the ordinary courts of the state, and governed by the statute under which they are organized, so far as statutory regulations are prescribed.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

§ 4. While the establishment of religious corporations except to hold title to such real estate as may be prescribed for church edifices, etc., is forbidden by Const. 1875, art. 2, § 8 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 131), the validity of the incorporation of a religious society cannot be collaterally questioned by a private suitor; the appropriate remedy being by quo warranto at the suit of the Attorney General, or perhaps a prosecuting attorney.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

members of the congregation of a Roman Catholic Church held not members of a religious corporation organized by certain members, to which corporation property was conveyed by a trustee holding the same for the benefit of the congregation.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

§ 12. Where a schism occurs in a congregation of a tenet of faith, and two factions claim the church property, it will be awarded to the one adhering to the original doctrines of the church, and the decisions of the church judicatories as to what these doctrines are will be accepted by the civil courts, when such judicatories exist and have authority to decide.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

§ 12. When a church has been incorporated, if the mode of government in force in the denomination at large is not by congregations, but by superior clerical personages, assemblies, etc., the authority of these will be upheld if consistent with the laws of the sovereignty.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

§ 21. Lots conveyed to a Roman Catholic archbishop in trust for the congregation of a certain church or parish may not be diverted from the purposes of the trust, whether the title remains in the original trustee, or is conveyed by him to an incorporated society.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

§ 23. Where a schism occurs in a congregation of a tenet of faith, and two factions claim the church property, it will be awarded to the one adhering to the original doctrines of the church, and the decisions of the church judicatories as to what these doctrines are will be accepted by the civil courts, when such judicatories exist and have authority to decide.—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

REMAINDERS.

See Life Estates.

REMAND.

Of cause on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 1195.

REMEDY AT LAW.

Effect on right to mandamus, see Mandamus, § 3.

REMITTITUR.

Of damages, see Damages, § 228.

REMOVAL.

Of county seat, see Counties, §§ 34, 35.

REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

Change of venue or place of trial, see Venue, §§ 32, 71.

II. ORIGIN, NATURE, AND SUBJECT OF CONTROVERSY.

§ 19. An action against a corporation created under an act of Congress and one of its employes for negligence, is as to the individual defendant a suit arising under the federal Constitution or laws, within the removal act (Act

Cong. Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508].—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Beckworth (Tex. Civ. App.) 729.

REMOVAL OF CLOUD.

See Quieting Title.

RENT.

See Landlord and Tenant, §§ 229-233.

RENUNCIATION.

Of right of administration, see Executors and Administrators, § 19.

REPAIRS.

Of highway, see Highways, § 113.

REPEAL.

Of statute, see Statutes, § 161.

REPLICATION.

See Pleading, § 180.

REPLY.

See Pleading, § 180

In suit to quiet title, see Quieting Title, § 40.

REPORT

As to credit of persons engaged in business, see Mercantile Agencies, § 1.

REQUESTS.

For instructions in civil actions, see Trial, §§ 256-266.

For instructions in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 824, 829.

RESCISSION.

Cancellation of written instrument, see Cancellation of Instruments.

Of contract for sale of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 84-127.

RES GESTÆ.

In civil actions, see Evidence, § 121.

In criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, §§ 349-366.

RES JUDICATA.

See Judgment, §§ 570-622, 651-739.

RESTRICTIONS.

In wills, see Wills, §§ 651-665.

RESULTING TRUSTS.

See Trusts, §§ 62-89.

RETAINER.

Of attorney, see Attorney and Client, § 76.

RETROSPECTIVE LAWS.

See Statutes, §§ 263, 267.

Constitutional restrictions, see Constitutional Law, § 191.

RETURN.

Of attachment, see Attachment, § 324.

Of record of proceedings for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 597, 601.

REVENUE.

See Taxation.

REVIEW.

See Appeal and Error; Criminal Law, §§ 1020-1177; Justices of the Peace, §§ 141, 174.

REVOCATION.

Of authority of broker, see Brokers, § 44.

Of emancipation of child, see Parent and Child, § 16.

RIGHT OF WAY.

See Easements.

RISKS.

Assumed by employé, see Master and Servant, §§ 203-219, 280, 295.

Within insurance policy, see Insurance, §§ 432, 460.

ROADS.

See Highways.

Streets in cities, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 665-671, 755-822.

ROBBERY.

Instructions as to corroboration of accomplice's testimony, see Criminal Law, § 780.

§ 20. In a prosecution for robbery, an allegation of the indictment that accused took one $10 bill and one $5 bill, current money of the United States, of the value of $15, must be proved, and evidence merely that he took "a $5 bill and a $10 bill" is insufficient.—Early v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1036.

§ 24. Evidence held not to show an assault with intent to rob, within Pen. Code 1895, art. 611.—Walters v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 543.

RULES OF COURT.

See Courts, § 82.

SALES.

Sales by or to particular classes of persons.

See Hawkers and Peddlers.

Sales of particular species of, or estates or interests in, property.

See Intoxicating Liquors.

Realty, see Vendor and Purchaser.

Timber, see Logs and Logging, § 3.

Sales on judicial or other proceedings.

See Execution, §§ 238-256; Judicial Sales.

Foreclosure of mortgage, see Mortgages, §§ 516-534.

Of property of decedent under order of court, see Executors and Administrators, §§ 348-389.

Tax sales, see Taxation, §§ 642-689.

Under power in mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, § 261.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF CONTRACT.

§ 1. To constitute a sale of a chattel, there must be an intention and an offer to sell, and an acceptance of the offer and an intention to buy.—Priest v. Hodges (Ark.) 253.

§ 52. Evidence held to sustain a finding that there were no misrepresentations by the seller's agent as to the value of the physical property of a printing plant sold or as to its earnings.—Rathfon v. Gaines (Ky.) 937.

II. CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT.

§ 85. Under a written contract of sale of buildings on the grounds of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, held, that the buyer did not agree to clear the site of all material, as the seller was bound to do.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 85. On a sale of buildings on the grounds of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, held, that it was incumbent on the buyer to take the property away, but that this duty was a consequence of the contract imposed by law, and not a term of or undertaking in the contract.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

IV. PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT.

(C) DELIVERY AND ACCEPTANCE OF GOODS.

§ 150. A bare contract of sale does not imply a promise by the buyer to remove the property from the seller's premises or other locality where it happens to be.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 150. A sale binds the buyer to accept the property when tendered under the contract; and delivery and acceptance pass the title with the burden of ownership, which will include, under some circumstances, the removal of the property.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

§ 161. That a delivery of goods to a carrier may constitute delivery to the consignee so as to pass title, the goods must correspond with the consignee's order.—Bray Clothing Co. v. McKinney (Ark.) 406.

§ 168. Buyer of a horse held not deprived of his right to return a horse to the seller as unsatisfactory.—Campbell v. Tinker (Mo. App.) 660.

§ 178. Under sale of threshing machine, held that the buyer must be taken to have receded from her offer to return it and acceded to the refusal to allow her to do so, and that she was not relieved from paying for the machine and was precluded from claiming damages.—Kempner v. Advance Thresher Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 714.

§ 179. Buyer of horses held precluded from any redress, except for fraud or breach of warranty.—Campbell v. Tinker (Mo. App.) 660.

§ 181. In an action for the price of goods alleged to have been shipped to defendant on his order, evidence held to support a verdict for defendant.—Bray Clothing Co. v. McKinney (Ark.) 406.

V. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

(A) TRANSFER OF TITLE AS BETWEEN PARTIES.

§ 208. Where, by the contract of sale, there remains something to be done as between the parties to ascertain the quantity or price of the chattel, the title does not pass, but otherwise it may pass pursuant to the intention of the parties.—Priest v. Hodges (Ark.) 253.

necessary to show that the buyer actually accepted the chattels.—Priest v. Hodges (Ark.) 253.

(B) RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF SELLER AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

§ 220. Where a buyer of an engine sold interests therein to other persons, who assumed as his partners to pay the seller for the engine, they were jointly and severally liable with the buyer for the amount due thereon.—Detherage v. Hawn (Ky.) 986; Hawn v. Lunsford, Id.

VII. REMEDIES OF SELLER.

(E) ACTIONS FOR PRICE OR VALUE.

§ 348. In an action on a contract of sale, right to counterclaim for certain damages, stated.—Detherage v. Hawn (Ky.) 986; Hawn v. Lunsford, Id.

§ 348. Right of buyer in an action for price of an engine to counterclaim for a defect and mortgage on the engine, stated.—Detherage v. Hawn (Ky.) 986; Hawn v. Lunsford, Id.

§ 339. In an action for the balance of the price, evidence held to sustain a verdict for plaintiff.—Paducah Cooperage Co. v. Hazel Heading Co. (Ky.) 931.

§ 364. Instructions, in an action on a contract of sale, held to properly present the issues raised by the pleadings.—Paducah Cooperage Co. v. Hazel Heading Co. (Ky.) 931.

§ 366. Scope of recovery stated under a petition in an action for price of an engine sold.—Detherage v. Hawn (Ky.) 986; Hawn v. Lunsford, Id.

(F) ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES.

§ 369. The remedy for a buyer's failure to remove the property sold sounds in tort in the nature of the common-law remedy of trespass on the case.—Kellerman Contracting Co. v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mo. App.) 99.

VIII. REMEDIES OF BUYER.

(A) RECOVERY OF PRICE.

Action on purchase-money notes delivered in escrow, see Escrows, § 12.

(C) ACTIONS FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Necessity of verified denial in action on written contract, see Pleading, § 291.

§ 413. In an action by a buyer against the seller for breach of a written contract of sale, defendant under a general denial may introduce evidence tending to show that a broker by whom the contract was signed failed to report the sale to defendant for its confirmation, as required by the rules of an association to which the parties to the contract belonged as members.—Floresville Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Texas Refining Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 194.

SALVAGE.

Application of salvage by insured under policy of credit insurance, see Insurance, § 511.

SATISFACTION.

See Compromise and Settlement; Payment; Release.

Of mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, § 235; Mortgages, § 293.

SCHISM.

See Religious Societies, § 23.

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS.II. PUBLIC SCHOOLS.*(B) CREATION, ALTERATION, EXISTENCE, AND DISSOLUTION OF DISTRICTS.

§ 24. Where there is a city or town in any county which maintains a separate system of public schools, the balance of the county outside of such city or town, by the express provisions of Ky. St. 1909, § 4428a (Russell's St. § 5610a) becomes a school district.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

§ 24. A certain irregularity in proceedings to change the boundaries of a school district held not available to invalidate the proceedings, in a collateral proceeding to contest an election of trustee for the district.—Gabbart v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 883.

§ 37. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3938, as amended by Act June 6, 1899 (Gen. Laws 1899, p. 321, c. 183), held that a county commissioners' court, having changed the boundaries of a school district, could not subsequently revoke the order of change without observing the prescribed procedure, in the absence of any error or defect in the lines as formerly fixed.—Gabbart v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 883.

§ 37. Acquiescence of portion of the people in territory added to a school district, under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3938, as amended by Act June 6, 1899 (Gen. Laws 1899, p. 321, c. 183), in a void order of the county commissioners' court, withdrawing the territory from the district, held not to validate the order.—Gabbart v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 883.

§ 42. An order of the county court under St. 1909, § 4464 (Russell's St. § 5736), for election on question of creation of a school district, held to sufficiently locate the site of the school.—Taylor v. Cundiff (Ky.) 379.

§ 42. An order of a county court held to sufficiently show that an election on the question of creation of a school district was held at the place ordered.—Taylor v. Cundiff (Ky.) 379.

(D) DISTRICT PROPERTY, CONTRACTS, AND LIABILITIES.

Lien on school buildings for labor and materials furnished in construction thereof, see Mechanics' Liens, § 13.

Priorities of claims for labor and materials furnished to contractor for construction of school building, see Creditors' Suit, § 36.

School lands, see Public Lands, §§ 173, 175.

§ 86. Creditors of a contractor of a school district held without remedy at law and in equity to have the funds of the district applied to the payment of their debts against the contractor, where funds must be diverted from their purpose thereby.—Plummer & Davis v. School Dist. No. 1 of Marianna (Ark.) 1011.

(E) DISTRICT DEBT, SECURITIES, AND TAXATION.

§ 97. Fact that notice of election in white graded school district did not state that only white voters were to participate in the election held not to render the election held pursuant thereto invalid.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

§ 97. Provisions of Ky. St. 1909, § 4458 (Russell's St. § 5672), held not to affect provisions of section 4481 (section 5758) so as to require the notice of an election held under the latter section to be signed by the county superintendent.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

§ 97. Provisions of Ky. St. 1909, § 4458 (Russell's St. § 5672), held not to affect provisions of section 4481 (section 5758) so as to render an election held under the latter statute invalid because held in the courthouse.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

§ 97. Fact that order for an election in a white graded school district to determine matter of issuance of bonds did not state that the bonds were to be issued to raise money for the benefit of the white children of the district held not to render the election invalid.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

§ 97. Where the act authorizing a school tax is void, valid bonds cannot be issued in anticipation of a levy of taxes under the act.—Patching v. Hutchison (Tex. Civ. App.) 878.

§ 101. Sp. Act March 5, 1907 (Sp. Laws 1907, p. 176, c. 18), creating the Tulia independent school district, and a levy of taxes thereunder, held void, as in conflict with Const. art. 7, § 3, limiting taxation.—Patching v. Hutchison (Tex. Civ. App.) 878.

§ 103. Under the express provisions of Ky. St. 1909, § 4458 (Russell's St. § 5672), widows and spinsters who are taxpayers of common school districts are entitled to vote in elections to raise taxes for the use of such districts.—Taylor v. Sparks (Ky.) 970.

SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see Evidence, § 158.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Conclusiveness of certificate as to contents of legislative journals, see Statutes, § 60.

SEDUCTION.II. CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Negating exceptions in statute, see Indictment and Information, § 111.

§ 36. Under Ky. St. 1909, § 1214 (Russell's St. § 3790), punishing seduction, one may be indicted and punished for seduction, though prior to the indictment he had married the female seduced.—Commonwealth v. McNutt (Ky.) 978.

§ 39. One charged with seduction in violation of Ky. St. 1909, § 1214 (Russell's St. § 3790) held entitled to show any statutory ground for abandoning the female seduced after his marriage to her.—Commonwealth v. McNutt (Ky.) 978.

SELF-DEFENSE.

See Homicide, §§ 190, 300.

SEPARATE ESTATE.

Of married women, see Husband and Wife, §§ 133-150.

SEQUESTRATION.

§ 15. Where persons having no rights in land gained possession by wrongfully obtaining a writ of sequestration and having it executed, they acquired no rights by the possession so gained.—Knox v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1142.

§ 21. To entitle a party to exemplary damages for wrongfully suing out of a writ of sequestration, both malice and want of probable cause must exist.—Webb v. J. L. Wiginton & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 856.

§ 21. A special charge requested by defendant in a suit wherein they reconvened for maliciously and wrongfully suing out sequestration held misleading as suggesting that malice alone

Of paper, appeal and error, see Appeal and Error, § 622.
Of process, see Process, § 87.

SERVICES.

See Master and Servant, §§ 79, 82; Work and Labor.

SERVITUDES.

See Easements.

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

In action for price of goods sold, see Sales, § 348.

II. SUBJECT-MATTER.

§ 28. A cause of action in assumpsit not arising out of the same contract as that sued on by plaintiff held available as a set-off but not as a counterclaim.—Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith (Ky.) 307.

§ 29. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 96, a defendant in an action for preventing plaintiff from completing a timber contract could counterclaim damages for cutting trees other than those sold and for injuring defendant's fencing and crops.—Cranor Smith Lumber Co. v. Frith (Ky.) 307.

SETTLEMENT.

See Compromise and Settlement; Payment; Release.

By executor or administrator, see Executors and Administrators, § 496.

By guardian of infant, see Guardian and Ward, §§ 137-163.

Of bill of exceptions, see Exceptions, Bill of, §§ 39, 59.

SEWERS.

Defects or obstructions, see Municipal Corporations, § 827.

SICKNESS.

Of juror, effect on right to summon talesman, see Jury, § 149.

SIGNATURES.

Of county superintendent to notice of election on question of issuing school district bonds, see Schools and School Districts, § 97.

To pleading, see Pleading, § 291.

SLANDER.

See Libel and Slander.

SODOMY.

§ 1. "Sodomy" and "buggery" defined.—Commonwealth v. Poindexter (Ky.) 943.

SPECIAL DAMAGES.

Liability of carrier for loss of or injury to goods shipped, see Carriers, § 135.

SPECIAL INTERROGATORIES.

See Trial, § 352.

Of being specifically enforced.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 28. A contract, to be specifically enforced, must be definite and specific.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 42. Part performance of a parol contract to convey real estate must be unequivocal and referable alone to the contract to warrant specific performance.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 58. A vendor may enforce specifically a contract for the purchase of land, though it stipulates for a sum as liquidated damages on its breach.—Moss & Raley v. Wren (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 64. Certain statement held not to amount to a contract to convey a particular tract of land, capable of being specifically enforced.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 65. A contract of sale of land negotiated by brokers will not be specifically enforced against the owner, where stipulating for a certain forfeiture by the owner not authorized by him.—Hagler v. Ferguson (Tex.) 133.

III. GOOD FAITH AND DILIGENCE.

§ 97. In a vendee's suit for specific performance, tender of performance by plaintiff in his pleadings without payment of the purchase money into court entitles him to go to the jury on the facts found.—Erdtran v. Dunovant (Tex. Civ. App.) 768.

IV. PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.

Right to jury trial, see Jury, § 14.

§ 121. To warrant specific performance of a parol contract to convey real estate, held, that the proof of the contract must be clear and convincing.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 121. Evidence, in an action to compel specific performance of an alleged parol contract by a decedent to convey to a child a particular farm if she would stay with him, held to fail to establish such a contract.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

§ 121. Evidence in specific performance held to show that decedent only contemplated deeding land as a voluntary gift, prompted by affection, and not because of any contract obligating him to convey.—Collins v. Harrell (Mo.) 432.

SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS.

See Intoxicating Liquors.

STALE DEMAND.

See Equity, § 67.

STANDING TIMBER.

Sales and conveyances, application of statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, § 56.

STARE DECISIS.

See Courts, §§ 89-116.

STATEMENT.

By witness inconsistent with testimony, see Witnesses, §§ 383-395.

Of case or facts for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 544-549, 564, 572.

Of plaintiff's claim, see Pleading, § 49.

STATES.

Courts, see Courts.

Judicial notice of laws of other states, see Evidence, § 35.

Jurisdiction of state court of action against trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 295.

Legislative power, see Constitutional Law, § 52.

Public lands, see Public Lands, §§ 173-178.

STATIONS.

Railroad stations, care required of carrier as to condition, see Carriers, § 236.

STATUTES.

For statutes relating to particular subjects, see the various specific topics.

Laws impairing obligation of contracts, see Constitutional Law, § 137.

Validity of retrospective or ex post facto laws, see Constitutional Law, § 191.

Statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of.

Statutes of limitations, see Limitation of Actions, §§ 5-39.

I. ENACTMENT, REQUISITES, AND VALIDITY IN GENERAL.

§ 18. Act No. 59, Gen. Assem. 1868, approved July 23, 1868 (Acts 1868, p. 214), held legally enacted.—State v. Bowman (Ark.) 711.

§ 19. Const. art. 5, § 21, relating to the final passage of bills, held mandatory.—State v. Bowman (Ark.) 711.

§ 60. Where a question arises as to the existence of a statute, the court may examine legislative journals.—State v. Bowman (Ark.) 711.

§ 60. The certificate of the Secretary of State as to the contents of the legislative journals is not conclusive.—State v. Bowman (Ark.) 711.

IV. AMENDMENT, REVISION, AND CODIFICATION.

§ 138. A section of the Kentucky Statutes may be amended by its section number.—Commonwealth v. McNutt (Ky.) 978.

§ 138. Acts 1906, p. 253, c. 25, held to properly amend section 1214, Ky. St. 1903, within Const. § 51.—Commonwealth v. McNutt (Ky.) 978.

V. REPEAL, SUSPENSION, EXPIRATION, AND REVIVAL.

§ 161. Acts 30th Leg. (Gen. Laws 1907, c. 18) pp. 479-489, levying an annual occupation tax upon street car companies on a basis of gross receipts, held not to repeal Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 5049, subd. 54, levying an annual occupation tax on street car companies on a track mileage basis.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 879.

VI. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

(A) GENERAL RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

Statutes relating to actions for wrongful death, see Death, § 9.

Statutes relating to conduct of elections, see Elections, § 198.

§ 181. Courts cannot by construing a statute substitute their ideas of legislative intent for that held by the Legislature and expressed in legislative words, and must not interpret where there is no need of it.—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.

§ 188. A construction should not be employed that would render the law absurd or meaningless, when a rational, expressive, and wholesome meaning may be ascertained.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 195. A statute which enumerates the particular things which shall be necessary to create a lien on real estate excludes the idea of the doing of other things as essential to the completeness of the lien.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

§ 228. Where a statute repealing a pre-existing penal law contains a clause saving the rights of the state, the right of action only is preserved, and it must be prosecuted under the new law or under some law other than that repealed.—State v. Brady (Tex.) 128.

§ 228. The saving clause or proviso of a repealing statute, which preserves some right, must be strictly construed so as not to include anything not fairly within its terms.—State v. Brady (Tex.) 128.

(B) PARTICULAR CLASSES OF STATUTES.

Statute relating to mechanics' liens, see Mechanics' Liens, § 5.

§ 241. The rule of strict construction as to penal statutes does not consist in giving words the narrowest meaning susceptible, nor consist in adopting a strained construction obviously contrary to, or destructive of, the lawmakers' intention.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 241. The intention of the Legislature, even in penal statutes, when it can fairly be discovered, must in all cases control.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 241. The rule of strict construction as to penal statutes is, properly speaking, a requirement that plaintiffs' case must be brought strictly within the spirit and letter thereof.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

§ 241. The courts cannot, and ought not to, deal with an act as a crime, unless plainly within the language used by the Legislature; but, when determining whether or not it is within it, a common-sense method to ascertain its real meaning should always be employed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

(D) RETROACTIVE OPERATION.

§ 263. Statutes will not be given a retrospective construction, unless the language precludes a reasonable doubt that the Legislature intended a prospective construction.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley (Ky.) 982.

§ 267. The general rule that statutes will be construed to be prospective in operation does not apply to statutes affecting procedure or a legal remedy.—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.

VII. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

§ 279. Under Civ. Code Prac. § 119, held, that it was unnecessary in an action against a common carrier under Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. 595 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 909), known as the "Carmack amendment to the interstate commerce act," to refer to that statute in his petition.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Scott (Ky.) 990.

§ 281. To be available in an action in the state, a statute of another state adopting the common law must be pleaded.—Mathieson v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 9.

§ 281. In an action for injuries to an employé in another state, in the absence of any showing that the law of such other state is different from the law of the forum, the latter will be applied.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Pickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 1133.

§ 283. Where an act has been signed by the Governor, deposited with the Secretary of State, and duly published, it will be presumed that every requirement was complied with in its passage.—State v. Bowman (Ark.) 711.

STATUTES CONSTRUED.

UNITED STATES.

CONSTITUTION.

Amend. 14.....1097

STATUTES AT LARGE.

1887, Feb. 4, ch. 102, § 20,
24 Stat. 386 (U. S.
Comp. St. 1901, p. 3169).
Amended by Act 1906,
June 29, ch. 3591, § 7,
34 Stat. 593 (U. S.
Comp. St. Supp. 1907,
p. 909).....845
1888, Aug. 13, ch. 806, 25
Stat. 433 (U. S. Comp.
St. 1901, p. 506).....729
1888, Aug. 13, ch. 806, §
3, 25 Stat. 436 (U. S.
Comp. St. 1901, p. 582) 1146
1898, July 1, ch. 541, §
11a, 30 Stat. 549 (U. S.
Comp. St. 1901, p. 3426) 401
1906, June 11, ch. 3073,
34 Stat. 232 (U. S.
Comp. St. Supp. 1907,
p. 801).....1133
1906, June 29, ch. 3591,
34 Stat. 593 (U. S.
Comp. St. Supp. 1907,
p. 909).....845
1906, June 29, ch. 3591, §
1, 2, 34 Stat. 584, 586
(U. S. Comp. St. Supp.
1907, pp. 892, 893).....982
1906, June 29, ch. 3591, §
7, 34 Stat. 595 (U. S.
Comp. St. Supp. 1907,
p. 909).....990

COMPILED STATUTES 1901.

Page 506729
Page 5821140
Page 3109845
Page 3426401

COMPILED STATUTES SUPP. 1907.

Page 8911133
Pages 892, 895.....982
Page 909.....845, 990

ARKANSAS.

CONSTITUTION.

Art. 5, § 21.....711
Art. 7, § 11.....706
Art. 7, § 14.....1010
Art. 7, § 28.....706
Art. 7, § 33.....1010
Art. 13, § 16.....1010
Art. 16, § 5.....398

KIRBY'S DIGEST.

§ 11031017
§ 1428, 1487-1493.....1010
§ 1714256
§ 3142260

LAWS.

1868, p. 214.....711
1907, p. 113706

KENTUCKY.

CONSTITUTION.

§ 51978
§ 170992
§ 242363
§ 244350

CIVIL CODE OF PRACTICE.

§ 38, 52.....981
§ 93940
§ 96307
§ 119900
§ 120, 130.....933
§ 284997
§ 452, subsec. 4.....372
§ 474299
§ 694, subsec. 3.....347
§ 734972

CRIMINAL CODE OF PRACTICE.

§ 122915, 978
§ 123, 124.....915
§ 186978
§ 281334

STATUTES 1894.

§ 4315. Amended by
Laws 1906, p. 431, ch.
118; Laws 1908, p. 107,
ch. 42.....299

STATUTES 1903.

§ 1214. Amended by
Laws 1906, p. 253, ch.
25978

STATUTES 1909.

§ 216 (Russell's St. § 1783) 271
§ 470 (Russell's St. § 1775)
972, 1003
§ 470, subsec. 7 (Russell's
St. § 1775, subsec. 7).....998
§ 482 (Russell's St. §
1799).....940
§ 489 (Russell's St. §
1806).....309
§ 1150 (Russell's St. §
3628).....915
§ 1214 (Russell's St. §
3790).....978
§ 1409, subsecs. 7, 11 (Russell's St. § 5863, 5867) 332
§ 1596a (Russell's St. §
4046).....382
§ 1702 (Russell's St. §
4661).....961

§ 1708 (Russell's St. §
4665).....306
§ 1907 (Russell's St. §
2100).....312
§ 2034 (Russell's St. §
4151).....963
§ 2135 (Russell's St. §
4645).....292
§ 2219 (Russell's St. §
1815).....350
§ 2364 (Russell's St. § 80)
292
§ 2515 (Russell's St. §
224).....319
§ 2546 (Russell's St. §
221).....363
§ 2833, 2834 (Russell's St.
§ 895, 897).....329
§ 3248, 3274, 3452 (Russell's St. § 1254, 1291,
1430).....324
§ 3696 (Russell's St. §
1698).....298
§ 3720b, subsecs. 51, 52, 57
(Russell's St. § 1920,
1921, 1926).....279
§ 3883 (Russell's St. §
3914).....966
§ 3897 (Russell's St. §
3920).....358
§ 4021 (Russell's St. §
5913).....319
§ 4051 (Russell's St. §
5942).....294
§ 4076b-4076k (Russell's
St. § 5970-5983).....331
§ 4088 (Russell's St. §
6061).....294
§ 4114a et seq. (Russell's
St. § 6157).....381
§ 4224 (Russell's St. §
6157).....1000
§ 4426a, 4458 (Russell's
St. § 5610a, 5672).....970
§ 4464 (Russell's St. §
5736).....379
§ 4481 (Russell's St. §
5758).....970

RUSSELL'S STATUTES.

§ 80 (St. 1909, § 2364).....292
§ 221 (St. 1909, § 2540).....363
§ 224 (St. 1909, § 2515).....319
§ 895, 897 (St. 1909, §
2833, 2834).....329
§ 1254, 1291, 1430 (St.
1909, § 3248, 3274,
3452).....324
§ 1698 (St. 1909, § 3699) 298
§ 1775 (St. 1909, § 470).....972, 1003
§ 1775, subsec. 7 (St.
1909, § 470, subsec. 7).....998
§ 1783 (St. 1909, § 216).....271
§ 1799 (St. 1909, § 482).....940
§ 1806 (St. 1909, § 489).....309
§ 1815 (St. 1909, § 2219) 350
§ 1920, 1921, 1926 (St.
1909, § 3720b, subsecs.
51, 52, 57).....279
§ 2100 (St. 1909, § 1907) 312
§ 3628 (St. 1909, § 1150) 915
§ 3790 (St. 1909, § 1214) 973

SAYLES' ANNOTATED CIVIL STATUTES
1897.

Art. 186, subd. 2.....	561
Art. 906, subd. 3.....	747
Art. 1194, subd. 7.....	885
Art. 1331.....	551
Arts. 1367-1369.....	602
Art. 2306.....	1135
Arts. 2519, 2529.....	881
Art. 2677.....	193
Art. 2989. Amended by Laws 1907, p. 206, ch. 107, §§ 2, 3.....	790
Art. 3339a.....	568
Art. 4521.....	810
Art. 4500h.....	178
Art. 4574.....	776
Art. 5049, subd. 54.....	879
Art. 5232g.....	188

CITY CHARTERS.

Houston. Laws 1905, pp. 147, 149, ch. 17, art. 3, §§ 8, 11.....	608
---	-----

SPECIAL LAWS 1907.

Page 176, ch. 18.....	878
-----------------------	-----

LAWS.

1897, p. 138, ch. 108, § 15.....	808
1897, p. 235, ch. 162.....	635
1899, p. 246, ch. 146. Repealed by Laws 1903, p. 119, ch. 94.....	128
1899, p. 321, ch. 183.....	883
1901, p. 322.....	893
1903, p. 118, ch. 93, art. 812.....	203
1903, p. 119, ch. 94.....	128

1905, p. 350, ch. 102.....	512
1905, pp. 521, 527, 535, ch. 11, §§ 4, 23, 60, 64.....	893
1907, p. 187, ch. 65.....	1053
1907, pp. 138, 140, ch. 65, §§ 4, 9.....	1053
1907, p. 206, ch. 107.....	164
1907, p. 206, ch. 107, §§ 2, 3.....	790
1907, pp. 219, 220, ch. 118	139
1907, p. 248, ch. 133.....	229
1907, p. 249, ch. 133, arts. 1194b, 1194c.....	735
1907, p. 269, ch. 139 783, 851	851
1907, p. 277, ch. 143.....	754
1907, p. 311, ch. 164, § 4, subd. 5.....	749
1907, p. 479, ch. 18.....	879
1907, p. 509, ch. 24.....	131, 153, 1119
1907, pp. 510, 512, ch. 24, §§ 5, 14.....	1142

STAY.

Of action against bankrupt, see Bankruptcy, § 391.

STIPULATIONS.

§ 16. Where the parties agree in open court to submit certain issues open to the jury, neither party can be heard to complain of the action of the court in submitting any of the issues.—Mecca Fire Ins. Co. of Waco v. Wilderspin (Tex. Civ. App.) 1131.

§ 18. In an action on an insurance policy, an objection that the evidence does not support a finding that the property destroyed was worth the amount alleged in the petition held not available after an agreement by the parties that certain issues should be the only ones submitted to the jury.—Mecca Fire Ins. Co. of Waco v. Wilderspin (Tex. Civ. App.) 1131.

STOCK.

Corporate stock, see Corporations, §§ 76-83.

STOCKHOLDERS.

Of corporations, see Corporations, § 206.

STREET RAILROADS.

See Railroads.

Carriage of passengers, see Carriers.

II. REGULATION AND OPERATION.

Imposition of occupation taxes as constituting double taxation, see Licenses, § 7.

§ 69. Acts 30th Leg. (Gen. Laws 1907, c. 18) pp. 479-489, levying an annual occupation tax upon street car companies on a basis of gross receipts, held not to repeal Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 5049, subd. 54, levying an annual occupation tax on street car companies on a track-mileage basis.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 879.

§ 81. The care required of a motorman to avoid accidents with persons getting in the way of the car stated.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 851.

§ 93. A motorman, seeing that a traveler intends to cross the track ahead of the car, held required to make reasonable use of the means at hand to check the speed of the car, so as to enable the traveler to cross in safety.—Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 496.

§ 93. A traveler and a motorman in charge of a street car held rightfully traveling on the public streets, and each must employ reasonable care to avoid a collision.—Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 496.

§ 98. A person need not always look and listen for approaching cars before going on a street railroad track, and the measure of ordinary care may be satisfied by the exercise of either the sense of hearing or sight.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 111. A petition, in an action for injuries in a collision with a street car, held sufficient to permit the introduction in evidence of a city ordinance relating to the speed of cars.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 113. In an action against a street railway company for personal injuries, the rules of the company governing the conduct of its employees held not admissible.—Louisville Ry. Co. v. Gaugh (Ky.) 276.

§ 117. In an action for injuries in a collision with a street car, evidence held to require submission to the jury of the company's negligence resulting from a failure to exercise proper care after the discovery of the traveler's peril.—Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 496.

§ 117. An instruction on the duty of a motorman as to the control over the speed of his car, which duty was not prescribed by ordinance, held erroneous, as the question was for the jury.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 851.

§ 117. Under a city ordinance requiring a signal light for street cars, the question of the motorman's negligence in running at a greater speed than would allow him to stop within the distance covered by the light thrown by his own headlight held for the jury.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 851.

§ 118. In an action against a street railroad company, held error not to give specified instruction.—Louisville Ry. Co. v. Gaugh (Ky.) 276.

§ 118. In an action for injuries in a collision with a street car, an instruction submitting the issue of contributory negligence held justified by the pleadings and the evidence.—North-driving suddenly in front of the car proximately contributing to the injury, held properly refused.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 118. In an action for injuries in a street car collision, a requested charge on the issue of contributory negligence held properly refused in view of the pleadings.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 118. The petition and answer in an action for injuries in a collision with a street car held to authorize an instruction submitting the question of plaintiff's driving in close proximity to the track.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

STREETS.

See Highways; Municipal Corporations, §§ 665-671, 755-822.

SUA SPONTE.

Transfer of case to equity side of docket on court's own motion, see Trial, § 11.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

To corporate stock, see Corporations, §§ 76-83.

SUBTERRANEAN WATERS.

See Waters and Water Courses, § 107.

SUIT.

See Action.

SUMMONS.

See Process.

SUNDAY.

§ 29. An allegation in an indictment under Rev. St. 1899, § 2240 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1446), for Sabbath breaking, held to be a direct statement that the date alleged was Sunday.—State v. Nickelson (Mo. App.) 1192.

SUPPLEMENTAL ABSTRACTS.

Of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 590.

SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADING.

See Pleading, § 279.

SUPPORT.

Deed with covenant for support of grantor as constituting equitable mortgage, see Mortgages, § 27.

SUPREME COURTS.

See Courts, §§ 223, 231.

SURETYSHIP.

See Principal and Surety.

SURFACE WATERS.

See Waters and Water Courses, § 125.

Of cause of action, see Abatement and Revival, § 58.

SWITCHES.

Legality of contract by section foreman to procure switch track to be constructed at a specified place, see Contracts, § 108.

TAXATION.

Payment of taxes to sustain adverse possession, see Adverse Possession, § 92.

Taxation of municipal bonds as impairing obligation of contract, see Constitutional Law, § 137.

Local or special taxes.

See Highways, § 151; Municipal Corporations, §§ 978, 981; Schools and School Districts, §§ 97-103.

Assessments for municipal improvements, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 414-519, 538-567.

Occupation or privilege taxes.

See Hawkers and Peddlers, § 4; Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 49-75; Licenses, §§ 7-42.

II. CONSTITUTIONAL REQUIREMENTS AND RESTRICTIONS.

§ 47. Where it is shown that defendant has paid taxes on $3,500 worth of personalty, such property being worth less than that amount, he should not be assessed separately on a library worth $300.—Commonwealth v. Harris (Ky.) 294.

III. LIABILITY OF PERSONS AND PROPERTY.

(A) PRIVATE PERSONS AND PROPERTY IN GENERAL.

Liability of street railroad for occupation taxes, see Street Railroads, § 69.

§ 108. A sale and transfer of taxable property and the investment of the proceeds in non-taxable government bonds held not a trick on the part of the owner to escape taxation under St. 1909, § 4051 (Russell's St. § 5942).—Commonwealth v. Harris (Ky.) 294.

(B) CORPORATIONS AND CORPORATE STOCK AND PROPERTY.

§ 122. Under St. 1909, § 4088 (Russell's St. § 6061), where a public service corporation owning property both within and out of the state pays a tax on its property and franchises within the state, its corporate stock in the hands of stockholders is not assessable for taxation.—Commonwealth v. Harris (Ky.) 294.

(D) EXEMPTIONS.

§ 217. A waterworks system owned and operated by a city held exempt from taxation, under Const. § 170.—Ryan v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 992.

§ 251. Equity will interfere, by injunction, to prevent a threatened cloud on the title of the waterworks property of a city by an assessment of the property for taxation.—Ryan v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 992.

V. LEVY AND ASSESSMENT.

(E) ASSESSMENT ROLLS OR BOOKS.

§ 411. Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 5098, 5103, 5126, 5127, held, that tax rolls are to be made § 453. Where the assessed valuation of property is excessive, or there is an attempted assessment of omitted property, the exclusive remedy is by an application to the board of supervisors, and to appeal from their action, except on the question of valuation.—Ryan v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 992.

VI. LIEN AND PRIORITY.

Abatement of action to enforce tax lien, death of defendant as ground of, see Abatement and Revival, § 58.

VII. PAYMENT AND REFUNDING OR RECOVERY OF TAX PAID.

Payment of taxes as qualification of voter, see Elections, § 83.

Tax receipts in the exhibits as part of record on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 510.

§ 529. Evidence in trespass to try title, in which defendants' defense was limitations, based on the payment of taxes on the land, held not to show a payment.—Lofton v. Miller (Tex. Civ. App.) 911.

IX. SALE OF LAND FOR NONPAYMENT OF TAX.

§ 642. The citation served by publication in an action for delinquent state and county taxes may be addressed directly to defendants, and it need not be addressed to any officer nor require any officer to make return thereof.—Gibbs v. Scales (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

§ 642. A citation under the delinquent tax law (Laws 1897, p. 138, c. 103, § 15) need not recite the file number of the suit under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1214, nor state the amount of the costs.—Unknown Owner v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 803.

§ 643. In a suit to enforce a lien for taxes, a claim of lien for subsequent taxes on the same land was properly pleaded by amended petition, under Civ. Code Prac. § 694, subsec. 3.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Herndon's Adm'r (Ky.) 347.

§ 643. Gen. Laws 1905, p. 317, c. 129, § 2, relating to tax collectors' credits under Rev. St. 1895, art. 5170, held inapplicable to collectors' fees in suits to collect taxes under such act.—Unknown Owner v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 803.

§ 647. A judgment for delinquent state and county taxes held not wholly invalid because it contains improper provisions.—Gibbs v. Scales (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

§ 648. A judgment for delinquent taxes held not subject to collateral attack.—Gibbs v. Scales (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

§ 674. Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 5232g, held not to render a purchase by the county attorney of land at a tax foreclosure sale void as contrary to public policy.—Gibbs v. Scales (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

§ 689. A direction by the court to the sheriff on the hearing of a motion to set aside a tax sale held not equivalent to a direct finding that the sheriff promised to notify an attorney of the sale.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

§ 689. Though for inadequacy of price a sale for taxes will not be set aside, gross inadequa-of his client's lot, and was thereby led to make no further inquiry or watch for advertisement of the sale, which was made for an inadequate price, it should be set aside.—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

X. REDEMPTION FROM TAX SALE.

§ 709. One entitled to redeem from a tax sale is liable to the purchaser for interest on the amount due only from the date of the sale to the time he tenders such amount to the purchaser and offers to redeem.—Blair v. Guaranty Savings, Loan & Investment Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

XII. FORFEITURES AND PENALTIES.

§ 848. Ky. St. 1909, §§ 4076b-4076k (Russell's St. §§ 5970-5983) relative to forfeiture of land for continued failure to list for taxation, held not to apply to the facts.—Lockard v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 331.

TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

I. ESTABLISHMENT, CONSTRUCTION, AND MAINTENANCE.

§ 15. One maintaining telephone poles along a highway held required to see that they are sound and serviceable and is liable for injuries to a traveler by the fall of a defective pole.—Burton v. Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. (Ky.) 287.

§ 15. One maintaining telephone poles along a highway without permission from the fiscal court held not liable for injuries to a traveler in consequence of the fall of a pole during a severe windstorm.—Burton v. Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. (Ky.) 287.

II. REGULATION AND OPERATION.

§ 31. Certain regulation of telegraph company fixing office hours held reasonable.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 717.

§ 32. Telegraph company held not bound by unauthorized contract of agent as to delivery of certain telegram.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 717.

§ 38. Facts held to show actionable negligence on the part of a telegraph company in delaying a telegram.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Tex. Civ. App.) 1089.

§ 65. In an action against a telegraph company for nondelivery of a message, the petition held sufficient to authorize the admission of evidence that the sendee would have complied with the request made in the message.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Powell (Tex. Civ. App.) 226.

§ 65. A petition in an action against a telegraph company held sufficient as against the general demurrer.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hughey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1130.

§ 66. In an action against a telegraph company for mental anguish, held, that the burden of proof was on plaintiff.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Long (Ark.) 405.

§ 66. Evidence in an action against a telegraph company for mental anguish held insufficient to establish a cause of action.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Long (Ark.) 405.

§ 66. Evidence, in an action against a telegraph company for delay in delivery of a telegram, held to show that the messenger intrusted therewith was negligent.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 717.

§ 66. Evidence in an action against a telegraph company held to show negligence but for which plaintiff would have reached the bedside of his dying wife about 15 hours sooner than he did.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hughey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1130.

§ 66. In an action against a telegraph company for failure to deliver a telegram, held, that there was no burden on plaintiff to show that had he arrived home at the time he could have arrived had the telegram been promptly delivered, that his wife, who was unconscious when he arrived, was conscious 15 hours earlier.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hughey (Tex. Civ. App.) 1130.

§ 67. A telegraph company failing to deliver a telegram held liable for injuries sustained by the sender and his wife.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Powell (Tex. Civ. App.) 226.

§ 68. A telegraph company held not liable for the failure to deliver an answer to a telegram, where the answer would not have alleviated the plaintiff's mental anxiety already occasioned by the delay in the delivery of a telegram.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Tex. Civ. App.) 1069.

§ 71. Verdict for $1,200, in action against telegraph company for mental anguish caused by negligent delay in delivering telegram, held not excessive.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 717.

§ 74. An instruction in an action against a telegraph company for nondelivery of a message held to properly submit the issue of contributory negligence of the sender.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Powell (Tex. Civ. App.) 226.

§ 74. In action against telegraph company for delay in delivery of message, held error to submit issue of negligence in failing to deliver it at a certain time.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 717.

TENDER.

§ 18. To preserve the legal effect of a tender, it must be kept good.—Abbott v. Herron (Ark.) 708.

TERMINATION.

Of right in party wall, see Party Walls, § 5.

TERRITORIES.

§ 11. The federal employer's liability act (Act Cong. June 11, 1906, 'c. 3073, § 4 Stat. 232 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1907, p. 891]), held constitutional in its application to territories, though unconstitutional in its application to interstate commerce.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Pickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 1133.

TESTAMENT.

See Wills.

TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

See Wills, §§ 38, 55.

TESTAMENTARY POWERS.

Creation, see Wills, §§ 681, 693.

THEFT.

See Larceny.

TICKETS.

For carriage of passengers, see Carriers, § 253½.

TIMBER.

See Logs and Logging.

TIME.

For particular acts in or incidental to judicial proceedings.

Filing assignment of errors, see Appeal and Error, § 744.

Filing bill of exceptions, see Exceptions, Bill of, § 39.

Filing transcript on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 622.

Motion for new trial, see New Trial, § 119.

Taking appeal or suing out writ of error, see Appeal and Error, § 339.

§ 9. Where an order filed November 28th, for cars to be furnished on December 2d, was complied with by furnishing cars on December 13th, held that only 10 days remained for which a penalty for delay should be allowed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

TITLE.

Best and secondary evidence of title, see Evidence, § 158.

Color of title, see Adverse Possession.

Dedication affecting title, see Dedication, § 51.

Estoppel to assert title, see Estoppel, §§ 38, 47.

Removal of cloud, see Quieting Title.

Sufficiency of title in abutting owner to maintain action for obstruction of street, see Municipal Corporations, § 671.

Sufficiency of title of vendor of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 129.

Title of lessor, see Landlord and Tenant, § 63.

TORTS.

Causing death, see Death, §§ 9-99.

Liabilities of particular classes of persons.

See Municipal Corporations, §§ 739-827.

Agents, see Principal and Agent, § 159.

Particular torts.

See Assault and Battery, §§ 3-43; False Imprisonment, § 20; Forcible Entry and Detainer, §§ 5, 32; Libel and Slander; Malicious Prosecution; Negligence; Nuisance; Trespass; Trover and Conversion.

Remedies for torts.

See Trespass, §§ 44-52; Trover and Conversion, §§ 13-40.

Limitations, see Limitation of Actions, § 55.

Measure of damages, see Damages, §§ 95, 112.

§ 4. It is no defense to an action for a wrongful act that defendant did not know that any injury or loss would result.—Kentucky Heating Co. v. Hood (Ky.) 337.

§ 28. In an action for injuries to plaintiffs' business, the refusal of instructions that there could be no recovery for loss other than that resulting from acts of defendant, held not error.—American Freehold Land Mortgage Co. of London v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 1106.

TOWER HOUSES.

Maintenance near railroad crossing as constituting negligence, see Railroads, § 314.

TOWNS.

See Counties; Municipal Corporations; Schools and School Districts, §§ 13-103.

TRANSCRIPTS.

As evidence, see Evidence, § 342.
Of record for purpose of review, see Appeal and Error, §§ 597, 601; Criminal Law, §§ 1090-1097.

TRANSFERS.

Of causes for trial, see Trial, § 11.

TRANSITORY ACTIONS.

See Venue, § 7.

TREES.

See Logs and Logging.

Application of statute of frauds to contract for sale of growing trees, see Frauds, Statute of, § 56.

TRESPASS.

Ejection of trespasser, see Carriers, §§ 363-384.
Injuries to trespassers, see Railroads, §§ 273½-282.

To the person, see Assault and Battery, §§ 3-43; False Imprisonment.

I. ACTS CONSTITUTING TRESPASS AND LIABILITY THEREFOR.

§ 12. Every unauthorized entry on the land of another is trespass, and it is willful trespass if deliberately done.—Riply v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

II. ACTIONS.

(C) EVIDENCE.

§ 44. Where, in an action for timber trespass, plaintiff elected to treat the manufacture of the timber into lumber as the period of conversion, the burden was on her to prove that the timber was so manufactured.—Riply v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

§ 46. Evidence held to support a finding that defendants committed a timber trespass intentionally, and not through mistake in the land lines.—Riply v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

(D) DAMAGES.

§ 52. Where timber is cut on the land of another the trespasser is liable for the full value of the property at the time and place of demand or of suit brought.—Riply v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE.

I. RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

§ 10. A bond for title to land after the payment of the purchase price is an equitable title, which is sufficient on which to base trespass to try title against the grantor.—Wright v. Riley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1134.

II. PROCEEDINGS.

Conformity to pleading, see Judgment, § 251.
Submission of questions of law to jury, see Trial, § 199.

§ 25. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3360, limiting the time for suing for specific performance of a contract to convey land, does not apply to an action of trespass to try title for the recovery of and want of consideration for the contract on which plaintiff's title is based, have the legal effect of admitting possession in plaintiff.—Wright v. Riley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1134.

§ 38. A plea of not guilty as to the part of land not disclaimed by defendant put plaintiff on proof of his title, and on his failure to show title defendant would be entitled to a judgment denying a recovery of the land not disclaimed.—Gaffney v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 608.

§ 38. Where, in trespass to try title, defendant pleaded not guilty, and, in a cross-action sought to have the boundary established between himself and plaintiff, the burden was on defendant to prove that the boundaries were as alleged by him, even though plaintiff failed to sustain the burden of showing title in the principal action.—Gaffney v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 606.

§ 38. Under the presumption of the validity of the land commissioner's award and sale of land, held that it will be presumed that one purchasing school land in addition to his home section was owner of his home section when he applied.—McKee v. West (Tex. Civ. App.) 1135.

§ 39. In trespass to try title, certain evidence held inadmissible as a collateral attack on a lease of public lands not involved in the case.—McGill v. Sites (Tex. Civ. App.) 220.

§ 41. In trespass to try title, certain evidence held not to show that there was any outstanding title against the land in controversy.—Hoencke v. Lomax (Tex. Civ. App.) 817.

§ 45. Term "prior claim" used in a charge held referable to "prior deed" used therein; the terms as used being practically synonymous.—La Brie v. Cartwright (Tex. Civ. App.) 785.

§ 45. In trespass to try title, the exclusion of evidence that plaintiff's grantor attempted to get a third person to execute a deed of the land to him which she refused held not error.—Robertson v. Hefley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1159.

§ 47. Defendant in trespass to try title, after pleading not guilty as to a part of the land not claimed by plaintiff, could seek affirmative relief by having disputed boundaries between them established.—Gaffney v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 606.

§ 47. Defendant in trespass to try title held bound by his admission in his cross-action to establish the boundaries between himself and plaintiff, that plaintiff owned the land up to a certain boundary, notwithstanding the fact that plaintiff failed to prove title to the land in controversy.—Gaffney v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 606.

§ 47. Parties in actual possession of land until wrongfully dispossessed by others held entitled to recover possession, in the absence of evidence tending to show title in the others.—Knox v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.) 1142.

TRIAL.

See New Trial; Reference; Witnesses.

Trespass to try title to real property, see Trespass to Try Title.

Proceedings incident to trials.

Conformity of judgment to verdict or findings, see Judgment, § 256.

Entry of judgment after trial of issues, see Judgment, §§ 199-256.

Place of trial, see Venue, §§ 32, 71.

Right to trial by jury, see Jury, § 14.

Summoning and impaneling jury, see Jury, § 58.

Corporations, §§ 821-822.

Trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 304.

Trial of particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Forcible Entry and Detainer, § 32; Libel and Slander, § 123; Negligence, §§ 136-139; Torts, § 28; Trespass to Try Title, § 45.

For breach of contract, see Contracts, § 353.

For breach of contract to convey land, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 352.

For delay in shipment, see Carriers, § 106.

For fraud of agent, see Principal and Agent, § 79.

For injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 400-401.

For injuries to passenger, see Carriers, §§ 320-321.

For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 284-296.

For injuries to shipment of live stock, see Carriers, § 230.

For injuries to traveler on city street, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 821, 822.

For loss of or injury to shipment, see Carriers, §§ 136-137.

For malpractice, see Physicians and Surgeons, § 18.

For money received, see Money Received, § 19.

For price of goods sold, see Sales, § 364.

For rent, see Landlord and Tenant, § 233.

Probate proceedings, see Wills, § 321.

To foreclose vendor's lien, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 284.

Trial of criminal prosecutions.

See Criminal Law, §§ 589-603, 621-864; Homicide, §§ 268-309; Larceny, § 70; Rape, § 59.

II. DOCKETS, LISTS, AND CALENDARS.

Review of rulings as to transfer of cause as dependent on objections made in lower court, see Appeal and Error, § 237.

§ 11. The trial judge is not required to transfer a case involving a complicated account to the equity side of the docket on his own motion.—Stevenson v. Moore (Ky.) 951.

III. COURSE AND CONDUCT OF TRIAL IN GENERAL.

Review of remark of judge as dependent on prejudicial nature of error, see Appeal and Error, § 1046.

§ 29. A remark by the court, after evidence had been received without objection that the question was not proper, related only to the admissibility and not to the weight of the testimony.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

IV. RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE.

(A) INTRODUCTION, OFFER, AND ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE IN GENERAL.

§ 41. Under Kirby's Dig. § 3142, the exclusion of witnesses from the courtroom held within the discretion of the court.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Pate (Ark.) 260.

§ 54. In a suit to recover rents, part of the consideration for the conveyance of land, certain evidence held admissible only for the purpose of affecting the credibility of the witness, and not for the purpose of proving plaintiff's case.—Tipton v. Tipton (Tex. Civ. App.) 842.

though it should have been introduced in rebuttal.—Camden Interstate Ry. Co. v. Lester (Ky.) 268.

(C) OBJECTIONS, MOTIONS TO STRIKE OUT, AND EXCEPTIONS.

§ 75. Irrelevant testimony held not rendered admissible by admission of other irrelevant testimony.—Hall v. Parry (Tex. Civ. App.) 561.

§ 76. An objection to the testimony of a witness, not made until after plaintiff had finished his opening argument to the jury, was too late.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gillespie & Carlton (Tex. Civ. App.) 628.

§ 85. An objection, urged as a whole to evidence admissible in part, is properly overruled.—Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. McSwain (Tex. Civ. App.) 874.

§ 103. A bill of exceptions to the exclusion of testimony should state what it was expected the witness would answer, and the objections to the testimony.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

§ 105. In an equity case the court may disregard hearsay evidence, though it was admitted without objection.—Jones v. Plummer (Mo. App.) 109.

V. ARGUMENTS AND CONDUCT OF COUNSEL.

§ 110. The conduct of counsel for the successful party in persistently pursuing a line of interrogation of witnesses which the court ruled to be wrong, held reversible error.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 352.

§ 119. In a servant's injury action, statements by plaintiff's counsel in argument that plaintiff would suffer mental anguish whenever he went into a public place, etc., because of his injuries, held error.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 120. Counsel should not state in his argument his knowledge of the facts, unless he has testified thereto as a witness.—Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

§ 133. The improper argument of counsel for plaintiff held not ground for reversal, in view of the action of the court.—Wellman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 31.

§ 133. Refusal to instruct the jury to disregard improper argument of plaintiff's counsel held ground for reversal.—Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 188.

§ 133. The remarks of plaintiff's attorney in his address to the jury held not prejudicial.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Browning (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

VI. TAKING CASE OR QUESTION FROM JURY.

(A) QUESTIONS OF LAW OR OF FACT IN GENERAL.

As to particular facts, issues, or subjects.

See Boundaries, § 40; Dedication, § 45; Negligence, § 136.

Contributory negligence of passenger, see Carriers, § 347.

Contributory negligence of person injured by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 282.

Contributory negligence of servant, see Master and Servant, § 239.

Negligence of master, see Master and Servant, § 286.

For injuries caused by operation of street railroad, see Street Railroads, § 117.
 For injuries from fire caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 484.
 For injuries to animals caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, § 446.
 For injuries to passenger, see Carriers, § 320.
 For injuries to person on city street, see Municipal Corporations, § 821.
 For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 284-289.
 For loss of or injury to shipment, see Carriers, § 136.
 On insurance policy, see Insurance, § 668.

§ 139. If there is any evidence warranting a finding for plaintiff, the question is for the jury, though one of plaintiff's witnesses may contradict his other witnesses.—Bruton's Adm'r v. Eddington-Griffiths Const. Co. (Ky.) 1001.

§ 139. Unless the evidence is of such a character that there is no room for ordinary minds to differ as to the conclusion to be drawn from it, the question is for the jury.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

§ 139. Where the evidence raised issues which the court was required to submit, a peremptory charge for defendant was properly refused.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 139. It is not error to direct a verdict for plaintiff, where defendant's evidence is so weak that it raises only a surmise or suspicion of the existence of facts sought to be established in support of his offset.—Dayton Lumber Co. v. Stockdale (Tex. Civ. App.) 805.

§ 139. It is only when a cause is susceptible of but one just opinion that the trial judge may take it from the jury.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bratcher (Tex. Civ. App.) 1091.

§ 140. Where the testimony of one witness is inconsistent with that of others, it is a question for the jury to decide which witness they will believe.—Bruton's Adm'r v. Eddington-Griffiths Const. Co. (Ky.) 1001.

§ 141. Where the only defense pleaded was res judicata which was not proved, the court should have directed a verdict for plaintiffs.—Kerr v. Blair (Tex. Civ. App.) 791.

§ 143. A summary instruction should not be given the jury as to an issue on which the evidence is conflicting.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.

(B) DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE.

§ 156. If there was no evidence to go to the jury, a demurrer thereto should have been sustained at the close of plaintiff's evidence, without considering defendant's evidence.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 156. The court, in ruling on a demurrer to plaintiff's evidence, must consider the evidence in a light most favorable to him.—Parsons v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 101.

§ 156. The court in passing on a demurrer to plaintiff's evidence must consider the proof in the light most favorable to the maintenance of the action pleaded.—Dahmer v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 496.

VII. INSTRUCTIONS TO JURY.

Instructions on issue of settlement, see Compromise and Settlement, § 25.

Questions presented for review as to rulings on instructions, see Appeal and Error, § 699.

Review of rulings on instructions as dependent on assignment of errors, see Appeal and Error, § 739.

review, see Appeal and Error, § 216.
 As to particular issues or subjects.
 See Adverse Possession, § 116; Negligence, §§ 138, 139.
 Assumption of risk by servant, see Master and Servant, § 295.
 Contributory negligence of passenger, see Carriers, § 348.
 Contributory negligence of servant injured, see Master and Servant, § 295.
 Negligence of master, see Master and Servant, § 293.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See Trespass to Try Title, § 45.
 For assault, see Assault and Battery, § 43.
 For ejection of passenger, see Carriers, § 384.
 For failure to deliver telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, § 74.
 For injuries caused by operation of railroad, see Railroads, §§ 282, 351, 401, 485.
 For injuries caused by operation of street railroad, see Street Railroads, § 118.
 For injuries to passenger, see Carriers, § 321.
 For injuries to person on city street, see Municipal Corporations, § 822.
 For injuries to servant, see Master and Servant, §§ 291-296.
 For loss of or injury to shipment, see Carriers, § 137.
 For malpractice, see Physicians and Surgeons, § 18.

(A) PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY IN GENERAL.

§ 191. In an action for injuries, an instruction held not objectionable as assuming that plaintiff had endured mental and physical suffering.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

§ 191. Where, in an action against alleged partners for work done, the court instructed that the relationship between defendants made them prima facie partners, but there was evidence tending to show that one of them was not a partner in fact, an instruction held erroneous, as directing a verdict for plaintiff on the ground that an actual partnership existed.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 191. In an action against a railroad for damages from an overflow alleged to have resulted from defendant's failure to maintain proper culverts, a charge read in connection with a prior charge held not on the weight of the evidence.—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Suter (Tex. Civ. App.) 215.

§ 191. In an action by a wife for conversion of corporate stock by a sale thereof, under execution against her husband, an instruction authorizing a recovery held erroneous for a failure to require a finding that the stock was the wife's separate property.—First Nat. Bank v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 221.

§ 191. A requested instruction, which was upon the weight of the evidence in that it assumed one of the principal facts in issue, was properly refused.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 191. In an action for injuries to a railroad fireman by his locomotive running into an open switch, an instruction held not objectionable as assuming defendant's negligence in not keeping the switch closed.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 191. In an action for injuries to a railroad employé, an instruction held not erroneous as assuming that defendant's servants were negligent in not properly closing a switch.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 191. In an action against connecting carriers for loss of an automobile, a charge assuming that the machine had been totally destroyed held error.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Patton (Tex. Civ. App.) 798.

§ 192. An instruction is not objectionable because it assumes an uncontroverted fact or one conclusively proved.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Downey (Ky.) 284.

§ 192. The court in its charge may assume a fact established by uncontradicted evidence.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

§ 194. An instruction in an action against a railroad company for the destruction of property by fire held not on the weight of the evidence.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 194. Where the undisputed evidence establishes a fact, it is not error for the court to so instruct.—Brunner Fire Co. v. Payne (Tex. Civ. App.) 602.

§ 194. A requested charge was properly refused which stated that certain facts would amount to contributory negligence when the question was for the jury.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612, 618.

§ 194. An instruction held erroneous as impressing the jury with the court's view of the importance of certain evidence.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

§ 194. An instruction held erroneous as on the weight of evidence.—Parlin & Orendorff Co. v. Glover (Tex. Civ. App.) 731.

§ 194. In an action against a railroad for damages caused by the overflow of plaintiff's land claimed to have resulted from impounding water by the negligent construction of the roadbed, an instruction held not upon the weight of the evidence as excluding any other issue than the impounding of the water by the construction of the roadbed.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Chilton (Tex. Civ. App.) 779.

§ 194. In a street car conductor's action for injuries caused by coming in contact with a coal car on a railroad switch near the street car track, a requested instruction held properly refused as upon the weight of the evidence.—Rapid Transit Ry. Co. v. Edwards (Tex. Civ. App.) 838.

§ 194. A charge held on the weight of evidence.—Webb v. J. L. Wiginton & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 856.

§ 194. Requested instructions as to contributory negligence in an action for injuries to an employe held properly refused.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 199. There is no error in the court declaring the legal effect of uncontroverted facts.—Sessinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.

§ 199. A charge in trespass to try title held properly refused, as submitting a question of law as well as of fact.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

§ 200. In a suit for the negligent handling of cattle, a charge informing the jury of the care that devolved on defendant, and that if they had not exercised that care they would be guilty of negligence, held not to invade the domain of the jury.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

§ 200. A trial judge should not be deprived of power to apply the law to the issues of a case and permitted only to give abstract dissertations on the law to be applied by the jury as they may see fit.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 847.

(B) NECESSITY AND SUBJECT-MATTER.

§ 203. Where the court submitted all of the issues which related to the disputed questions of fact and which were necessary to the determination of the case, it was not error to refuse to submit issues requested by the parties.—Colville v. Colville (Tex. Civ. App.) 870.

§ 203. Where, in an action for injuries to a servant, the evidence tends to show contributory negligence, it is error to refuse a special charge on that issue.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1117.

§ 208. On repetition of excluded testimony, the court should again caution the witness and admonish the jury not to consider the evidence.—United States Health & Accident Ins. Co. v. Jolly (Ky.) 281.

(C) FORM, REQUISITES, AND SUFFICIENCY.

§ 228. The use of the abbreviation "etc." in a charge on damages held not to be commendable.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 851.

§ 232. A charge on the form of verdict held not objectionable as misleading the jury to believe that they were not free, if they disagreed, to refuse to find for either party.—Southworth v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 861.

§ 234. Where a contract between appellant and the other defendants was admissible to show that he was not a partner, it was error to instruct, in an action against defendants for work claimed to have been done for them as partners, that if plaintiff did not know of the existence of the written contract when he made the goods, it should not be considered by the jury.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 236. An instruction upon the credibility of plaintiff's testimony held improper.—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.

§ 237. An instruction held erroneous, because imposing on plaintiff a greater burden than the establishment of his case by a preponderance of the evidence.—Green v. Kegans (Tex. Civ. App.) 173.

§ 240. The instruction was erroneous as argumentative.—Parlin & Orendorff Co. v. Glover (Tex. Civ. App.) 731.

§ 243. Where the court had properly instructed that defendant could not be held liable as a partner unless his conduct led plaintiff to believe he was such, a subsequent instruction, submitting the case upon the theory of an actual partnership, was erroneous and confusing.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 244. The same matter of defense should not be submitted by separate instructions as assumed risk and contributory negligence, thus giving unnecessary prominence to the group of facts.—Waggoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

§ 244. An instruction held erroneous as giving undue prominence to a particular fact, and as being argumentative and upon the weight of testimony.—Parlin & Orendorff Co. v. Glover (Tex. Civ. App.) 731.

(D) APPLICABILITY TO PLEADINGS AND EVIDENCE.

§ 251. In an action for the balance due under a contract for railroad construction work, held error to refuse to instruct that plaintiff could not recover for certain work under the contract.—A. G. Brown & Co. v. McKnight (Ark.) 409.

contract to pay him half commissions on a sale of real estate, defendant could not have the cause submitted on the theory of implied contract in quantum meruit.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

§ 252. The evidence in an action for injury to an employé held not to authorize instructions as to its not being his duty not to inspect machinery.—Williams Coal Co. v. Jones (Ky.) 342.

§ 252. In an action for a passenger's death from heart disease, claimed to have been caused by being thrown against a stove in a street car derailment, evidence held not to require an instruction as to whether such an injury could have been possibly anticipated from the derailment.—MacDonald v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 78.

§ 252. In an action for work performed under a contract, a contract between defendant and another who had abandoned it held to have no place in the issues to be submitted.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

§ 252. It is error to charge on an issue not presented by the pleadings or on which there is no evidence.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 253. In an action for injury to a servant operating a mangle, an instruction held erroneous for ignoring the master's evidence.—Wilcox v. Hebert (Ark.) 402.

§ 253. The evidence in an action for injury to an employé held not to authorize instructions as to its not being his duty not to inspect machinery.—Williams Coal Co. v. Jones (Ky.) 342.

§ 253. An instruction held erroneous, because ignoring an issue.—Green v. Kegans (Tex. Civ. App.) 173.

§ 253. An instruction in an action against a master for injuries held not defective.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

§ 253. An instruction in an action against a master for injuries held not defective.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 245.

(E) REQUESTS OR PRAYERS.

§ 256. Where an instruction given is correct as far as it goes, a party failing to request other instructions cannot complain that none were given.—Loughridge v. Ball (Ky.) 321.

§ 256. Defendant's failure to offer correct instructions, while not curing error in those given, is persuasive that they were not regarded as prejudicial.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

§ 256. Where a charge as to the burden of proving the contract alleged, though obscure, could not have misled the jury, if the other party desired a clear presentation of the question, he should have asked it.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

§ 256. A charge, though not as favorable to defendant as he would be entitled to have, held not for that reason alone erroneous.—Waggoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

§ 260. Refusal of instruction covered by one given held not error.—Johnson v. Daily (Mo. App.) 530.

§ 260. An instruction covered by the charge is properly refused.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.

§ 260. It is not error to refuse a requested charge substantially embraced in the charge given.

§ 260. Where the court's main charge sufficiently presented the law of the case, the court did not err in refusing defendant's special request.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Malloy (Tex. Civ. App.) 721.

§ 260. It is not error to refuse a requested charge embraced in the charge given.—Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hunt (Tex. Civ. App.) 827.

§ 260. In an action for damages for putting plaintiff's wife and daughter off a train at an improper place, a requested instruction held sufficiently covered by the one given.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.

§ 260. The refusal of a requested special charge fully covered by the main charge is not error.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ford (Tex. Civ. App.) 1137.

§ 260. It is error to refuse to give an instruction which is contained in the court's main charge.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 261. A charge which contained an improper statement of law was properly refused.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 261. A party submitting a request embracing several paragraphs which could not be given as a whole could not complain of the court's refusal to charge a single paragraph therefrom.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

§ 263. Where, in an action for injuries to a passenger, defendant requests several instructions on the issue of contributory negligence, it cannot complain that the court gave only one of them, or that the court should have chosen another one.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ford (Tex. Civ. App.) 1137.

§ 266. One asking a number of special charges based on any group of facts held not entitled to complain that only one, and that not the most favorable, is given.—Waggoner v. Sneed (Tex. Civ. App.) 547.

(F) OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS.

§ 278. The intent of an instruction as a whole to charge properly being apparent, held, that specific objections, pointing out failure to do so by proper words, is necessary.—Ames Shovel & Tool Co. v. Anderson (Ark.) 1013.

(G) CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

§ 295. Error in submitting the case upon the theory of an actual partnership, after properly instructing that defendant could only be held liable as a partner by estoppel, held not cured by the fact that the first instruction given was proper.—Bowen v. Epperson (Mo. App.) 528.

§ 295. The instructions must be considered as a whole with reference to their application to the pleadings and evidence in determining whether or not they are erroneous or misleading.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Redus (Tex. Civ. App.) 208.

§ 295. The instructions, when considered as a whole, held not objectionable as giving undue prominence to plaintiff's side of the cause.—Dallas Consol. Electric St. Ry. Co. v. Chase (Tex. Civ. App.) 783.

§ 295. In an action for injuries to plaintiffs' business, an instruction authorizing a recovery held not erroneous in view of other instructions given.—American Freehold Land Mortgage Co. of London v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 1108.

§ 296. In an action for injury to a railway passenger, any error in an instruction failing to define "carelessly" and "negligently" held cured by another instruction.—Leach v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 510.

§ 296. In an action against a carrier for injuries to a passenger alighting from a train at an intermediate point, the error in an instruction held not prejudicial in view of other instructions.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Redus (Tex. Civ. App.) 208.

§ 296. An error in an instruction as not being based on the evidence held cured by the giving of another instruction.—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ford (Tex. Civ. App.) 1137.

IX. VERDICT.

(B) SPECIAL INTERROGATORIES AND FINDINGS.

In action to cancel deed, see Cancellation of Instruments, § 52.

§ 352. A special issue held based on the pleadings and evidence.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

X. TRIAL BY COURT.

(B) FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW.

§ 395. Where a court made findings as to the terms of a contract based on the instrument as written, it was not bound to make other findings based on parol testimony with reference thereto.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

§ 395. Where the evidence is conflicting, the court is only required to find such facts as are deduced from such evidence.—Maury v. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

XI. WAIVER AND CORRECTION OF IRREGULARITIES AND ERRORS.

§ 412. Error in refusing to permit the immediate cross-examination of an impeaching witness held waived by defendant's failure to cross-examine the witness when an opportunity was later afforded.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

TROVER AND CONVERSION.

Conversion of logs, see Logs and Logging, § 35.

II. ACTIONS.

(A) RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

§ 13. Where the taking of timber is intentional and wrongful, the owner may elect to fix the time of conversion, and proceed, according to the circumstances, to recover.—Ripy v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

§ 13. A wrongful taking of property does not change the title thereto, and it may be recovered so long as its identity is perceptible, though its form has been changed.—Ripy v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

(B) JURISDICTION, PARTIES, PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS, AND PLEADING.

Jurisdiction of particular courts, amount or value in controversy, see Courts, § 121.

§ 32. Allegations of complaint for conversion of property on which plaintiff claimed a lien for wages held not to bring plaintiff within any one of the classes to whom the statute gives a lien for wages.—Lindale Brick Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 568.

(C) EVIDENCE.

§ 36. In trover for cattle, in view of the defense, plaintiff held entitled to show that defendant owed him a certain sum.—Boardman v. Woodward (Tex. Civ. App.) 550.

§ 40. A tortious taking of property is sufficient proof of a conversion.—Ripy v. Less (Tex. Civ. App.) 1084.

(D) DAMAGES.

Evidence of res gestae on issue of right to exemplary damages, see Evidence, § 121.

TRUST DEEDS.

See Chattel Mortgages; Mortgages.

TRUSTS.

Creation by will, see Wills, §§ 681, 693.

I. CREATION, EXISTENCE, AND VALIDITY.

(A) EXPRESS TRUSTS.

§ 1. "Express trust," defined.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§§ 17, 18. The declaration of an express trust in land must be in writing under Rev. St. 1899, § 3416 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1949); section 3417 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1950) applying only to trusts arising by implication of law.—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 506.

(B) RESULTING TRUSTS.

§ 62. "Implied trusts" defined.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 62. "Resulting trust" defined.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 81. Where one purchased and paid for land, but for convenience had it conveyed to his father, the latter held to hold the land in trust for his son.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 86. Where the vendee, after foreclosure of a vendor's lien, continued in possession, it would be presumed that the purchaser held the land for the vendee.—Howard v. Howard (Ky.) 367.

§ 88. The death of one in whose name title is taken to land purchased and paid for by another, does not prevent the latter from showing by parol the trust relationship.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 89. The death of the one in whose name title was taken to land purchased and paid for by another, makes it necessary for the court to use greater care in weighing and considering the evidence of the trust relation.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 89. In order to enforce a resulting trust in land claimed to have been purchased and paid for by plaintiff's husband and title taken in another's name plaintiff must prove her case by a high standard of proof.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 89. In a suit to quiet title and enforce a trust in land claimed to have been purchased and paid for by plaintiff's husband but deeded to his father, through whom defendants claim, evidence held to show beyond a reasonable doubt the purchase and conveyance of the land in the manner alleged.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

IV. MANAGEMENT AND DISPOSAL OF TRUST PROPERTY.

§ 198. One occupying a fiduciary relation to an estate held not entitled to purchase the prop-

§ 378. A bond of one appointed a testamentary trustee held binding as a common-law obligation notwithstanding the act of 1908 (Acts 1908, p. 125, c. 49).—Hite v. Hite's Ex'r (Ky.) 357.

UNDUE INFLUENCE.

Procuring making of will, see Wills, §§ 163-168.

UNITED STATES.

See Territories.

Courts, see Courts, § 489; Removal of Causes. Judicial notice of laws of, see Evidence, § 34.

UNLAWFUL DETAINER.

See Forcible Entry and Detainer.

USURY.

I. USURIOUS CONTRACTS AND TRANSACTIONS.

(A) NATURE AND VALIDITY.

§ 26. The redemption by the employer at bimonthly pay days of checks issued to employees for services at a reduction of 10 per cent. of their face value is a violation of the usury law. Ky. St. 1909, § 2219 (Russell's St. § 1815).—Kentucky Coal Mining Co. v. Mattingly (Ky.) 350.

(B) RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF PARTIES.

Reference in action to recover usury paid, see Reference, § 8.

§ 100. Where a contract stipulates for usurious interest, all interest payments in excess of 10 per cent. on final settlement will be applied to the principal.—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.

§ 102. One who pays usury, in the absence of statutory provision, may recover the excess over the legal rate and interest from the date of the payments.—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.

§ 110. A person who loaned the money, who received all the interest paid, and who owns the notes given for the loan, is the only necessary or proper party in an action at law to recover usurious interest together with the penalty imposed by the act of 1905 (Laws 1905, p. 172 [Ann. St. 1906, § 3708]).—Snyder v. Crutcher (Mo. App.) 489.

§ 117. Evidence held to warrant a finding that a loan of money stipulated for 18 per cent. interest payable in advance, and was therefore usurious.—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.

II. PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.

§ 138. In an action for double usurious interest payments under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3105, 3106, plaintiff held not entitled to recover interest until after judgment.—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.

§ 142. An action to recover usurious interest payments under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3106, held a civil action, and the judgment rendered a civil recovery.—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.

§ 146. Under Const. art. 16, § 11, and Rev. St. 1895, art. 3104, the words "usurious in-

Mortgage sale, see Mortgages, § 529.

VACATION.

Of particular acts instruments, or proceedings.

See Attachment, §§ 228, 232; Execution, § 171; Judgment, §§ 143, 170, 336-382.

Sale on execution, see Execution, §§ 238-256.

VALUE.

Limits of jurisdiction, see Appeal and Error, §§ 61, 64.

Of personal property, opinion evidence, see Evidence, §§ 472, 474.

Of property, opinion evidence, see Evidence, §§ 472, 474.

Opinion evidence, see Evidence, § 543.

VARIANCE.

Between pleading and proof in civil actions, see Pleading, §§ 376, 380.

Between pleading and proof in criminal prosecutions, see Indictment and Information, § 169.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

See Sales.

Parol or extrinsic evidence as to contract for sale of land, see Evidence, § 400.

Purchase of property held in trust, see Trusts, § 198.

Requirements of statutes of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, §§ 56-60.

Specific performance of contract, see Specific Performance.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF CONTRACT.

Parol evidence as to consideration, see Evidence, § 419.

Sufficiency on which to base trespass to try title against grantor, see Trespass to Try Title, § 10.

§ 3. "Option" defined.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 3. An instrument held a contract for the sale of real estate, and not a mere option.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 27. Where the purchase price has been paid, a bond for title to land operates to convey to the grantee an equitable title.—Wright v. Riley (Tex. Civ. App.) 1134.

§ 33. A vendee, seeking to cancel a contract for the sale of land for misrepresentations by the vendor as to its location, held not required to prove that the misrepresentations were with a fraudulent intent, though so alleged.—Stevenson v. Cauble (Tex. Civ. App.) 811.

§ 34. Where defendant claimed the right to cancel a land contract for misrepresentation as to the location of the land conveyed, it was no defense that before the contract had been made plaintiff offered to point out the corners of the land, but defendant declined to go.—Stevenson v. Cauble (Tex. Civ. App.) 811.

III. MODIFICATION OR RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

(A) BY AGREEMENT OF PARTIES.

§ 84. A contract for the sale and purchase and sale of real estate held to permit either par-

§ 180. A consideration for the rescission of a contract for the purchase of land held sufficient.—Mayes v. Miller (Tex. Civ. App.) 725.

§ 86. The vendor under a contract to convey held entitled to treat the contract as abandoned and sell to others on such terms as he saw fit.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 87. Where there is no offer of performance by either party of a contract to convey land and to pay for the same, neither party has a right of action for the amount deposited as liquidated damages for breach of the agreement, unless, before the date set for the performance of the contract, one party notifies the other that he will not perform.—Wead v. Helpert (Tex. Civ. App.) 1112.

(B) RESCISSION BY VENDOR.

§ 105. Where the sale of land was rescinded by agreement of the parties on the discovery that by mutual mistake the land described in the deed was not the land intended to be conveyed, the purchaser cannot afterward claim any interest in the land actually described.—McMillan v. Morgan (Ark.) 407.

(C) RESCISSION BY PURCHASER.

§ 127. While a purchaser may either rescind a contract for the purchase of land induced by false representations or affirm it, and sue for the difference between its value as represented and as it was, and his election to rescind would prevent him from recovering for such difference, it would not prevent him from recovering money expended in attempting to utilize the land before discovering the falsity of the representations.—Holland v. Western Bank & Trust Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 218.

IV. PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT.

(A) TITLE AND ESTATE OF VENDOR.

§ 129. One contracting to convey land held not bound to procure a probate order authorizing a sale, when such order was unnecessary.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 129. "Perfect title" defined.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

(D) PAYMENT OF PURCHASE MONEY.

§ 168. A purchaser taking an indefeasible title with the understanding that, if missing deeds were discovered, they would be placed on record cannot, after taking possession and holding the land as her own, refuse to pay the balance due because of a missing deed.—Travis v. Taylor (Ky.) 988.

§ 176. Where a sale is in gross, the price will not be abated for a shortage, unless so great as to show that the parties could not have contemplated such a difference in the acres actually conveyed and that mentioned in the deed.—Travis v. Taylor (Ky.) 988.

§ 176. Where a sale of two tracts of land was in gross, the price will not be abated because of a shortage of 12 acres in the 149 acres which the deed purported to convey.—Travis v. Taylor (Ky.) 988.

§ 184. Where the purchase-money note was paid by the purchaser, the legal title to the land became vested in him.—Gray v. Tribue (Tex. Civ. App.) 808.

Possession, § 63.

§ 191. Where a corporation was in possession of land under a contract of sale from plaintiff's husband, its possession was that of his heirs and devisees.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

(B) AS TO THIRD PERSONS IN GENERAL.

§ 218. Purchasers of property held to have right of action for injuries caused by water flowing on the property through ditches dug on a railroad right of way before the purchase.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Clayton (Tex. Civ. App.) 248.

(C) BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

§ 229. If a purchaser of land had knowledge of facts that would have put a prudent man upon inquiry, which is pursued with ordinary diligence would have led to actual notice of a prior conveyance to another, he would not be a bona fide purchaser for value without notice.—La Brie v. Cartwright (Tex. Civ. App.) 785.

§ 229. Where a fact is known sufficient to put a subsequent purchaser upon inquiry as to his grantor's title, he cannot excuse himself from pursuing the inquiry by taking the opinion of an attorney upon an abstract of the record title.—La Brie v. Cartwright (Tex. Civ. App.) 785.

§ 231. A registration of an instrument, either not acknowledged or defectively acknowledged, and so not entitled to registration, held not constructive notice.—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.

§ 232. Actual and visible possession of land by a person claiming to be the owner thereof is notice to all the world of his title, and the fact that he had not recorded his deed would not make one, who had purchased the land of the heirs of the former grantor without notice of the deed, an innocent purchaser.—Hughes Bros. v. Redus (Ark.) 414.

§ 233. In the absence of a statute providing for the recording of instruments creating liens on real estate, the rule of caveat emptor applies to intending purchasers.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

§ 233. Under Ky. St. 1909, §§ 3248, 3274, 3452 (Russell's St. §§ 1254, 1291, 1430), an unrecorded lien for a street improvement held to exist as against a subsequent purchaser.—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.

§ 235. Payment of consideration is essential to entitle one to protection as a bona fide purchaser.—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

§ 239. Under a title bond, vendee held to take title subject to vendor's lien, and one thereafter taking an assignment of the bond and a deed from the vendor, with notice of a conveyance of mineral rights by the original vendee to plaintiff, took subject to plaintiff's rights.—Asher v. Tennis Coal Co. (Ky.) 955.

§ 239. Where a link in the title of purchasers of land was a deed from an agent which was void because of the prior death of his principal; the purchaser could not claim protection as an innocent purchaser, since he was holding under a void title.—Wall v. Lubbock (Tex. Civ. App.) 886.

§ 242. Where a person purchased land from heirs which had been previously deeded to a third person by the ancestor, the burden was upon a person claiming title through the heirs to show that the purchaser from them was a purchaser for value without notice of the prior purchaser.—McAdoo v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 625.

§ 245. Whether a purchaser of land purchased without notice of a prior conveyance thereof to a third person held under the evidence to be for the jury.—La Brie v. Cartwright (Tex. Civ. App.) 785.

VI. REMEDIES OF VENDOR.

(A) LIEN AND RECOVERY OF LAND.

§ 284. In a suit to recover a portion of the consideration for the conveyance of land, and to foreclose a vendor's lien, a verdict construed, and held to apply to the whole land in controversy, and not to an undivided one-half interest therein.—Tipton v. Tipton (Tex. Civ. App.) 842.

§ 298. In order to constitute a forcible detainer under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2519, the relationship of landlord and tenant must exist.—Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.

§ 298. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2519, forcible detainer held not to lie to recover possession of premises from purchaser on failure to perform his contract.—Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.

VII. REMEDIES OF PURCHASER.

(B) ACTIONS FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Venue of action dependent on place of delivery of goods sold, see Venue, § 7.

§ 342. A vendee in case of the vendors' breach of a contract which does not specify the damages he is entitled to under such circumstances may either enforce specific performance, or recover such damages as he has sustained.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 342. Where a vendee on failure of title was entitled to a return of the earnest money under the contract, he was entitled to recover such sum, with interest, and any special damages incurred by being induced to make the contract.—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.

§ 343. In the sale of land in gross, there can be no recovery for an unsubstantial deficiency, in the absence of fraud or mistake, but in a sale by the acre a recovery may be had for any deficiency.—Anderson v. Dawson (Ky.) 953.

§ 343. A purchaser of real estate in gross held not entitled to recover for a deficiency in the quantity.—Anderson v. Dawson (Ky.) 953.

§ 350. One suing for breach of a contract to convey has the burden to show the breach.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 350. Evidence in an action for breach of a contract to convey held to show that a firm of brokers was trustee for both parties, and not an exclusive agent of the vendor.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 351. Measure of damages for breach of an agreement to convey stated.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 351. Effect of intent of parties to a contract to convey respecting the title to pass on the measure of damages for a breach stated.—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.

§ 352. Evidence, in an action by a purchaser to recover money deposited to secure perform-

Change of venue of suit in justice court, see Justices of the Peace, § 73.

Of action against corporation, see Corporations, § 503.

Of suit for injunction, see Injunction, § 111.

I. NATURE OR SUBJECT OF ACTION.

§ 7. Evidence held insufficient to prove contract for delivery of goods to purchaser in a certain county so as to entitle him to sue for breach of the contract in such county.—J. J. B. McCullar Lumber Co. v. Higginbotham Bros. & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 885.

II. DOMICILE OR RESIDENCE OF PARTIES.

§ 21. The evidence failing to show fraud committed in a certain county giving the county court therein jurisdiction over defendant under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 1194, subd. 7, defendant held entitled to assert his privilege against suit in such county.—J. J. B. McCullar Lumber Co. v. Higginbotham Bros. & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 885.

§ 22. An action on a note against the maker and the independent executrix of the deceased payee indorsing it may be brought in the county of the residence of the independent executrix, though the maker resides in another county.—Goodwin & McFarland v. Burton (Tex. Civ. App.) 587.

§ 22. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, subd. 4, an action against the trustee of a bankrupt and the bankrupt's agents may be brought in the county in which the trustee resides.—Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove (Tex. Civ. App.) 1146.

§ 26. Persons held improperly joined as parties defendant.—Brant v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 229.

III. CHANGE OF VENUE OR PLACE OF TRIAL.

§ 32. Under Gen. Laws 1907, p. 248, c. 133, held that, where an action for conversion was brought in the wrong county, the court upon sustaining defendants' pleas of privilege to the venue should order the case to be transferred to the proper court and county.—Brant v. Lane (Tex. Civ. App.) 229.

§ 71. The court may determine whether the petition states a cause of action before acting on plaintiff's motion for a change of venue.—Carpenter v. Kone (Tex. Civ. App.) 203.

VERDICT.

In civil actions, see Trial, § 352.

Judgment non obstante veredicto, see Judgment, § 199.

Necessity of conformity of judgment, see Judgment, § 256.

Operation and effect as curing defects in pleadings, see Pleading, § 433.

Review on appeal or writ of error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1001-1002.

VERIFICATION.

Of pleading, see Pleading, § 291.

VESTED REMAINDERS.

Creation, see Wills, § 629.

VILLAGES.

See Municipal Corporations.

VOTERS.

See Elections.

WAGES.

See Master and Servant, §§ 79, 82.

WAIVER.

See Estoppel.

Of rules of court, see Courts, § 82.

Of objections to particular acts, instruments, or proceedings.

See Appearance; Indictment and Information, § 196; Pleading, §§ 408, 409; Trial, § 412.

Jurisdiction of state court in action against trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, § 295.

Of rights or remedies.

Exemption of homestead, see Homestead, §§ 161-181.

Forfeiture of insurance, see Insurance, §§ 388, 755.

Forfeiture provisions in contract for sale of land as affecting right to specific performance, see Specific Performance, § 65.

New trial in civil actions, see New Trial, §§ 102-108.

New trial in criminal prosecutions, see Criminal Law, § 946.

WARDS.

See Guardian and Ward.

WARRANTY.

By insured, see Insurance, §§ 255-282, 330, 335.

WASTE.

Right to attorney's fees on dissolution of injunction, see Injunction, § 252.

WATER PIPES.

Prescriptive right to maintain in street, see Easements, § 8.

WATERS AND WATER COURSES.

See Drains.

Taking water rights under exercise of power of eminent domain, see Eminent Domain, § 84.

Water courses in cities, see Municipal Corporations, § 827.

II. NATURAL WATER COURSES.

(B) OBSTRUCTION AND DETENTION.

Liability of railroad company for injuries caused by overflow, see Railroads, § 114.

III. SUBTERRANEAN AND PERCOLATING WATERS.

§ 107. In an action for polluting the waters of a subterranean stream by emptying sewage therein, evidence of the prior pollution of the waters by surface waters held admissible, not to justify the act, but to show that plaintiff suffered no injury.—Kevil v. City of Princeton (Ky.) 363.

ages is the difference between the market value of the land immediately before and immediately after the injury.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Chilton (Tex. Civ. App.) 779.

VIII. ARTIFICIAL PONDS, RESERVOIRS, AND CHANNELS, DAMS, AND FLOWAGE.

Assumption by judge as to facts in instructions in action for injuries, see Trial, § 191.
Limitation of action for injuries, see Limitation of Actions, § 55.

Right of purchaser of land to sue for injuries resulting from wrongful acts prior to purchase, see Vendor and Purchaser, § 218.

§ 168. A railroad company held negligent in constructing ditches by the side of its track, resulting in overflow of adjoining land.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Clayton (Tex. Civ. App.) 248.

§ 178. The measure of damages to land by a railroad company held to be the difference between the market value just before and just after the injury.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Clayton (Tex. Civ. App.) 248.

IX. PUBLIC WATER SUPPLY.

(A) DOMESTIC AND MUNICIPAL PURPOSES.

Exemption of municipal waterworks system from taxation, see Taxation, §§ 217, 251.

Liability of municipal corporation, see Municipal Corporations, § 739.

§ 183. The transfer of property by a corporation owning a waterworks system to the city owning the capital stock of the corporation held valid.—Ryan v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 992.

§ 189. One maintaining under a revocable license pipes in the streets of a city to deliver water to customers cannot recover damages from the city for not allowing him to carry on the business.—Kevil v. City of Princeton (Ky.) 363.

§ 206. A contract between a city incorporated under Rev. St. 1895, art. 418, and a water company, held not for the benefit of the inhabitants of the city, so as to entitle them to sue for the breach thereof.—Greenville Water Co. v. Beckham (Tex. Civ. App.) 889.

§ 206. A water company held not liable on the ground of assumption of a public duty for the destruction of the property of an inhabitant of the city because of the failure to furnish water to extinguish a fire.—Greenville Water Co. v. Beckham (Tex. Civ. App.) 889.

§ 206. A water company supplying an individual with water from its waterworks held not liable as on a contract with a houseowner for the destruction of the owner's building by fire because of the failure to supply water to extinguish the fire.—Greenville Water Co. v. Beckham (Tex. Civ. App.) 889.

WAYS.

Private rights of way, see Easements.

Public ways, see Highways; Municipal Corporations, §§ 665-671, 755-822.

WEAPONS.

§ 17. Evidence held not sufficient to sustain a conviction of unlawfully carrying a pistol.—Gay v. State (Tex. Or. App.) 534.

WIDOWS.

Dower, see Dower.

Of mortgagor as necessary party in foreclosure suit, see Mortgages, § 427.

Right of widow of defendant in mortgage foreclosure proceedings to redeem, see Mortgages, § 594.

WILLS.

See Descent and Distribution; Executors and Administrators.

Construction and execution of trusts, see Trusts.

II. TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

§ 38. An insane delusion cannot be founded on facts, and if the idea entertained has any substantial basis it is not a delusion.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

§ 55. Evidence held not to show an insane delusion on the part of a testator.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

IV. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.(F) MISTAKE, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND FRAUD.

§ 163. The fact that testator's wife is the chief beneficiary raises no presumption of undue influence.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

§ 163. A will in favor of a mistress or one with whom testator's relations have been meretricious raises no presumptions of undue influence.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

§ 163. The burden is on one contesting a will to show undue influence.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

§ 164. Evidence of illicit relations between testator and his second wife before marriage is too remote to prove undue influence as to a will drawn about eight years thereafter.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

§ 166. Where evidence of illicit relations before marriage to show undue influence by a wife as to her husband's will is admitted, it must be followed by acts of undue influence after marriage.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

§ 166. Evidence in will contest held not to show undue influence.—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.

V. PROBATE, ESTABLISHMENT, AND ANNULMENT.

Pendency of contest as ground for abatement of action to determine title to land claimed under the will, see Abatement and Revival, § 14.

(A) PROBATE AND REVOCATION IN GENERAL.

Note executed in consideration of withdrawal of contents, see Bills and Notes, § 92.

(H) EVIDENCE.

§ 800. Requirements of Rev. St. 1895, art. 1904, respecting the probate of wills, held not subject to waiver.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

(I) HEARING OR TRIAL.

§ 821. Under a rule stated, proponent of one of two wills held entitled to open and close in the proceeding.—Green v. Hewett (Tex. Civ. App.) 170.

(J) JUDGMENT OR DECREE.

§ 854. Evidence held to authorize a finding that the court had probated a will and the codicil thereto.—McMahan v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

VI. CONSTRUCTION.(A) GENERAL RULES.

§ 439. A will should be construed to give effect to the intent of testator.—Gregory v. Welch (Ark.) 404.

§ 440. In construing a will, the intention of the testator is to be ascertained from the four corners of the will, both at common law and under Rev. St. 1899, § 4650 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2518).—Stewart v. Jones (Mo.) 1.

§ 449. In the construction of a will, there is a presumption against partial intestacy.—Gregory v. Welch (Ark.) 404.

§ 459. The general intention in a will to dispose of all testator's property held of weight in determining what was intended by a particular devise admitting of enlargement or limitation.—McMahan v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

§ 467. A will construed to vest an estate in remainder.—Gregory v. Welch (Ark.) 404.

§ 488. Parol evidence is admissible to show a latent ambiguity in a will, which may be removed by extrinsic evidence.—McMahan v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

§ 489. To determine the object of testator's bounty, with the subject of disposition or the quantity of interest given, the court may inquire into every material fact relating to the person interested and the property which is disposed of, and the circumstances of the testator and his family.—McMahan v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

§ 490. Parol evidence held admissible to show what lands testator had, to aid in the construction of his will disposing of his lands.—McMahan v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

(D) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.

§ 560. A will, when construed by the aid of parol evidence, held to dispose of testator's land in a certain section.—McMahan v. Hubbard (Mo.) 481.

(E) NATURE OF ESTATES AND INTERESTS CREATED.

§ 601. Will construed, and held to vest in testator's widow a fee, so that a subsequent clause attempting a further disposition if the wife died without disposing of the property was void.—Clos' Adm'r v. Clos (Ky.) 980.

§ 602. A will construed to create a defeasible fee defeasible by the devisee's death at any time without issue living.—Rice v. Rice (Ky.) 270.

§ 614. Where a testator gave a homestead to his wife for her life, and provided that it should be sold at her death, the provision was binding upon a purchaser of the wife's interest, and he could not procure a sale thereof during her lifetime.—Stewart v. Jones (Mo.) 1.

§ 616. Will construed, and held to vest in testator's widow a life estate, with a limited power of disposition.—Emert v. Blair (Tenn.) 685.

(F) VESTED OR CONTINGENT ESTATES AND INTERESTS.

§ 629. That construction of the language of a will is favored which will result in the early vesting of an estate created by the will.—Gregory v. Welch (Ark.) 404.

(G) CONDITIONS AND RESTRICTIONS.

§ 651. A provision in a will that, if any children of testator contested the will, they should forfeit any rights thereunder, held valid.—Massie v. Massie (Tex. Civ. App.) 219.

§ 662. Evidence held to show that a beneficiary complied with the conditions imposed by

(H) ESTATES IN TRUST AND POWERS.

§ 681. The court appointing a testamentary trustee held authorized to appoint an individual as against the objection that a trust company should have been appointed.—Hite v. Hite's Ex'r (Ky.) 357.

§ 693. A will construed, and held, that the widow had power after testator's children had all become of age, though she had not married, to partition some of the real estate among the children.—Fantz v. Steinmets (Ky.) 845.

§ 693. Will construed, and held, that testator's grandchildren could not complain of partition among testator's children when the latter all became of age.—Fantz v. Steinmets (Ky.) 345.

(I) ACTIONS TO CONSTRUE WILLS.

General demurrer to petition of intervention, see Pleading, § 205.

§ 707. Costs of a proper action for the construction of a will should be paid out of the estate.—Emert v. Blair (Tenn.) 685.

VII. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF DEVISEES AND LEGATEES.

(A) NATURE OF TITLE AND RIGHTS IN GENERAL

Note executed in consideration of withdrawal of contests, see Bills and Notes, § 92.

(I) RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF CREDITORS OF DEVISEES AND LEGATEES.

Life estate of bankrupt acquired by will after adjudication as not passing to trustee, see Bankruptcy, § 148.

WITNESSES.

See Depositions; Evidence.

Experts, see Evidence, §§ 471-570.

Opinions, see Evidence, §§ 471-570.

II. COMPETENCY.

(A) CAPACITY AND QUALIFICATIONS IN GENERAL

§ 37. A witness coming to a town in the spring is incompetent to testify as to the manner and extent of the lighting by a carrier of its depot platform at the town during the summer before.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Payne (Ky.) 352.

§ 48. The offenses of illegal retail liquor dealing and of receiving and concealing smuggled property in violation of the federal statutes are not felonies, within Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 768, § 3, relating to the competency of witnesses.—Cabrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

§ 52. At common law, a husband or wife is an incompetent witness in a case in which the other is a party.—State v. Vaughan (Mo. App.) 1186.

§ 61. Where violence has been committed on the person of the wife by the husband, she is competent to prove such violence.—State v. Vaughan (Mo. App.) 1186.

§ 61. In a prosecution of a husband for disturbance of the peace of his wife, the wife was not competent as a witness.—State v. Vaughan (Mo. App.) 1186.

PETENT.

§ 144. A contract with a person since deceased cannot be shown by the testimony of the other party thereto.—Richardson v. Isaacs (Ky.) 1003.

§ 146. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4652 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 2520), plaintiff's husband cannot testify to a contract with deceased, made by him as plaintiff's agent.—Jackson v. Smith (Mo. App.) 659.

§ 164. Evidence as to answers to statements in an application for a policy of insurance held inadmissible after death of agent taking the application.—United States Health & Accident Ins. Co. v. Jolly (Ky.) 281.

§ 176. The testimony of the surviving party to a contract is not rendered competent to testify as to the contract by the testimony of the heirs of the deceased party, where they did not testify as to the matter in question.—Richardson v. Isaacs (Ky.) 1003.

III. EXAMINATION.

(A) TAKING TESTIMONY IN GENERAL

§ 236. Where plaintiff in an action for injuries hesitated before answering questions on direct examination, his explanation that his mind was not as accurate as before he was hurt held not objectionable.—Houston & T. O. R. Co. v. Shapard (Tex. Civ. App.) 596.

§ 237. A question held to call for a fact.—Uecker v. Zuercher (Tex. Civ. App.) 149.

§ 240. Where it was apparent that a witness answered under a mistake as to the meaning of a question, it was not error to allow counsel for the party calling the witness to ascertain what he meant by the answer.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Neiser (Tex. Civ. App.) 166.

§ 240. An objection to a question in an action by an employe for injuries held properly sustained as being leading and calling for a conclusion.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

§ 257. A memorandum used to refresh a witness' recollection, but which contained matter which had no bearing on the issues, was inadmissible.—Little v. Rich (Tex. Civ. App.) 1077.

(B) CROSS-EXAMINATION AND RE-EXAMINATION.

§ 268. In an action for death of a person in a tunnel, where a witness for plaintiff testified as to the location of deceased when killed by a falling stone, defendant on cross-examination could go into new matter and prove any facts which he could testify to, including the result of his prior inspection of the roof.—Bruton's Adm'r v. Eddington-Griffiths Const. Co. (Ky.) 1001.

(C) PRIVILEGE OF WITNESS.

§ 301. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 770, held reversible error to require accused to answer whether he testified on his former trial for the same offense.—Hare v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 544.

§ 305. A witness cannot be compelled to testify at a coroner's inquest where he believes that his testimony will incriminate him, but he may waive his privilege.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

§ 309. In an action against a street railway company for the death of a person ejected from a car by the conductor for failure to pay fare,

IV. CREDIBILITY, IMPEACHMENT, CONTRADICTION, AND CORROBORATION.

Review of rulings as dependent on filing of bill of exceptions, see Criminal Law, § 1090.

(A) IN GENERAL.

§ 331½. In an action for wrongful attachment and execution, the report of a commercial agency held admissible to contradict plaintiff.—Rainey v. Kemp (Tex. Civ. App.) 630.

(B) CHARACTER AND CONDUCT OF WITNESS.

§ 355. Impeaching testimony held not subject to a motion to strike, as based on what the witness knew himself and not on general reputation.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

§ 357. A question, calling for a witness' knowledge concerning defendant's general reputation for truth and veracity, held proper.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

§ 357. A question asked of an impeaching witness held not objectionable as not limited to reputation concerning truth and veracity.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

§ 358. Defendant held entitled to cross-examine an impeaching witness concerning the basis of his opinion before he was permitted to testify that defendant's general reputation was bad.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

§ 358. A witness having testified against defendant's reputation, defendant was not entitled to ask on cross-examination what it was about which witness claimed defendant had lied concerning witness' son.—McMillion v. Cook (Tex. Civ. App.) 775.

(D) INCONSISTENT STATEMENTS BY WITNESS.

§ 383. In an action for injuries to plaintiff by his mule becoming frightened at a railroad pumping engine, evidence as to an alleged statement by defendant's employé in charge held with reference to a collateral matter as to which he could not be contradicted.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.

§ 390. An alleged confession of accused held not admissible to impeach him as a witness in his own behalf, where it was not shown to have been obtained as required by Acts 30th Leg. 1907, pp. 219, 220, c. 118.—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

§ 393. The testimony given by a witness at the coroner's inquest is admissible to impeach him, when he subsequently testifies in a court regarding the same matter.—Garrett v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 68.

§ 395. A witness, impeached by proof of statements contradictory to his sworn testimony, may be corroborated by proof that he had made statement similar to his testimony.—Carbrera v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 1054.

(E) CONTRADICTION AND CORROBORATION OF WITNESS.

§ 405. A witness cannot be contradicted as to a collateral matter testified to on cross-examination.—Abbott v. Herron (Ark.) 708.

WORDS AND PHRASES.

"Accident."—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

"Accident or surprise."—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.

"Accused."—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

"Action."—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.

"Aforethought."—Freeman v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 917.

"Alias summons."—Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Mansur (Mo. App.) 1193.

"Alienation."—Rissberger v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 319.

"Approaches."—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens (Tex. Civ. App.) 612.

"Arbitrary."—City of Louisville v. Gagen (Ky.) 947.

"Assault with intent to rob."—Walters v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 543.

"Blanks."—State v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 736.

"Bona fide purchaser."—La Brie v. Cartwright (Tex. Civ. App.) 785.

"Buggery."—Commonwealth v. Poindexter (Ky.) 943.

"Citizen."—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

"Civil bodies politic."—Klix v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish (Mo. App.) 1171.

"Compounding or adulterating."—Dr. O. Bouvier Specialty Co. v. James (Ky.) 381.

"County."—Marion County v. Rives & McChord (Ky.) 309.

"Cut out, cancel, obliterate, or deface."—Bennett v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 332.

"Dedication."—McKinney v. Duncan (Tenn.) 683.

"Defendant."—Brown v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 139.

"Delay."—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

"Die without children."—Rice v. Rice (Ky.) 270.

"Discrimination."—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618.

"Effects."—Mauzy v. A. & R. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.

"Election."—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.

"Emancipation."—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

"Estate."—Patton v. Walker's Trustees (Ky.) 312.

"Establish."—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1150.

"Experience."—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

"Express emancipation."—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.

"Express trust."—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.

"Faith."—Daniel v. Modern Woodmen of America (Tex. Civ. App.) 211.

"Fellow servant."—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.

"Final judgment."—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

"First bill."—Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Cannon & Byers Millinery Co. (Ky.) 1004.

"Forcible detainer."—Johnson v. Gordon (Ky.) 372; Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.

"Forgery."—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.

"Franchise."—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.

"Free passes."—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley (Ky.) 982.

- "From time to time."—Griffin v. Tucker (Tex.) 635.
- "Frontage."—City of Chillicothe ex rel. Meek v. Henry (Mo. App.) 488.
- "Graft."—Dixon v. Chappell (Ky.) 929.
- "Guest."—De Lapp v. Van Closter (Mo. App.) 120.
- "Hawker."—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.
- "Highest."—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.
- "Holder in due course."—Chouteau Trust & Banking Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 279.
- "Horse stealing."—Walklate v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 314.
- "Humanitarian doctrine."—Hall v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 56.
- "Implied emancipation."—Rounds Bros. v. McDaniel (Ky.) 956.
- "Implied trust."—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.
- "Information."—State v. Simpson (Mo. App.) 1187.
- "Inquiring into and reporting on credit."—United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 1000.
- "Insane delusion."—Fulton v. Freeland (Mo.) 12.
- "Interest."—Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Faulkner (Tex. Civ. App.) 747.
- "Interlocutory judgment."—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.
- "Involuntary manslaughter."—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.
- "Laches."—Hughes v. Wallace (Ky.) 324.
- "Let."—Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.
- "Macadamizing."—Jones v. Plummer (Mo. App.) 109.
- "Matter in issue."—Kerr v. Blair (Tex. Civ. App.) 791.
- "Memorandum."—Campbell v. Preece (Ky.) 378.
- "Mental distress."—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 1119.
- "Mixed train."—Leach v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 510.
- "Murder."—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.
- "Near."—Kilgore v. Jackson (Tex. Civ. App.) 819.
- "Necessarily."—Reickert v. Hammond Packing Co. (Mo. App.) 525.
- "On hand."—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 1097.
- "Operating a car."—Texarkana & Ft. S. Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Tex.) 127.
- "Operating cars."—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 1117.
- "Option."—Hamburger & Dreyling v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 770.
- "Peddler."—City of Conway v. Waddell (Ark.) 398.
- "Perfect title."—Dobson v. Zimmerman (Tex. Civ. App.) 236.
- "Permitting."—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Geiger (Tex. Civ. App.) 179.
- "Principal office."—Lohofener v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co. (Mo. App.) 515.
- "Probable cause."—Bosch v. Miller (Mo. App.) 508.
- "Public highway."—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Smith (Ky.) 933.
- "Public place."—Morrison v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 541.
- "Railroad."—Keystone Mills Co. v. Chambers (Tex. Civ. App.) 178.
- "Rape."—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.
- "Ravish."—Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 1022.
- "Realty."—Childers v. Wm. H. Coleman Co. (Tenn.) 1018.
- "Reasonable compensation."—Maury v. A. & R. McDonald (Tex. Civ. App.) 812.
- "Representatives."—Hiller v. Nelson (Ky.) 292.
- "Residence."—Savage v. Umphries (Tex. Civ. App.) 893.
- "Resulting trust."—Stevens v. Fitzpatrick (Mo.) 51.
- "Sale."—Priest v. Hodges (Ark.) 253; Rissberger v. City of Louisville (Ky.) 319.
- "Shall have been commenced."—Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. (Mo.) 40.
- "Single-stamp spirits."—Dr. C. Bouvier Specialty Co. v. James (Ky.) 381.
- "Sodomy."—Commonwealth v. Poindexter (Ky.) 943.
- "Special order after final judgment."—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.
- "Subject of insurance."—Mecca Fire Ins. Co. of Waco v. Wilderspin (Tex. Civ. App.) 1131.
- "Suit."—Whitfield v. Burrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 153.
- "Summons."—Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Mansur (Mo. App.) 1193.
- "Surprise."—State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes (Mo. App.) 1168.
- "Tenancy from month to month."—Sessinghaus v. Knoche (Mo. App.) 104.
- "Tenant."—Francis v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 881.
- "Unconscionable contract."—Ball v. Reyburn (Mo. App.) 524.
- "Unjust discrimination."—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 618; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Shawnee Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 776.
- "Unlawful interest."—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.
- "Usurious interest."—Baum v. Daniels (Tex. Civ. App.) 754.
- "Utmost."—Quinn v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 46.
- "Utmost care."—Weatherford, M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 799.
- "Utter."—Holloway v. State (Ark.) 256.
- "Voluntary manslaughter."—Commonwealth v. Mosser (Ky.) 915.
- "Writ of error coram nobis."—State ex rel. Potter v. Riley (Mo.) 647.

WORK AND LABOR.

Liens for work and materials, see Mechanics' Liens.

§ 4. If work was done for defendant with its knowledge, and it received the benefits thereof, it would be liable for the value of the work.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

§ 22. Allegations that work was done at the solicitation of defendant's agent and with its knowledge and consent, were sufficient to sustain a recovery against it on a quantum meruit.—Suderman-Dolson Co. v. Hope (Tex. Civ. App.) 216.

WRITING.

Necessity in order to bind trustees of municipality, see Municipal Corporations, § 243.

Necessity in order to validate agreement of fiscal court, see Counties, § 121.

WRIT OF POSSESSION.

As interrupting adverse possession, see Adverse Possession, § 51.

WRITS.

See Process.

Particular writs.

See Execution; Habeas Corpus; Injunction; Mandamus; Sequestration.

Writ of error, see Appeal and Error.

WRONGFUL ATTACHMENT.

See Attachment, §§ 375, 377.

WRONGFUL EXECUTION.

See Execution, §§ 465, 472.

WRONGFUL INJUNCTION.

See Injunction, § 261.

WRONGS.

See Torts.

X-RAY.

Judicial notice of correctness of X-ray photographs, see Evidence, § 9.

YEAR.

Agreements not to be performed within one year, see Frauds, Statute of, §§ 44, 50.
Estates for years, see Landlord and Tenant.

Topics, divisions, & section (§) NUMBERS in this Index, & Dec. & Amer. Digs. & Reporter Indexes agree

WEST PUBLISHING CO., PRINTERS, ST. PAUL, MINN.

